When such undertaking has been so delivered, no such bond or deposit shall be required from the publisher or printer of such newspaper during the said year.

6. Whenever it appears to the Local Government that any newspaper printed or published in the territories under its administration, contains any words, signs, or visible representations of the nature described in section three, clause (a), or that any such newspaper has been used or attempted to be used for any purpose described in the same section, clause (b), such Local Government may cause a notice in the form in the schedule hereto annexed, or to the like effect, to be published in the local official Gazette.

7. A true copy of such notice shall be fixed on some conspicuous part of the premises described in the declaration made in respect of the newspaper under the said Act No. XXV of 1867, section five, and the copy so fixed shall be deemed to have been duly served on the printer and publisher of such paper.

8. If after the publication of such notice and the service thereof, the newspaper in respect of which it has been issued contains any words, signs, or visible representations of the nature described in section three, clause (a), or is used, or attempted to be used, for any purpose described in the same section, clause (b), all printing presses, engines, machinery, types, lithographic stones, paper, and other implements, utensils, plant, and materials used or employed, or intended to be used or employed, in or for the purpose of printing or publishing such newspaper, or found in or about any premises where such newspaper is printed or published, and all copies of such newspaper wherever found, and any money or securities which the printer or publisher of such newspaper may have deposited under the provisions of section three,

shall be liable to be forfeited to Her Majesty.

Provided that the publisher of any newspaper may, on the publication of a notice in respect thereof under section six, and before anything has become liable to forfeiture under this section in respect of such newspaper, deliver to the Magistrate of the District or to the Commissioner of Police in a Presidency town, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such newspaper is published, an undertaking in writing of the nature specified in section five, and, if such Magistrate or Commissioner accepts such undertaking, nothing shall become liable to forfeiture under this section between the date on which such undertaking is so accepted and the end of the period for which it is given.

9. Whenever it appears to the Local Government that any money or security deposited under this Act in respect of any newspaper is liable to be forfeited under section eight, such Local Government may, by a notification in the local official Gazette, declare such money or security to be forfeited;

And whenever it appears to the Local Government that any implements, utensils, plant or materials used or employed or intended to be used or employed in or for the purpose of printing or publishing any newspaper, or which is or are in or about any premises where such newspaper is printed or published, or any copies of any newspaper, is or are liable to be forfeited under that section, the Local Government may declare such implements, utensils, plant, materials or copies to be forfeited and may by warrant issued by its authority under the hand of any Magistrate, empower any person to seize and take away such implements, utensils, plant, materials, and copies wherever found, and to enter upon any premises

(a) where the newspaper specified in such warrant is printed or published, or

(b) where any such implements, utensils, plant, or materials may be or may be reasonably suspected to be, or

(c) where any copy of such newspaper is sold, distributed, published, or publicly exhibited, or reasonably suspected to be sold, distributed, published, or publicly exhibited, or kept for sale, distribution, publication, or public exhibition, or reasonably suspected to be so kept,

and search for such implements, utensils, plant, materials, and copies.

Every warrant issued under this section, so far as relates to a search, shall be executed in manner provided for the execution of search-warrants under the law relating to criminal procedure for the time being in force.

10. When any book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet, or other document

Books, &c., printed in British India and containing matter, or used for purpose described in section 3.

printed wholly or partially in any oriental language in British India contains any words, signs, or visible representations which are of the nature described in section three, clause (a),

or when any such book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet, or other document has been used or attempted to be used for any purpose described in the same section, clause (b), all printing presses, engines, machinery, types, lithographic stones, paper, and other implements, utensils, plant, and materials used or employed in or for the purpose of printing or publishing such book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet, or other document, or found in or about any premises where the same is printed or published, and all copies of such book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet or other document, shall be liable to be forfeited to Her Majesty.

Whenever it appears to the Local Government that anything is liable to be forfeited under this section, the Local Government may declare such thing to be forfeited and may direct any Magistrate to issue a warrant in respect of the same, and thereupon such thing may be searched for, seized, and taken away in manner provided by section nine.

The Local Government may, upon good cause shown, cancel any forfeiture under this section.

11. When any newspaper printed elsewhere

Copies of newspaper printed elsewhere, and brought into British India, liable to forfeiture in certain cases.

than in British India contains any words, signs, or visible representations of the nature described in section three, clause (a), or is used or attempted to be used for any purpose described in the same section, clause (b), all copies of such newspaper, brought into British India, shall be liable to be forfeited to Her Majesty.

12. Whenever it appears to the Local Government

Power to seize copies of newspaper forfeited under section 11.

ment that any copies of any newspaper in any of the territories under its administration are liable to be forfeited under section eleven, such Local Government may declare all copies of such newspaper wherever found to be forfeited and may by warrant issued by its authority under the hand of any Magistrate, empower any person to seize and take away all copies of such newspaper wherever found, and to enter upon any premises where any copy of such newspaper is sold, distributed, published, or publicly exhibited, or reasonably suspected to be sold, distributed, published, or publicly exhibited, or kept for sale, distribution, publication, or public exhibition, or reasonably suspected to be so kept ;

and search for all copies of such newspaper.

Every warrant issued under this section shall, so far as relates to a search, be executed in manner provided for the execution of search-warrants under the law relating to criminal procedure for the time being in force.

13. Any person feeling aggrieved by the issue

Whoever, in contravention of any direction under this section, brings any such newspaper, book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet, or other document into British India, or circulates, distributes, publishes, exhibits, or sells the same, or keeps the same for circulation, distribution, exhibition, or sale, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both ;

and all copies of such newspaper, book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet, or other document found in British India shall be forfeited to Her Majesty.

Whenever it appears to any Magistrate of a district or to any Commissioner of Police in a Presidency town that anything within the local limits of his jurisdiction is forfeited under this section, he may issue a warrant to search for and seize the same, and such warrant shall be executed in manner provided for the execution of search-warrants under the law relating to criminal procedure for the time being in force.

15. When any declaration has been made under section nine, section ten, or section twelve, in respect of any newspaper, book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet, or other document, or any notification has been issued in respect of the same under section fourteen, any officer of the Postal Department empowered in this behalf by the Governor General in Council, by name or in virtue of his office, may search or cause search to be made for any copies of the same in the custody of that Department, and shall deliver all such copies found to such officer as the Governor General in Council may appoint in this behalf by name or in virtue of his office.

Power of postal authorities to seize newspapers, books, &c.

16. Every notification and declaration of forfeiture purporting to be issued or made under this Act shall, as against all persons, be conclusive evidence that the forfeiture therein referred to has taken place ; and no proceeding purporting to be taken under this Act, or in execution of a warrant issued under this Act, shall be called in question by any Court of civil or criminal jurisdiction; and no Civil or Criminal proceeding shall be instituted against any person for anything purporting to be done under this Act or in execution of any such warrant, or for the recovery of any property purporting to be seized under this Act.

17. Any publisher or printer of a newspaper required to execute a bond or make a deposit under section three or section four, and publishing or printing such newspaper without having complied with such requisition, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

18. When any publisher of a newspaper has given an undertaking under section five or section eight, and during the period for which such undertaking is given, any words, signs, or visible representations which have not been submitted to the officer appointed under section five, or which on being so submitted have been objected to by him, are printed or published in such newspaper, such publisher and the printer of such newspaper, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

19. Any portion of this Act which has been extended to any part of British India under section one shall cease to be in force in such part whenever the Governor General in Council, by notification in the Gazette of India, so directs, but may be again extended to such part by a like notification.

20. Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to prevent any person from being prosecuted under any other law for any act or omission which constitutes an offence against this Act.

SCHEDULE.

FORM OF NOTICE UNDER SECTION 6.

WHEREAS a certain newspaper (state name of newspaper) contains words, signs, or visible representations (as the case may be) of the nature described in section 3, clause (a), of Act No. IX of 1878 [or is used for a purpose mentioned in section 3 of Act No. IX of 1878, clauses (b), or Whereas an attempt has been made to use a certain newspaper (state name of newspaper) for a purpose, &c.]

This is to give notice to all whom it may concern, and to give all such persons warning, according to the provisions of section 6 of the said Act No. IX of 1878.

Secretary to { the Government of the Chief Commissioner of

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

1. The main object of this Bill is to place newspapers which are published in the vernacular languages of India under better control, and to furnish the Government with more effective means than are provided by the existing law, of punishing and repressing seditious writings which are calculated to produce disaffection towards the Government in the minds of the ignorant and unenlightened masses. Another object is to prevent unscrupulous native editors using their papers as a means of intimidation or extortion.

2. As regards the latter of these objects, it is enough to state that the Government is informed on reliable authority that certain vernacular papers have from time to time been used as a means of intimidating, and extorting money from, our feudatories and native employes. As regards the former and more important object, a fuller statement of the reasons which have led to the introduction of this Bill seems desirable.

3. That a section of the vernacular Press has of late years assumed an attitude of fixed hostility to the Government; that it does not confine itself to criticising particular measures or the acts of individual officers on their merits, but attacks the very existence of British rule in India; and that the evil has been steadily growing and has now attained a magnitude which calls for the application of some strong means of repression, are facts patent to all who read the native papers.

4. The necessity for immediate action has been pressed on the Government of India from many quarters; and those most competent to form an opinion on such a point have advised that the existing law does not furnish a sufficient remedy, and that fresh legislation is accordingly necessary.

5. The only question has been as to the form which such legislation should assume, or, to speak more precisely, whether the object in view could be attained by any mere amendment of the general criminal law, or whether some measure of a special nature is required.

The Government of India have come to the conclusion that a special measure is necessary, and they have been led to this conclusion chiefly by two considerations:

6. In the first place, the object in view is simply to repress an evil which is altogether of a special and limited nature, and for the existence of which a small and strictly defined class of persons is answerable. It is not in any way necessary for that object to expand the general law relating to State offences, or to render that law more stringent. To do so would be to inflict an unmerited hardship on a large number of Her Majesty's subjects.

7. Secondly (and this seems to put the necessity of a special law, as distinguished from any mere amendment of the general law, beyond a doubt), the ordinary criminal law confines itself to imposing penalties for offences already committed, whereas the particular offence to be dealt with here is of such a nature that it is not enough that it should be punished when committed. Its commission must be prevented, and this can be done only under a special procedure devised expressly for that purpose.

8. The Bill now introduced is restricted in its operation to publications in oriental languages. Its chief provisions will take effect only in those parts of British India to which they may be specially extended by the Governor General in Council, and will cease to have effect in those parts whenever the Governor General in Council so directs.

9. The system of check it establishes in the case of newspapers in oriental languages published in British India is as follows :

First.—The Magistrate may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, require the printer or publisher of any such newspaper to enter into a bond binding himself not to print or publish in such newspaper anything likely to excite feelings of disaffection to the Government or antipathy between persons of different races, castes, religions or sects, and not to use such paper for purposes of extortion. The Magistrate may further require the amount of this bond to be deposited in money or securities.

Secondly.—If any newspaper (whether a bond has been taken in respect of it or not) at any time contains any matter of the description just mentioned, or is used for purposes of extortion, the Local Government may warn such newspaper by a notification in the Gazette, and if, in spite of such warning, the offence is repeated, the Local Government may then issue its warrant to seize the plant, &c., of such newspaper, and when any deposit has been made may declare such deposit forfeited.

Thirdly.—As the provisions regarding the deposit of security and the forfeiture of the deposit would, perhaps, be found to press unduly on some of the less wealthy newspaper proprietors, clauses have been inserted enabling the publisher of a newspaper to take his paper out of the operation of this portion of the Act for such time as he pleases by undertaking to submit his proofs to an officer appointed by the Government before publication, and to publish nothing which such officer objects to.

Any publisher may, if he chooses, do this at the time when he is called upon to deposit security ; and if he does so, no security can be demanded from him.

Again, if he does not choose to avail himself of this provision at that stage, he may subsequently, in the event of a warning being issued against him, offer such an undertaking, and if the Magistrate accepts it, the proceedings are at an end.

10. As regards books, pamphlets, &c., printed in British India, containing matter of the description above referred to or used for purposes of extortion, the Bill gives the Local Government a power to seize them and the presses at which they are printed.

11. Newspapers and books published out of British India but circulated in British India remain. And in regard to them the Bill provides—first, that if they contain matter of the nature already referred to or are used for purposes of extortion, the Local Government may seize them ; and secondly, that the Governor General in Council may prohibit their importation altogether.

12. The only other points calling for special notice are that an appeal is given to the Governor General in Council against anything done by a Local Government or any inferior authority ; that declarations of forfeitures and other proceedings under the Act are made final and conclusive, subject only to such appeal ; and that penalties are provided for printing or publishing a newspaper without executing a bond or making a deposit after such bond or deposit has been required, and for breach of an undertaking to submit proofs to a Government officer.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 14th March 1878, and is, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons, hereby promulgated for general information:—

ACT No. IX OF 1878.

An Act for the better Control of Publications in Oriental languages.

WHEREAS certain publications in oriental languages printed or circulated in British India have of late contained matter likely to excite disaffection to the Government established by law in British India, or antipathy between persons of different races, castes, religions, or sects in British India, or have been used as means of intimidation or extortion:

And whereas such publications are read by and disseminated amongst large numbers of ignorant and unintelligent persons, and are thus likely to have an influence which they otherwise would not possess; and whereas it is accordingly necessary for the maintenance of the public tranquillity and for the security of Her Majesty's subjects and others to confer on the executive Government power to control the printing and circulation of such publications: It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. This section and sections eleven to sixteen both inclusive apply to the whole of British India; the other sections of this Act apply only to those parts of British India to which they may from time to time be extended by the Governor General in Council by a notification in the Gazette of India.

Interpretation clause.

2. In this Act—
'Newspaper' means any periodical work containing public news, or comments on public news;
"Newspaper."
printed wholly or partially in any oriental language, and includes two or more copies of a newspaper bearing the same name, whether published on the same day or on different days, and also includes any series of newspapers, whether printed on one day or different days, or with one name or with different names; and

'Print,' 'printed' and 'printer' apply not only to printing, but also to lithography, engraving and photography.
"Print," &c.

3. Any Magistrate of a district or Commissioner of Police in a Presidency town, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any newspaper is printed or published, may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government and subject to the provisions of section five, call upon the printer and publisher of such newspaper to enter into a joint and several bond, or when the printer and publisher of such newspaper are the same person, call upon such person to enter into a bond, binding themselves or himself, as the case may be, in such sum as the Local Government thinks fit, not to—

(a) print or publish in such newspaper any words, signs, or visible representations, likely to excite disaffection to the Government established by law in British India or antipathy between any persons of different races, castes, religions, or sects in British India; or

(b) use or attempt to use such newspaper

for the purpose of putting any person in fear or causing annoyance to him and thereby inducing him to deliver to any person any property or valuable security, or anything signed or sealed which may be converted into a valuable security, or to give any gratification to any person, or for the purpose of holding out any threat of injury to a public servant, or to any person in whom they or he believe or believes that public servant to be interested, and thereby inducing that public servant to do any act, or to forbear or delay to do any act, connected with the exercise of his public functions.

EXPLANATION.—"Valuable security," "gratification" and "public servant" are used in this section in the senses in which they are respectively used in the Indian Penal Code.

4. When any bond is executed under section three, the said Magistrate or Commissioner may further require the obligor or obligors of the same to deposit the amount thereof in money or the equivalent thereof in securities of the Government of India, and the money or securities so deposited shall, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained, remain so deposited until fifteen days after the person or persons depositing the same has or have made and subscribed a declaration under Act No. XXV of 1867, section eight.

When such person or persons has or have subscribed such a declaration, and fifteen days have elapsed from the date of subscribing the same, he or they may apply to the said Magistrate or Commissioner for the restoration of the said money or securities, and thereupon such money or securities shall, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained, be restored to such person or persons.

5. When any publisher or printer is called upon by a Magistrate or Commissioner of Police to execute a bond under this Act in respect of any newspaper, the publisher of such newspaper may deliver to such Magistrate or Commissioner an undertaking in writing to the effect that no words, signs, or visible representations shall, during the year next following the date of such undertaking, be printed or published in such newspaper which have not previously been submitted to such officer as the Local Government may appoint in this behalf, by name or in virtue of his office, or which on being so submitted have been objected to by such officer.

When such undertaking has been so delivered, no such bond or deposit shall be required from the publisher or printer of such newspaper during the said year.

6. Whenever it appears to the Local Government that any newspaper printed or published in the territories under its administration, contains any words, signs, or visible representations of the nature described in section three, clause (a), or that any such newspaper has been used or attempted to be used for any purpose described in the same section, clause (b), such Local Government may cause a notice in the form in the schedule hereto annexed, or to the like effect, to be published in the local official Gazette.

7. A true copy of such notice shall be fixed on some conspicuous part of the premises described in the declaration made in respect of the newspaper under the said Act No. XXV of 1867, section five, and the copy so fixed shall be deemed to have been duly served on the printer and publisher of such paper.

8. If after the publication of such notice and the service thereof, the newspaper in respect of which it has been issued contains any words, signs, or visible representations of the nature described in section three, clause (a), or is used, or attempted to be used, for any purpose described in the same section, clause (b), all printing presses, engines, machinery, types, lithographic stones, paper, and other implements, utensils, plant, and materials used or employed, or intended to be used or employed, in or for the purpose of printing or publishing such newspaper, or found in or about any premises where such newspaper is printed or published, and

any money or securities which the printer or publisher of such newspaper may have deposited under the provisions of section three, shall be liable to be forfeited to Her Majesty.

Provided, that the publisher of any newspaper may, on the publication of a notice in respect thereof under section six, and before anything has become liable to forfeiture under this section in respect of such newspaper, deliver to the Magistrate of the District or to the Commissioner of Police in a Presidency town, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such newspaper is published, an undertaking in writing of the nature specified in section five, and, if such Magistrate or Commissioner accepts such undertaking, nothing shall become liable to forfeiture under this section between the date on which such undertaking is so accepted and the end of the period for which it is given.

9. Whenever it appears to the Local Government that any money or security deposited under this Act in respect of any newspaper is liable to be forfeited under section eight, such Local Government may, by a notification in the local official Gazette, declare such money or security to be forfeited;

And whenever it appears to the Local Government that any implements, utensils, plant or materials used or employed or intended to be used or employed in or for the purpose of printing or publishing any newspaper, or which is or are in or about any premises where such newspaper is printed or published, or any copies of any newspaper, is or are liable to be forfeited under that section;

The Local Government may declare such implements, utensils, plant, materials or copies to be forfeited and may by warrant issued by its authority under the hand of any Magistrate, empower any person to seize and take away such implements, utensils, plant, materials, and copies wherever found, and to enter upon any premises

(a) where the newspaper specified in such warrant is printed or published, or

(b) where any such implements, utensils, plant, or materials may be or may be reasonably suspected to be, or

(c) where any copy of such newspaper is sold, distributed, published, or publicly exhibited, or reasonably suspected to be sold, distributed, published, or publicly exhibited, or kept for sale, distribution, publication, or public exhibition, or reasonably suspected to be so kept,

and search for such implements, utensils, plant, materials, and copies.

Liability of plant, copies of paper, and deposit to forfeiture.

Every warrant issued under this section, so far as relates to a search, shall be executed in manner provided for the execution of search-warrants under the law relating to criminal procedure for the time being in force.

10. When any book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet, or other document

Books, &c., printed in British India and containing matter, or used for purpose described in section 8.

printed wholly or partially in any oriental language in British India contains any words, signs, or visible representations which are of the nature described in section three, clause (a),

or when any such book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet, or other document has been used or attempted to be used for any purpose described in the same section, clause (b), all printing presses, engines, machinery, types, lithographic stones, paper, and other implements, utensils, plant, and materials used or employed in or for the purpose of printing or publishing such book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet, or other document, or found in or about any premises where the same is printed or published, and all copies of such book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet or other document, shall be liable to be forfeited to Her Majesty.

Whenever it appears to the Local Government that anything is liable to be forfeited under this section, the Local Government may declare such thing to be forfeited and may direct any Magistrate to issue a warrant in respect of the same, and thereupon such thing may be searched for, seized, and taken away in manner provided by section nine.

The Local Government may, upon good cause shown, cancel any forfeiture under this section.

11. When any newspaper printed elsewhere

Copies of newspaper printed elsewhere, and brought into British India, liable to forfeiture in certain cases.

than in British India contains any words, signs, or visible representations of the nature described in section three, clause (a), or is used or attempted to be used for any purpose described in the same section, clause (b), all copies of such newspaper, brought into British India, shall be liable to be forfeited to Her Majesty.

12. Whenever it appears to the Local Government that any copies of any newspaper in any of the territories under its administration are liable to be forfeited under section eleven, such Local Government may declare all copies of such newspaper wherever found to be forfeited and may by warrant issued by its authority under the hand of any Magistrate, empower any person to seize and take away all copies of such newspaper wherever found, and to enter upon any premises where any copy of such newspaper is sold, distributed, published, or publicly exhibited, or reasonably suspected to be sold, distributed, published, or publicly exhibited, or kept for sale, distribution, publication, or public exhibition, or reasonably suspected to be so kept ;

Power to seize copies of newspaper forfeited under section 11.

and search for all copies of such newspaper.

Every warrant issued under this section shall, so far as relates to a search, be executed in manner provided for the execution of search-warrants under the law relating to criminal procedure for the time being in force.

13. Any person feeling aggrieved by the issue of any notification under section nine or by any declaration made or an done in the execution of a warrant issued under that section, or under section ten or section twelve, may, within three months from the date of the notification or declaration or the doing of the thing complained of (as the case may be), appeal to the Governor General in Council; and the Governor General in Council shall take such appeal into consideration, and the order passed by him thereon shall be final and conclusive.

14. The Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct that any newspapers printed at any place beyond the limits of British India, or any books, pamphlets, placards, broadsheets, or other documents printed wholly or partially in any oriental language at any such place, shall not be brought into, or circulated, distributed, or publicly exhibited, or sold, or kept for circulation, distribution, public exhibition, or sale, in British India.

Whoever, in contravention of any direction under this section, brings any such newspaper, book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet, or other document into British India, or circulates, distributes, publishes, exhibits, or sells the same, or keeps the same for circulation, distribution, exhibition, or sale, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both ;

and all copies of such newspaper, book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet, or other document found in British India shall be forfeited to Her Majesty.

Whenever it appears to any Magistrate of a district or to any Commissioner of Police in a Presidency town that anything within the local limits of his jurisdiction is forfeited under this section, he may issue a warrant to search for and seize the same, and such warrant shall be executed in manner provided for the execution of search-warrants under the law relating to criminal procedure for the time being in force.

15. When any declaration has been made under section nine, section ten, or section twelve, in respect of any newspaper, book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet, or other document, or any notification has been issued in respect of the same under section fourteen, any officer of the Postal Department empowered in this behalf by the Governor General in Council, by name or in virtue of his office, may search or cause search to be made for any copies of the same in the custody of that Department, and shall deliver all such copies found to such officer as the Governor General in Council may appoint in this behalf by name or in virtue of his office.

Power of postal authorities to seize newspapers, books, &c.

16. Every notification and declaration of for-

shall be called in question by any Court of civil or criminal jurisdiction; and no Civil or Criminal proceeding shall be instituted against any person for anything purporting to be done under this Act or in execution of any such warrant, or for the recovery of any property purporting to be seized under this Act.

17. Any publisher or printer of a newspaper required to execute a bond or make a deposit under section three or section four, and publishing or printing such newspaper without having complied with such requisition, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or, with fine, or with both.

18. When any publisher of a newspaper has given an undertaking under section five or section eight, and during the period for which such undertaking is given, any words, signs,

or visible representations which have not been submitted to the officer appointed under section five, or which on being so submitted have been objected to by him, are printed or published in such newspaper, such publisher and the printer of such newspaper, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

19. Any portion of this Act which has been extended to any part of British India under section one shall cease to be in force in such part whenever the Governor General in Council, by notification in the Gazette of India, so directs, but may be again extended to such part by a like notification.

20. Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to prevent any person from being prosecuted under any other law for any act or omission which constitutes an offence against this Act.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

1. The main object of this Bill is to place newspapers which are published in the vernacular languages of India under better control, and to furnish the Government with more effective means than are provided by the existing law, of punishing and repressing seditious writings which are calculated to produce disaffection towards the Government in the minds of the ignorant and unenlightened masses. Another object is to prevent unscrupulous native editors using their papers as a means of intimidation or extortion.

2. As regards the latter of these objects, it is enough to state that the Government is informed on reliable authority that certain vernacular papers have from time to time been used as a means of intimidating, and extorting money from, our feudatories and native employes. As regards the former and more important object, a fuller statement of the reasons which have led to the introduction of this Bill seems desirable.

3. That a section of the vernacular Press has of late years assumed an attitude of fixed hostility to the Government; that it does not confine itself to criticising particular measures or the acts of individual officers on their merits, but attacks the very existence of British rule in India; and that the evil has been steadily growing and has now attained a magnitude which calls for the application of some strong means of repression, are facts patent to all who read the native papers.

4. The necessity for immediate action has been pressed on the Government of India from many quarters; and those most competent to form an opinion on such a point have advised that the existing law does not furnish a sufficient remedy, and that fresh legislation is accordingly necessary.

5. The only question has been as to the form which such legislation should assume, or, to speak more precisely, whether the object in view could be attained by any mere amendment of the general criminal law, or whether some measure of a special nature is required.

The Government of India have come to the conclusion that a special measure is necessary, and they have been led to this conclusion chiefly by two considerations:

6. In the first place, the object in view is simply to repress an evil which is altogether of a special and limited nature, and for the existence of which a small and strictly defined class of persons is answerable. It is not in any way necessary for that object to expand the general law relating to State offences, or to render that law more stringent. To do so would be to inflict an unmerited hardship on a large number of Her Majesty's subjects.

7. Secondly (and this seems to put the necessity of a special law, as distinguished from any mere amendment of the general law, beyond a doubt), the ordinary criminal law confines itself to imposing penalties for offences already committed, whereas the particular offence to be dealt with here is of such a nature that it is not enough that it should be punished when committed. Its commission must be prevented, and this can be done only under a special procedure devised expressly for that purpose.

8. The Bill now introduced is restricted in its operation to publications in oriental languages. Its chief provisions will take effect only in those parts of British India to which they may be specially extended by the Governor General in Council, and will cease to have effect in those parts whenever the Governor General in Council so directs.

9. The system of check it establishes in the case of newspapers in oriental languages published in British India is as follows:

First.—The Magistrate may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, require the printer or publisher of any such newspaper to enter into a bond binding himself not to print or publish in such newspaper anything likely to excite feelings of disaffection to the Government or antipathy between persons of different races, castes, religions or sects, and not to use such paper for purposes of extortion. The Magistrate may further require the amount of this bond to be deposited in money or securities.

Secondly.—If any newspaper (whether a bond has been taken in respect of it or not) at any time contains any matter of the description just mentioned, or is used for purposes of extortion, the Local Government may warn such newspaper by a notification in the Gazette, and if, in spite of such warning, the offence is repeated, the Local Government may then issue its warrant to seize the plant, &c., of such newspaper, and when any deposit has been made may declare such deposit forfeited.

Thirdly.—As the provisions regarding the deposit of security and the forfeiture of the deposit would, perhaps, be found to press unduly on some of the less wealthy newspaper proprietors, clauses have been inserted enabling the publisher of a newspaper to take his paper out of the operation of this portion of the Act for such time as he pleases by undertaking to submit his proofs to an officer appointed by the Government before publication, and to publish nothing which such officer objects to.

Any publisher may, if he chooses, do this at the time when he is called upon to deposit security; and if he does so, no security can be demanded from him.

Again, if he does not choose to avail himself of this provision at that stage, he may subsequently, in the event of a warning being issued against him, offer such an undertaking, and if the Magistrate accepts it, the proceedings are at an end.

10. As regards books, pamphlets, &c., printed in British India, containing matter of the description above referred to or used for purposes of extortion, the Bill gives the Local Government a power to seize them and the presses at which they are printed.

11. Newspapers and books published out of British India but circulated in British India remain. And in regard to them the Bill provides—first, that if they contain matter of the nature already referred to or are used for purposes of extortion, the Local Government may seize them; and secondly, that the Governor General in Council may prohibit their importation altogether.

12. The only other points calling for special notice are that an appeal is given to the Governor General in Council against anything done by a Local Government or any inferior authority; that declarations of forfeitures and other proceedings under the Act are made final and conclusive, subject only to such appeal; and that penalties are provided for printing or publishing a newspaper without executing a bond or making a deposit after such bond or deposit has been required, and for breach of an undertaking to submit proofs to a Government officer.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

NOTIFICATIONS.

Fort William, the 15th March 1878.

No. 1864.—The Governor General in Council directs the publication of the following Addenda and Corrigenda to the Codes of the Financial Department:—

CIVIL PENSION CODE.

SECTION 95, RULE 5 (PAGE 52).

Substitute the following for the Proviso inserted after "life" in the second sentence of this Rule by Notification No. 986, dated 15th February 1878:—

Provided that no gratuity which will yield on commutation a pension of less than two rupees a month, need be commuted at all under this Rule.

SEPARATE REVENUE—POST OFFICE.

The 15th March 1878.

No. 1845.—Under the powers vested in him by Sections 19, 20, 22 and 63 of the Post Office Act of 1866, the Governor General in Council is pleased to direct that from the 1st April next postage rates shall be chargeable upon letters, packets and parcels transmitted by the Indian Inland Post at the rates and under the conditions mentioned below, viz. :—

POSTAGE RATES AND CONDITIONS.

Prepaid Postage Rates.

The prepaid postage rates shall be as follows :—

(Postage can be prepaid only by a proper stamp or stamps, adhesive or embossed).

	Letters.	Packets in open covers. Prepayment of one rate ($\frac{1}{2}$ anna) compulsory.	Parcels.
	Annas.	Annas.	Annas.
Not exceeding $\frac{1}{2}$ tola in weight	$\frac{1}{2}$
Exceeding $\frac{1}{2}$ tola and not exceeding 1 tola	1
Exceeding 1 tola and not exceeding 2 tolas	2
For every additional tola	1
Not exceeding 10 tolas in weight	$\frac{1}{2}$...
Exceeding 10 tolas and not exceeding 20 tolas	1	...
For every additional 10 tolas	$\frac{1}{2}$...
Not exceeding 40 tolas in weight	6
Exceeding 40 tolas and not exceeding 80 tolas	12
For every additional 40 tolas	4

Unpaid Postage chargeable on delivery.

The unpaid postage rates shall be as follows :—

For an unpaid letter—double the prepaid rate.

For an insufficiently paid letter or packet—double the deficiency.

For an unpaid parcel—the prepaid rate.

For an insufficiently paid parcel—the deficiency.

Registration of Newspapers to cease.

Consequent upon the assimilation of the postage rates chargeable upon packets generally to those heretofore chargeable upon newspapers, it will no longer be necessary to register newspapers in the Postmaster General's office or to print registration numbers upon them.

Letter and Banghy Posts.

Articles not exceeding 10 tolas in weight shall be forwarded by the letter post (at letter or packet rates as the case may be) except when they are specially marked or presented by the senders for transmission as parcels. And any fully prepaid packet exceeding 10 tolas in weight which contains only a single mission news-paper* shall also be transmitted by the letter post.

All other articles shall be forwarded by the banghy post (at parcel or packet rates as the case may be) except when they are specially marked by the senders for transmission as letters, or when an intention to send them as letters is inferred from the outward appearance or other indication, such as prepayment of letter postage.

Packets how to be packed.

Packets must be packed in "open covers." By this term are meant covers open at the ends so as to admit of a ready examination of the contents, and containing nothing closed against inspection. Packets without covers shall be treated in the same way as those in open covers.

Contents of Packets.

Packets must not contain any communication having the character of an actual and personal correspondence unless such communication be wholly printed, lithographed or papyrographed. But proof sheets marked as such on the outside under the signature of the sender (even though they may bear manuscript corrections) shall be reckoned as being "wholly printed" within the meaning of this rule: and press manuscripts intended for publication shall not be reckoned as having the character of an actual and personal correspondence, provided that the packet has on the outside above the address the superscription "Press manuscript" and is addressed to the office of a newspaper.

Size of Packets.

No packet may exceed one foot and a half in length or one foot in width or depth.

Packets not fulfilling the prescribed conditions.

Packets not fulfilling the prescribed conditions or not prepaid with the minimum rate of half anna shall be forwarded charged with the letter or parcel postage whichever may be the least: but if any such packet contains only one or more newspapers, it shall not be forwarded but be sent to the Dead Letter Office.

Contents of Parcels.

Not more than one communication having the character of an actual and personal correspondence (unless wholly printed, lithographed or papyrographed) may be enclosed in a parcel.

Weight of Parcels.

No parcel may exceed 25 seers (2,000 tolas) in weight, nor may it be of a kind, which owing to size, shape or otherwise, cannot be carried without serious inconvenience to the mail service or risk to itself.

Receipts and acknowledgments for parcels when properly packed.

A person tendering a parcel at a post office within the prescribed hours shall be entitled to get a receipt for it, provided that a parcel so tendered is securely packed in cloth, wax-cloth or tin, and if it is packed in cloth or wax-cloth, provided further that it bears seals with distinct impressions of some device (not that of a current coin) at intervals not exceeding five inches along the lines of sewing.

Persons desirous to have a certificate of posting in respect of any article for which a post office receipt is not given, may obtain such certificate under the following conditions, viz. :—

- (1) The certificates of posting should be presented ready written in ink along with the article to be posted, and both the certificate and the article should be presented at the Post Office window on any day except Sunday at least half an hour before the hour fixed for closing the mail for which it is intended.
- (2) The certificate should be an exact transcript of what is entered upon the address side of the article to be posted, and should have a half-anna postage label affixed thereto.
- (3) The Post Office will compare the address of the letter with the certificate, and if it be correct, will obliterate the postage label and impress the dated stamp upon the certificate. The certificate will be returned to the person who presented it.

* NOTE.—Here and elsewhere in this notification the term newspaper includes periodicals published at intervals not exceeding 31 days.

Official Postage Rates.

Prepayment is optional in all cases, except for registered articles. Unpaid rates are the same as the prepaid rates.	Letters.	Packets in open covers to contain no letter or communication of the nature of a letter (unless wholly printed, lithographed or papyrographed) or anything closed against inspection.	Parcels.
	Annas.	Annas.	Annas.
Not exceeding $\frac{1}{2}$ tola	$\frac{1}{2}$	$\frac{1}{2}$	See note (b).
Exceeding $\frac{1}{2}$ and not exceeding 10 tolas	1	1
Exceeding 10 and not exceeding 20 tolas	2	1
" 20 " 30 "	3	1 $\frac{1}{2}$
" 30 " 40 "	4	2
Exceeding 40 tolas	{ 1 anna per tola : see note (a) }		$\frac{1}{2}$ anna per 10 tolas.
Exceeding 40 tolas and not exceeding 80 tolas	12
Exceeding 80 tolas and not exceeding 120 tolas	16
For every additional 40 tolas	4

NOTE (a).—Thus an article weighing 41 tolas will be charged with 41 annas. Articles in closed covers which exceed 40 tolas will be conveyed by Banghy Post (as packets or as parcels) at the lower rate of charge, unless specially marked by the senders for transmission as letters, or prepaid at letter rates.

NOTE (b).—No rates are given for parcels not exceeding 40 tolas in weight, because they can be sent as registered letters at no greater cost.

NOTE (c).—All letters as well as all Packets not exceeding 10 tolas in weight and any fully prepaid packet exceeding 10 tolas which contains only a single Official Gazette are forwarded by Letter Post. All other articles are forwarded by the slower Banghy Post.

HIGH COURT—Original Side.

NOTIFICATION.

Calcutta, the 9th March 1878.

The following Rules passed by the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal are now published for general information.

By order,

R. BELCHAMBERS,

Registrar.

It is ordered that the following Rules be read and passed as Rules of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal in its Original Jurisdiction, to take effect from the 1st day of April 1878:—

I.—The attestation of any amendment under Sections 47, 53, 116, 245 or 545 of the Code of Civil Procedure shall be considered to be a non-judicial act and shall, unless otherwise ordered by the Court, be done by the Registrar.

II.—When a plaint or written statement is verified out of Court in the presence of an attesting witness, the fact of such verification may be proved by the affidavit of such witness, unless the Court shall otherwise order.

III.—No costs for making or presenting any copy or copies of the plaint under Section 58 will be allowed, unless the Court has specially directed such copy or copies to be presented.

IV.—Such copy or copies when so ordered shall be presented to the Registrar, who shall cause the same to be compared with the plaint by one of the Examiners, who shall attest such copy or copies if found correct, and the same when so attested shall forthwith be served upon the defendant or defendants as the case may be.

V.—When an original document is produced by the plaintiff under Section 59, the same shall be marked for identification by the Chief Ministerial Officer in attendance on the Court, and if in lieu of the original a copy thereof is filed with the plaint, the same shall, before return of the original, be compared therewith by one of the Examiners, who shall attest the copy if it be found correct.

VI.—When an original document is produced by the plaintiff under Section 62, the same shall be marked for identification by the Chief Ministerial Officer in attendance on the Court, and the copy to be filed under that Section shall be examined and compared with the original by one of the Examiners, who shall attest the copy if it be found correct.

VII.—The acts directed to be done by the Court under Sections 262 and 302 respectively shall be deemed to be non-judicial acts, and unless otherwise ordered by the Court shall be done by the Registrar. The endorsement or execution by the Registrar shall be in the following form:—A. B. by C. D., Registrar of Her Majesty's High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal in its Original Civil Jurisdiction.

POST OFFICE.

NOTIFICATIONS.

Calcutta, the 8th March 1878.

GOVERNMENT SIMLA PASSENGER DAK.

Through booking from Umballa to Simla.

Arrangements have been made with effect from the 15th March for booking Express Carriage Daks from Umballa to Kalka, and Express Tonga Daks from Kalka to Simla, at the Calcutta Post Office,* under certain rules and conditions, of which a printed copy can be obtained on application to the Post Master, Calcutta. These arrangements will continue in force till the 25th April.

* Post Master's room, east verandah, between the hours of 10 A. M. and 4 P. M.

1. The charge for an Express Carriage Dak from Umballa to Kalka will be Rs. 20. The charge for an Express Tonga Dak from Kalka to Simla will be Rs. 20.

2. From the 1st April three ordinary vans carrying mails will also leave the Umballa Post Office—one in the morning at or about 5 A. M., and two others in the evening at or about 7 P. M. and 9-10 P. M. In each of these vans four seats will be available for passengers (if the weight of the mails admit) at a charge of Rs. 2½ per seat.

3. From the same date, viz., 1st April, two mail tongas will start from Kalka—one at about 8 A. M., and another at about 10-30 A. M. If the weight of mails admit of it, passengers can be accommodated in these tongas at Rs. 5 a seat. Seats in the Mail tongas can be booked only in the Umballa and Kalka Offices.

4. The Tonga Daks are not Government Daks, but those of a private agency called the Mountain Carrying Company, under the management of Mr. Lowrie, and under contract with the Post Office for the conveyance of mails.

TURTON SMITH,

Asst. Dir. Genl. of the Post Office of India.

The 26th February 1878.

The Passenger and Mail Cart Service between Caragola and Siligoree, hitherto kept up by the Postal Department, will, in consequence of the opening of the Northern Bengal State Railway, be discontinued from the 1st February 1878.

The 2nd March 1878.

PASSENGER SERVICE.

Messrs. Bird and Company have contracted to carry the Mails between Siliguri and Darjeeling by Tongas.

Passengers are conveyed by these Tongas at the following rates:—

For one seat, a sum not exceeding 8 annas a mile.

For two seats, a sum not exceeding 12 annas a mile.

J. MACFARLAN,

Offg. Post Master General of Bengal.

PASSENGER SERVICE.

Jessore Line.

A carriage line is maintained under contract between Chaudah Station on the Eastern Bengal Railway and Jessore, a distance of 4½ miles. The contractor is bound to start one carriage each way daily to meet the up and down Mail Trains, but he is at liberty to make his own charges for the conveyance of passengers.

The 15th March 1878.

Mails for Ceylon, Straits, Hong-Kong, United States of America, and the Colonies of Queensland, New South Wales and Victoria, via Torres Straits (letters, &c., for the latter colony must be specially superscribed), for transmission per Steamer from Bombay, will be closed at the General Post Office on Saturday, the 16th March 1878, at 6 P. M.

Mails for the Straits and Hong-Kong, for transmission per Steamers Argyll and A. Apar, will be closed at the General Post Office on Saturday, the 16th March 1878, at 6 P. M.

NOTICE.

Sealed Tenders are invited by the Superintendent of Marine, at the Calcutta Dockyard, up to 12 o'clock noon on Monday, the 18th March 1878, for the supply, by contract, of the articles specified in the several classes entered in the Schedule, for one year from 1st April 1878 to 31st March 1879, or until the date of sanction by Government of new contracts for the year 1879-80.

2. Forms of Tender, with copies of the Schedule, will be supplied by the undersigned and none others will be received. Tenderers must also distinctly understand that any alteration or erasure in the figures, &c., once entered in the three last columns of the Schedule, viz., "Tendered Rates," "Per" and "Amount of the Tendered Rates," also omission of totals, will render their Tender informal and lead to its rejection.

3. Tenders to be superscribed "Tenders for the supply of Miscellaneous Articles."

4. Tenders will not be received after the hour named.

5. Parties may tender for one or as many complete classes as they please, but not for a portion of class.

6. Parties must show in the Schedule the rate, &c., at which they tender to supply each and every article comprised in one or as many complete classes as they intend to tender.

7. Each Tender, before being opened, must be accompanied with the requisite deposit in cash.

8. Each Tenderer must be prepared to supply all articles equal to the samples produced at the Office of the Superintendent of Marine, which are sealed and kept at his Office for their inspection, and to abide by the conditions specified in the Form of Tender.

9. No reason will be assigned by the Superintendent of Marine for rejection of any Tender, and he does not bind himself to accept the lowest tender.

10. Persons desirous of undertaking the contract can obtain, on application at the Office of the undersigned, printed Forms of Tender and Schedule of the Articles to be supplied, and any other information that may be required connected with the contract, and the conditions the Tenderers must abide by, to prevent their tenders being treated as informal.

G. T. ROBINSON, Comdr., I. N.,
Superintendent of Marine.

OFFICE OF THE SUPDT. OF MARINE, KIDDERPORE;
The 26th February 1878.

NOTICE.

Sealed Tenders are invited by the Superintendent of Marine, at the Calcutta Dockyard, up to 12 o'clock, noon, on Monday, the 18th March 1878, for the supply by contract of the articles of provisions specified in the below Schedule for one year from 1st April 1878 to 31st March 1879, or until the date of sanction by Government of new contracts for the year 1879-80.

Tenders to be superscribed "Tender for the supply of Provisions to the Marine Department."

Tenders will not be received after the hour above named.

Tenders must show a rate for each article, and the provisions must be delivered at the Dockyard free of all contingent charges.

A deposit of (500) five hundred Rupees in Bank of Bengal Receipt only must accompany each Tender, returnable in the cases of parties whose tenders are not entertained except in the case of the successful tenderer, from whom a further sum of (1,000) one thousand Rupees will be taken, and who will have to sign a contract deed within three days from the receipt of the notice of acceptance, and who shall commence to supply provisions, failing which his deposit will be confiscated.

Bills will be paid monthly for the supply of provisions, duly supported by receipts from the Marine Storekeeper.

Samples of each article of provisions are to be submitted along with tenders.

No reason will be assigned for the rejection of any Tender, nor does the undersigned bind himself to accept the lowest Tender.

G. T. ROBINSON, Comdr., I.N.,
Superintendent of Marine.

NOTICE.

The monuments of the persons named in the list appended in the Karnal Cemeteries are in want of repairs. The friends of the deceased, who desire their maintenance, are requested to communicate with the Deputy Commissioner, Karnal, Panjab, within two months.

This notice is given with reference to the following Rule XII of the rules for the care and use of Government Cemeteries, promulgated with Government of India's Notification (Home Department) No. 421, dated 12th December 1877:—

"RULE XII (1). The Chaplain should communicate with the friends of the deceased when a monument needs repairing, or when such communication is not possible, advertise three times in the Gazette of India and the Gazette of the Province. If it falls into a ruinous condition, and no party will undertake to restore it, the ruined monument must be made level with the ground during the next repairs, and any slab it contained must be placed over the grave in simple masonry, or be inserted in the wall."

SCHEDULE.

An Act to amend the law relating to Forests, the transit of forest-produce, and the duty leviable on timber.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to Forests, the transit of forest-produce and the duty leviable on timber; It hereby enacted as follows:—

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

1. This Act may be called "The Indian Forest Act, 1878:—"

It shall come into force at once in the territories respectively administered by the Governor of Bombay in Council, the Lieutenant-Governors of the Lower Provinces, the North-Western Provinces, and the Panjáb, (except the District of Hazára), and the Chief Commissioners of Oudh, the Central Provinces and Assam.

And any other Local Government may from time to time, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, extend, by notification in the local official Gazette, this Act to all or any of the territories for the time being under its administration.

On and from the date on which this Act comes into force in any of the said territories, the enactments mentioned in the schedule hereto annexed shall be repealed in such territories. But all rules made under or validated by any of the said enactments and in force at the date of such repeal shall, so far as they are consistent with this Act, be deemed to have been made and published hereunder.

2. In this Act, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context,—

"Forest-officer" means any person whom the Governor General in Council, or the Local Government or any officer empowered by the Governor General in Council or the Local Government in this behalf, may from time to time appoint by name, or as holding an office, to carry out all or any of the purposes of this Act, or to do anything required by this Act or any rule made under this Act to be done by a Forest-officer:

"Tree" includes bamboos, stumps and brushwood:

"Timber" includes trees and bamboos when they have fallen or have been felled, and all wood, whether cut up, or fashioned or hollowed-out for cart-wheels, mortars, canoes or other purposes or not:

"Forest-produce" includes the following when found in, or brought from, a forest, that is to say,— minerals (including limestone and laterite), surface soil, trees, timber, grass, peat, canes, creepers, reeds, leaves, moss, flowers, fruits, roots, juice, catechu, bark, honey, wax, lac, caoutchouc, gum, wood-oil, grass-oil, resin, varnish, silk-worms and cocoons, shells, skins, tusks, bones and horns:

"Forest-offence" means an offence punishable under this Act, or under any rule made under this Act:

"Cattle" includes elephants, camels, buffaloes, horses, mares, geldings, ponies, colts, fillies, mules, asses, pigs, rams, ewes,

"Cattle."

sheep, lambs, goats and kids:

"River" includes streams, canals, creeks and other channels, natural or artificial.

"River."

CHAPTER II.

OF RESERVED FORESTS.

3. The Local Government may from time to time constitute any forest-land or waste-land which is the property of Government, or over which the Government has proprietary rights, or to the whole or any part of the forest-produce of which the Government is entitled, a Reserved Forest in the manner hereinafter provided.

4. Whenever it is proposed to constitute any land a Reserved Forest, the Local Government may publish a notification in the local official Gazette—

(a) declaring that it is proposed to constitute such land a reserved forest;

(b) specifying the limits of such forest; and

(c) appointing an officer (hereinafter called "the Forest Settlement Officer") to inquire into and determine the existence, nature and extent of any rights alleged to exist in favour of any person in or over any land comprised within such limits, or in or over any forest-produce, and to deal with the same as provided in this chapter.

Explanation 1.—For the purpose of clause (b) of this section, it shall be sufficient to describe the limits of the forest by roads, rivers, ridges or other well-known or readily intelligible boundaries.

The officer appointed under clause (c) of this section shall ordinarily be a person not holding any forest-office except that of Forest Settlement Officer.

Nothing in this section shall prevent the Local Government from appointing any number of officers not exceeding three, not more than one of whom shall be a person holding any forest-office except as aforesaid, to perform the duties of a Forest Settlement Officer under this Act.

5. During the interval between the publication of such notification and the date fixed by the notification under section nineteen, no right shall be acquired in or over the land comprised in such notification, except by succession or under a grant or contract in writing made or entered into by or on behalf of Government or some person in whom such right was vested when the former notification was issued; and no fresh clearings for cultivation or for any other purpose shall be made in such land.

6. When a notification has been issued under section four, the Forest Settlement Officer shall publish in the language of the country, in every town and village in the neighbourhood of the land comprised therein, a proclamation—

(a) specifying the limits of the proposed forest;

(b) explaining the consequences which, as herein-after provided, will ensue on the reservation of such forest; and

(c) fixing a period of not less than three months from the date of such proclamation, and requiring every person claiming any right mentioned in section four or five either to present to such officer within such period a written notice specifying, or to appear before him and state, the nature of such right and the amount and particulars of the compensation (if any) claimed in respect thereof.

7. The Forest Settlement Officer shall take down in writing all statements made under section six, and shall, at some convenient place, enquire into all claims duly preferred under that section, and the existence of any rights mentioned in section four or five and not claimed under section six, so far as the same may be ascertainable from the records of Government and the evidence of any persons likely to be acquainted with the same.

8. For the purposes of such enquiry, the Forest Settlement Officer may exercise the following powers, that is to say:—

(a) power to enter, by himself or any officer authorized by him for the purpose, upon any land, and to survey, demarcate, and make a map of the same; and

(b) the powers of a Civil Court in the trial of suits.

9. Rights in respect of which no claim has been preferred under section six, and of the existence of which no knowledge has been acquired by enquiry under section seven, shall be extinguished, unless before the notification under section nineteen is published the person claiming them satisfies the Forest Settlement Officer that he had sufficient cause for not preferring such claim within the period fixed under section six.

10. In the case of a claim to a right in or over any land, other than a right of way or pasture or to forest-produce or a watercourse, the Forest Settlement Officer shall pass an order admitting or rejecting the same in whole or in part.

If such claim is admitted in whole or in part, the Forest Settlement Officer shall either (1) exclude such land from the limits of the proposed Forest; or (2) come to an agreement with the owner thereof for the surrender of his rights; or (3) proceed to acquire such land in the manner provided by the Land Acquisition Act, 1870.

For the purpose of so acquiring such land—

(a) the Forest Settlement Officer shall be deemed to be a Collector proceeding under the Land Acquisition Act, 1870;

(b) the claimant shall be deemed to be a person interested and appearing before him in pursuance of a notice given under section nine of that Act;

(c) the provisions of the preceding sections of that Act shall be deemed to have been complied with; and

(d) the Collector, with the consent of the claimant, or the Court, with the consent of both parties, may award compensation in land, or partly in land and partly in money.

11. In the case of a claim to rights of pasture or to forest-produce, the Forest Settlement Officer shall pass an order admitting or rejecting the same in whole or in part.

12. The Forest Settlement Officer, when passing any order under section eleven, shall record, so far as may be practicable,—

(a) the name, father's name, caste, residence and occupation of the person claiming the right;

(b) the designation, position and area of all fields or groups of fields (if any), and the designation and position of all buildings (if any), in respect of which the exercise of such rights is claimed.

13. If the Forest Settlement Officer admits in whole or in part any claim under section eleven, he shall also record the extent to which the claim is so admitted, specifying the number and description of the cattle which the claimant is from time to time entitled to graze in the forest, the season during which such pasture is permitted, the quantity of timber and other forest-produce which he is from time to time authorised to take or receive, or such other particulars as the case may require. He shall also record whether the timber or other forest-produce obtained by the exercise of the rights claimed may be sold or bartered.

14. After making such record, the Forest Settlement Officer shall, to the best of his ability, and having due regard to the maintenance of the Reserved Forest in respect of which the claim is made, pass such orders as will ensure the continued exercise of the rights so admitted. For this purpose, the Forest Settlement Officer may—

(a) set out some other forest-tract of sufficient extent, and in a locality reasonably convenient for the purposes of such claimants, and record an order conferring upon them a right of pasture or to forest-produce (as the case may be) to the extent so admitted; or

(b) so alter the limits of the proposed Forest as to exclude forest-land of sufficient extent, and in a locality reasonably convenient, for the purposes of the claimants; or

(c) record an order, continuing to such claimants a right of pasture or to forest-produce (as the case may be), to the extent so admitted, at such seasons, within such portions of the proposed Forest and under such rules as may from time to time be prescribed by the Local Government.

15. In case the Forest Settlement Officer finds it impossible, having due regard to the maintenance of the Reserved Forest, to make such settlement under section fourteen as shall ensure the continued exercise of the said rights to the extent so admitted, he shall (subject to such rules as the Local Government may from time to time prescribe in this behalf) commute such rights, either by the payment to such persons of a sum of money in lieu thereof, or by the grant of land, or in such other manner as he thinks fit.

16. Any person who has made a claim under this Act, or any Forest-officer or other person generally or specially empowered by the Local Government in this behalf, may, within three months from the date of the order passed on such claim by the Forest Settlement Officer under section ten, eleven, fourteen or fifteen, present an appeal from such order to such officer of the Revenue Department, of rank not lower than that of a Collector or Deputy Commissioner, as the Local Government may from time to time, by notification in the local official Gazette, appoint by name, or as holding an office, to hear appeals from such orders:

Provided that if the Local Government establishes (as it is hereby empowered to do) a Court (hereinafter called the Forest Court) composed of three persons to be appointed by the Local Government, such appeals shall be presented to such Court.

17. Every appeal under section sixteen shall be made by petition in writing, and may be delivered to the Forest Settlement Officer, who shall forward it without delay to the authority competent to hear the same.

If the appeal be to an officer appointed under section sixteen, it shall be heard in the manner prescribed for the time being for the hearing of appeals in matters relating to land-revenue.

If the appeal be to the Forest-court, the Court shall fix a day and a convenient place in the neighbourhood of the proposed forest for hearing the appeal, and shall give notice thereof to the parties, and shall hear such appeal accordingly.

The order passed thereon by such officer or Court, or by the majority of the members of such Court, shall be final, subject to revision by the Local Government.

18. The Local Government, or any person who has made a claim under this Act, may appoint any person to appear, plead and act on its or his behalf before the Forest Settlement Officer, or the appellate officer or Court, in the course of any inquiry or appeal under this Act.

19. When the following events have occurred (namely),—

(a) the period fixed under section six for preferring claims has elapsed, and all claims (if any) made within such period have been disposed of by the Forest Settlement Officer; and

(b) if such claims have been made, and the period limited by section sixteen for appealing from the orders passed on such claims has elapsed, and all appeals (if any) presented within such period have been disposed of by the appellate officer or Court; and the Local Government may publish a notification in the local official Gazette, specifying definitely, according to boundary-marks erected or otherwise, the limits of the forest which it is intended to reserve, and declaring the same to be reserved from a date fixed by such notification.

(c) all lands (if any) to be included in the proposed forest, which the Forest Settlement Officer has, under section ten, elected to acquire under the Land Acquisition Act, 1870, have become vested in the Government under section sixteen of that Act,

From the date so fixed, such forest shall be deemed to be a Reserved Forest.

20. The Forest-officer shall, before the date fixed by such notification, cause a translation thereof into the language of the country to be published in every town and village in the neighbourhood of the forest.

21. The Local Government may, within five years from the publication of any notification under section nineteen, revise any arrangement made under section fourteen or seventeen, and may, for this purpose, rescind or modify any order made under section fourteen or seventeen, and direct that any one of the proceedings specified in section fourteen be taken in lieu of any other of such proceedings, or that the rights admitted under section eleven be commuted under section fifteen.

22. No right of any description shall be acquired in or over a Reserved Forest, except by succession or under a grant or contract in writing made by or on behalf of the Government or of some person in whom such right was vested when the notification under section nineteen was issued.

23. Notwithstanding anything contained in section twenty-two, no right continued under section fourteen, clause (c), shall be alienated by way of grant, sale, lease, mortgage or otherwise, without the sanction of the Local Government: provided that when any such right is appendant to any land or house, it may be sold or otherwise alienated with such land or house.

No timber or other forest-produce obtained in exercise of any such right shall be sold or bartered except to such extent as may have been admitted in the order recorded under section thirteen.

24. The Forest-officer may from time to time, with the previous sanction of the Local Government or of any officer duly authorized in that behalf, stop any public or private way or water-course in a Reserved Forest; provided, that a substitute for the way or water-course so stopped, which the Local Government deems to be reasonably convenient, already exists, or has been provided or constructed by the Forest-officer in lieu thereof.

25. Any person who—

(a) makes any fresh clearing prohibited by section five, or

(b) sets fire to a Reserved Forest, or kindles any fire in such manner as to endanger the same; or who, in a Reserved Forest,

(c) kindles, keeps or carries any fire except at such seasons as the Forest-officer may from time to time notify in this behalf;

(d) trespasses or pastures cattle or permits cattle to trespass;

(e) causes any damage by negligence in felling any tree or cutting or dragging any timber ;

(f) fells, girdles, lops, taps or burns any tree, or strips-off the bark or leaves from, or otherwise damages, the same ;

(g) quarries stone, burns lime or charcoal, or collects, subjects to any manufacturing process or removes, any forest-produce ;

(h) clears or breaks up any land for cultivation, or any other purpose ; or,

(i) in contravention of any rules which the Local Government may from time to time prescribe, kills or catches elephants, hunts, shoots, fishes, poisons water, or sets traps or snares ;

shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine not exceeding five hundred rupees, or with both, in addition to such compensation for damage done to the forest as the convicting Court may direct to be paid.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prohibit (a) any act done by permission in writing of the Forest-officer, or under any rule made by the Local Government ; or (b) the exercise of any right continued under section fourteen, clause (c), or created by grant or contract in writing made by or on behalf of Government under section twenty-two.

Whenever fire is caused wilfully or by gross negligence in a Reserved Forest, the Local Government may (notwithstanding that any penalty has been inflicted under this section) direct that in such forest or any portion thereof the exercise of all rights of pasture or to forest-produce shall be suspended for such period as it thinks fit.

26. The Local Government may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, by notification in the local official Gazette, direct that, from a date fixed by such notification, any forest or any portion thereof reserved under this Act shall cease to be a Reserved Forest.

From the date so fixed, such forest or portion shall cease to be reserved ; but the rights (if any) which have been extinguished therein shall not revive in consequence of such cessation.

CHAPTER III.

OF VILLAGE-FORESTS.

27. The Local Government may from time to time assign to any village-community the rights of Government to or over any land which has been constituted a Reserved Forest, and may cancel such assignment. All forests so assigned shall be called Village-forests.

The Local Government may from time to time make rules for regulating the management of Village-forests, prescribing the conditions under which the community to which any such assignment is made may be provided with timber or other forest-produce, or pasture, and their duties for the protection and improvement of such forest.

All provisions of this Act relating to Reserved Forests shall (so far as they are consistent with the rules so made) apply to Village-forests.

CHAPTER IV.

OF PROTECTED FORESTS.

28. The Local Government may from time to time, by notification in the local official Gazette, declare "Protected Forests." the provisions of this chapter applicable to any forest-land or waste-land which is not included in a Reserved Forest, but which is the property of Government, or over which the Government has proprietary rights, or to the whole or any part of the forest-produce of which the Government is entitled.

The forest-land and waste-lands comprised in any such notification shall be called a "Protected Forest."

No such notification shall be made unless the nature and extent of the rights of Government and of private persons in or over the forest-land or waste-land comprised therein have been enquired into and recorded at a survey or settlement, or in such other manner as the Local Government thinks sufficient.

Every such record shall be presumed to be correct until the contrary is proved.

Provided that, if in the case of any forest-land or waste-land, the Local Government thinks that such enquiry and record are necessary, but that they will occupy such length of time as that the rights of Government will in the meantime be endangered, the Local Government may (pending such enquiry and record) declare such land to be a protected forest, but so as not to abridge or affect any existing rights of individuals or communities.

29. The Local Government may from time to time, by notification in the local official Gazette,—

(a) declare any class of trees in a protected forest, or any trees in any such forest, to be reserved from a date fixed by such notification ;

(b) declare that a portion of such forest be closed for such term not exceeding twenty years as the

Local Government thinks fit, and that the rights of private persons (if any) over such portion shall be suspended during such term : provided that the remainder of such forest be sufficient, and in a locality reasonably convenient, for the due exercise of the rights suspended in the portion so closed ;

(c) prohibit, from a date fixed as aforesaid, the quarrying of stone, or the burning of lime or charcoal, or the collection or subjection to any manufacturing process, or removal, of any forest-produce, in any such forest, and the breaking up or clearing for cultivation, for building, for herding cattle or for any other purpose, any land in any such forest : and

(d) alter or cancel such declaration or prohibition.

30. The Collector or Deputy Commissioner of the district shall cause a translation into the language of the district, of every notification issued under section twenty-nine, to be affixed in a conspicuous place in every town and village in the neighbourhood of the forest comprised in the notification.

31. The Local Government may from time to time make rules to regulate the following matters :—

Power to make rules for protected forests.

(a) the cutting, sawing, conversion and removal of trees and timber, and the collection, manufacture and removal of forest-produce, from protected forests ;

(b) the granting of licenses to the inhabitants of towns and villages in the vicinity of protected forests to take trees, timber or other forest-produce for their own use, and the production and return of such licenses by such persons ;

(c) the granting of licenses to persons felling or removing trees or timber or other forest-produce from such forests for the purposes of trade, and the production and return of such licenses by such persons ;

(d) the payments (if any) to be made by the persons mentioned in clauses (b) and (c) of this section, for permission to cut such trees, or to collect and remove such timber or other forest-produce ;

(e) the other payments, if any, to be made by them in respect of such trees, timber and produce, and the places where such payments shall be made ;

(f) the examination of forest-produce passing out of such forests ;

(g) the clearing and breaking up of land for cultivation or other purposes in such forests ;

(h) the protection from fire of timber lying in such forests and of trees reserved under section twenty-nine ;

(i) the cutting of grass and pasturing of cattle in such forests ;

(j) killing or catching elephants, hunting, shooting, fishing, poisoning water, and setting traps or snares in such forests ;

(k) the protection and management of any portion of a forest closed under section twenty-nine ;

(l) the exercise of rights referred to in section twenty-eight.

Penalties for acts in contravention of notification under section 29.

32. Any person who commits any of the following offences :—

(a) fells, girdles, lops, taps or burns any tree reserved under section twenty-nine, or strips off the bark or leaves from, or otherwise damages, any such tree ;

(b) contrary to any prohibition under section twenty-nine, quarries any stone, or burns any lime or charcoal, or collects, subjects to any manufacturing process, or removes, any forest-produce ;

(c) contrary to any prohibition under section twenty-nine, breaks up or clears for cultivation or any other purpose any land in any protected forest ;

(d) sets fire to such forest, or kindles a fire without taking all reasonable precautions to prevent its spreading to any trees reserved under section twenty-nine, whether standing, fallen or felled, or to any closed portion of such forest ;

(e) leaves burning any fire kindled by him in the vicinity of any such trees or closed portion ;

(f) fells any tree or drags any timber so as to damage any tree reserved as aforesaid ;

(g) permits cattle to damage any such tree ;

(h) infringes any rule made under section thirty-one,

shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

33. Nothing in this chapter shall be deemed to prohibit any act done with the permission in writing of the Forest-officer, or in accordance with rules made under section thirty-one, or (except as regards any portion of a forest closed under section twenty-nine) in the exercise of any right recorded under section twenty-eight.

CHAPTER V.

FORESTS UNDER CONSERVANCY ADMINISTRATION WHEN THIS ACT COMES INTO FORCE.

34. Within twelve months from the date on which this Act comes into force in the territories administered by any Local Government, such Government shall, after consideration of the rights of the Government and private persons in all forest-lands or waste-lands then under its executive control for purposes of Forest Conservancy, determine which of such lands (if any) can, according to justice, equity and good conscience, be classed as Reserved Forests or Protected Forests under this Act, and declare, by notification in the local official Gazette, any lands so classed to be Reserved or Protected Forests, as the case may be :

Provided that such declaration shall not affect any rights of the Government or private persons to or over any land or forest-produce in any such forest, which have, previous to the date of such declaration, been enquired into, settled and recorded in a manner which the Local Government thinks sufficient :

Provided also that if any such rights have not on such date been so enquired into, settled and recorded, the Local Government shall direct that the same shall be enquired into, settled and recorded in the manner provided by this Act for Reserved or Protected Forests, as the case may be ; and until such enquiry, settlement and record have been completed, no such declaration shall abridge or affect such rights.

CHAPTER VI.

OF THE CONTROL OVER FORESTS AND LANDS NOT BEING THE PROPERTY OF GOVERNMENT.

35. The Local Government may from time to time, by notification in the local official Gazette, regulate or prohibit in any forest or waste-land—

(a) the breaking up or clearing of land for cultivation ;

(b) the pasturing of cattle ;

(c) the firing or clearing of the vegetation ;

when such regulation or prohibition appears necessary for any of the following purposes :—

First.—For protection against storms, winds, rolling stones, floods and avalanches ;

Second.—For the preservation of the soil on the ridges and slopes, and in the valleys, of hilly tracts, the prevention of landslips and of the formation of ravines and torrents, and the protection of land against erosion, or the deposit thereon of sand, stones or gravel ;

Third.—For the maintenance of a water-supply in springs, rivers and tanks;

Fourth.—For the protection of roads, bridges, railways and other lines of communication;

Fifth.—For the preservation of the public health;

and may alter or cancel such notification.

The Local Government may, for any such purpose, construct at its own expense, in or upon any forest or waste-land, such work as it thinks fit:

Provided that no such notification shall be made or work begun until after the issue of a notice to the owner of such forest or land, calling on him to shew cause, within a reasonable period to be specified in such notice, why such notification should not be made or work constructed, and until his objections (if any) and any evidence he may produce in support of the same have been heard by an officer duly appointed in that behalf, and have been considered by the Local Government.

36. In case of neglect of, or wilful disobedience

Power to assume management of forests. to, any regulation or prohibition under section thirty-five, or if the purposes of any work to be constructed under that section so require, the Local Government may, after notice in writing to the owner of such forest or land, and after considering his objections (if any), place the same under the control of a Forest-officer, and may declare that all or any of the provisions of this Act relating to Reserved Forests shall apply to such forest or land.

The nett profits (if any) arising from the management of such forest or land shall be paid to the said proprietor.

37. In any case under this chapter in which

Expropriation of forests in certain cases. the Local Government considers that, in lieu of placing the forest or land under the control of a Forest-officer, the same should be acquired for public purposes, the Local Government may proceed to acquire it in the manner prescribed by the Land Acquisition Act, 1870.

The owner of any forest or land comprised in any notification under section thirty-five may, at any time not less than three or more than twelve years from the date thereof, require that such forest or land shall be acquired for public purposes, and the Local Government shall acquire such forest or land accordingly.

38. The owner of any land or, if there be more

Protection of forests at request of owners. than one owner thereof, the owners of shares therein amounting in the aggregate to at least two-thirds thereof may, with a view to the formation or conservation of forests thereon, represent in writing to the Collector or Deputy Commissioner their desire—

(a) that such land be managed on their behalf by the Forest-officer as a Reserved or a Protected Forest on such terms as may be mutually agreed upon; or

(b) that all or any of the provisions of this Act be applied to such land.

In either case, the Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, apply to such land such provisions of this Act as it thinks suitable to the circumstances thereof and as may be desired by the applicants.

Any such notification may be altered or cancelled by a like notification.

CHAPTER VII.

OF THE DUTY ON TIMBER.

39. The Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may levy a duty in such manner, at such places, and at such rates, as it may from time to time prescribe by notification in the local official Gazette on all timber—

(a) which is produced in British India, and in respect of which the Government has any right;

(b) which is brought from any place beyond the frontier of British India.

In every case in which such duty is directed to be levied ad valorem, the Local Government may, with the like sanction, from time to time fix, by like notification, the value on which such duty shall be assessed.

All duties on timber, which, at the time when this Act comes into force in any territory, are levied therein under the authority of the Local Government, shall be deemed to be and to have been duly levied under the provisions of this Act.

40. Nothing in this chapter shall be deemed to Limit not to apply to purchase-money or royalty. limit the amount (if any) chargeable as purchase-money or royalty on any timber or other forest-produce, although the same is levied on such timber or produce while in transit, in the same manner as duty is levied.

CHAPTER VIII.

OF THE CONTROL OF TIMBER AND OTHER FOREST-PRODUCE IN TRANSIT.

41. The control of all rivers and their banks as regards the floating of timber, as well as the control of all timber and other forest-produce in transit by land or water, is vested in the Local Government, and it may from time to time make rules to regulate the transit of all timber and other forest-produce.

Such rules may (among other matters)—

(a) prescribe the routes by which alone timber and other forest-produce may be imported, exported or moved, into, from, or within, British India;

(b) prohibit the import and export or moving of such timber or other produce without a pass from an officer duly authorized to issue the same, or otherwise than in accordance with the conditions of such pass;

(c) provide for the issue, production and return of such passes and for the payment of fees therefor;

(d) provide for the stoppage, reporting, examination and marking of timber or other forest-produce in transit, in respect of which there is reason to believe that any money is payable to Government on account of the price thereof, or on account of any duty, fee, royalty or charge due thereon, or to which it is desirable for the purposes of this Act to affix a mark;

(e) provide for the establishment and regulation of depôts to which such timber or other produce shall be taken by those in charge of it for examination, or for the payment of such money, or in order that such marks may be affixed to it; and the conditions under which such timber or other produce shall be brought to, stored at, and removed from, such depôt;

(f) prohibit the closing up or obstructing of the channel or banks of any river used for the transit of timber or other forest-produce, and the throwing of grass, brushwood, branches and leaves into any such river, or any act which may cause such river to be closed or obstructed;

(g) provide for the prevention and removal of any obstruction of the channel or banks of any such river, and for recovering the cost of such prevention or removal from the person whose acts or negligence necessitated the same;

(h) prohibit absolutely or subject to conditions, within specified local limits, the establishment of saw-pits, the converting, cutting, burning, concealing or marking of timber, the altering or effacing of any marks on the same, and the possession or carrying of marking-hammers or other implements used for marking timber;

(i) regulate the use of property-marks for timber, and the registration of such marks; prescribe the time for which such registration shall hold good; limit the number of such marks that may be registered by any one person, and provide for the levy of fees for such registration.

42. The Local Government may by such rules

Penalty for breach of rules made under section 41. prescribe as penalties for the infringement thereof imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or both.

Double penalties may be inflicted in cases where the offence is committed after sunset and before sunrise, or after preparation for resistance to lawful authority, or if the offender has been previously convicted of a like offence.

43. The Government shall not be responsible for Government and forest officers not liable for damage to forest-produce at depôt. any loss or damage which may occur in respect of any timber or other forest-produce while at a depôt established under a rule made under section forty-one, or while detained elsewhere for the purposes of this Act; and no Forest-officer shall be responsible for any such loss or damage unless he causes such loss or damage negligently, maliciously or fraudulently.

44. In case of any accident or emergency

All persons bound to assist in case of accident at depôt. involving danger to any property at any such depôt, every person employed at such depôt, whether by the Government or by any private person, shall render assistance to any Forest-officer or Police-officer demanding his aid in averting such danger and securing such property from damage or loss.

CHAPTER IX.

OF THE COLLECTION OF DRIFT AND STRANDED

TIMBER.

45. All timber found adrift, beached, stranded, or sunk;

Certain kinds of timber to be deemed property of Government until title thereto proved, and may be collected accordingly. all wood or timber bearing marks which have not been registered under section forty-one, or on which the marks have been obliterated, altered or defaced by fire or otherwise, and,

in such areas as the Local Government directs, all unmarked wood and timber, shall be deemed to be the property of Government unless and until any person establishes his right and title thereto, as provided in this chapter.

Such timber may be collected by any Forest-officer or other person entitled to collect the same by virtue of any rule made under section fifty-one, and may be brought to such depôts as the Forest-officer may from time to time notify as depôts for the reception of drift-timber.

The Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, exempt any class of timber from the provisions of this section, and withdraw such exemption.

46. Public notice shall from time to time be

Notice to claimants of drift-timber. given by the Forest-officer, of timber collected under section forty-five. Such notice shall contain a description of the timber, and shall require any person claiming the same to present to such officer, within a period not less than two months from the date of such notice, a written statement of such claim.

47. When any such statement is presented as aforesaid, the Forest-officer may, after making such enquiry as he thinks fit, either reject the claim after recording his reasons for so doing, or deliver the timber to the claimant.

If such timber is claimed by more than one person, the Forest-officer may either deliver the same to any of such persons whom he deems entitled thereto, or may refer the claimants to the Civil Courts, and retain the timber pending the receipt of an order from any such Court for its disposal.

Any person whose claim has been rejected under this section may, within two months from the date of such rejection, institute a suit to recover possession of the timber claimed by him; but no person shall recover any compensation or costs against the Government, or against any Forest-officer, on account of such rejection, or the detention or removal of any timber, or the delivery thereof to any other person under this section.

No such timber shall be subject to process of any Civil, Criminal, or Revenue Court until it has been delivered, or a suit has been brought, as provided in this section.

48. If no such statement is presented as aforesaid, or if the claimant omits to prefer his claim in the manner and within the period prescribed by the notice issued under section forty-six, or, on such claim having been so preferred by him and having been rejected, omits to institute a suit to recover possession of such timber within the further period limited by section forty-seven, the ownership of such timber shall vest in the Government, or when such timber has been delivered to another person under section forty-seven, in such other person, free from all encumbrances.

49. The Government shall not be responsible for any loss or damage which may occur in respect of any timber collected under section forty-five, and no Forest-officer shall be responsible for any such loss or damage, unless he causes such loss or damage negligently, maliciously or fraudulently.

50. No person shall be entitled to recover possession of any timber collected or delivered as aforesaid until he has paid to the Forest-officer or other person entitled to receive it such sum on account thereof as may be due under any rule made in pursuance of section fifty-one

Payments to be made by claimant before timber is delivered to him.

51. The Local Government may from time to time make rules to regulate the following matters (namely) :—

Power to make rules and prescribe penalties.

(a) the salvaging, collection and disposal of all timber mentioned in section forty-five;

(b) the use and registration of boats used in salvaging and collecting timber;

(c) the amounts to be paid for salvaging, collecting, moving, storing and disposing of such timber;

(d) the use and registration of hammers and other instruments to be used for marking such timber.

The Local Government may from time to time prescribe, as penalties for the infringement of any rules made under this section, imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or both.

CHAPTER X.

PENALTIES AND PROCEDURE.

52. When there is reason to believe that a forest-offence has been committed in respect of any forest-produce, such produce, together with all tools, boats, carts and cattle used in committing any such offence, may be seized by any Forest-officer or Police-officer.

Seizure of property liable to confiscation.

Every officer seizing any property under this section shall place on such property a mark indicating that the same has been so seized, and shall, as soon as may be, make a report of such seizure to the Magistrate having jurisdiction to try the offence on account of which the seizure has been made:

Provided that when the forest-produce with respect to which such offence is believed to have been committed is the property of Government and the offender is unknown, it shall be sufficient if the officer makes, as soon as may be, a report of the circumstances to his official superior.

53. Upon the receipt of any such report the Magistrate shall, with all convenient dispatch, take such measures as may be necessary for the arrest and trial of the offender and the disposal of the property according to law.

54. All timber or forest-produce which is not the property of Government and in respect of which a forest-offence has been committed, and all tools, boats, carts and cattle used in committing any forest-offence, shall be liable to confiscation.

Forest-produce, tools, &c., when liable to confiscation.

Such confiscation may be in addition to any other punishment prescribed for such offence.

55. When the trial of any forest-offence is concluded, any forest-produce in respect of which such offence has been committed shall, if it is the property of Government or has been confiscated, be taken charge of by a Forest-officer, and in any other case may be disposed of in such manner as the Court may direct.

Disposal, on conclusion of trial for forest-offence, of produce in respect of which it was committed.

56. When the offender is not known, or cannot be found, the Magistrate may, if he finds that an offence has been committed, order the property in respect of which the offence has been committed to be confiscated and taken charge of by the Forest-officer, or to be made over to the person whom he deems to be entitled to the same:

Procedure when offender not known, or cannot be found.

Provided that no such order shall be made until the expiration of one month from the date of seizing such property, or without hearing the person (if any) claiming any right thereto, and the evidence (if any) which he may produce in support of his claim.

57. The Magistrate may, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, direct the sale of any property seized under section fifty-two and subject to speedy and natural decay, and may deal with the proceeds as he would have dealt with such property if it had not been sold.

Procedure as to perishable property seized under section 52.

Seized under section fifty-two

58. The officer who made the seizure under section fifty-two or any of his official superiors, or any person claiming to be interested in the property so seized, may, within one month from the date of any order passed under section fifty-four, fifty-five or fifty-six, appeal therefrom to the Court to which orders made by such Magistrate are ordinarily appealable, and the order passed on such appeal shall be final.

Appeal from orders under sections 54, 55 and 56.

Seized under section fifty-two

59. When an order for the confiscation of any property has been passed under section fifty-four or fifty-six, as the case may be, and the period limited by section fifty-eight for an appeal from such order has elapsed and no such appeal has been preferred, or when, on such an appeal being preferred, the Appellate Court confirms such order in respect of the whole or a portion of such property, such property or such portion thereof, as the case may be, shall vest in the Government free from all incumbrances.

Property when to vest in Government.

60. Nothing hereinbefore contained shall be deemed to prevent any officer empowered in this behalf by the Local Government from directing at any time the immediate release of any property seized under section fifty-two.

61. Any Forest-officer or Police-officer who vexatiously and unnecessarily seizes any property on pretence of seizing property liable to confiscation under this Act, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

Saving of power to release property seized.

Punishment for wrongful seizure.

62. Whoever, with intent to cause damage or injury to the public or to any person, or to cause wrongful gain as defined in the Indian Penal Code,—

Penalty for counterfeiting or defacing marks on trees and timber and for altering boundary-marks.

(a) knowingly counterfeits upon any timber or standing tree a mark used by Forest-officers to indicate that such timber or tree is the property of the Government or of some person, or that it may lawfully be cut or removed by some person; or shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

(b) alters, defaces or obliterates any such mark placed on a tree or on timber by or under the authority of a Forest-officer; or

63. Any Forest-officer or Police-officer may, without orders from a Magistrate and without a warrant, arrest any person against whom a reasonable suspicion exists of his having been concerned in any forest-offence punishable with imprisonment for one month or upwards.

Every officer making an arrest under this section shall without unnecessary delay take or send the person arrested before the Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case.

An Act to consolidate and amend the law relating to the levy of Sea Customs-duties.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to the levy of Sea Customs-duties; It is enacted as follows:

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

1. This Act may be called "The Sea Customs Short title. Act, 1878:"

It extends to the whole of British India, and shall come into force on the first day of April 1878.

2. The Acts mentioned in the first schedule hereto annexed are repealed to the extent specified therein.

All references to any of the said Acts, in Acts References to enact- passed subsequently thereto, shall be read as if made to the corresponding provisions of this Act.

All appointments, rules, declarations, exemptions, &c. powers conferred, forms and conditions prescribed, values, fees, rates, and periods fixed, and notifications, instructions, directions, prohibitions, passes and licenses issued, under any Act hereby repealed shall, if the same are in force at the time this Act comes into force, be deemed to have been respectively made, conferred, prescribed, fixed and issued under this Act, in so far as they are consistent herewith.

3. In this Act, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context—

(a) "Chief Customs-Authority" denotes the person authorized to exercise, subject to the Local Government, the chief control in matters relating to Sea-customs in any place in which this Act operates:

(b) "Chief Customs-Officer" denotes the Chief Executive Officer of Sea-customs for any Port to which this Act applies:

"Chief Customs-Officer." of Customs for the time being in separate charge of a Custom-house, or duly authorized to perform all, or any special, duties of an officer so in charge:

(d) Customs-port" means any place except Aden declared under section 11 to be a Port for the shipment and landing of goods:

(e) "Foreign Port" means Aden and any place beyond the limits of British India:

(f) "Vessel" includes anything made for the conveyance by water of human beings or property:

(g) "Coasting vessel" denotes any vessel proceeding from one Customs-port to another Customs-port, whether touching at any intermediate Foreign Port or not: or proceeding from or to a Customs-port to or from a place declared to be a port under section 12:

(h) "Master" when used in relation to any vessel means any person, except a Pilot or Harbour Master, having command or charge of such vessel:

(i) "Warehousing port" means any Customs-port declared under section 14 to be a warehousing port:

(j) "Warehouse" denotes any place appointed or licensed under section 15 or section 16.

4. When any person is expressly or impliedly authorized by the owner of any goods to be his agent in respect of such goods for all or any of the purposes of this Act, and such authorization is approved by the Customs-collector, such person shall, for such purposes, be deemed to be the owner of such goods.

5. Anything which a Master is required or empowered to do under this Act may, with the express or implied consent of such Master and the approval of the Customs-collector, be done by a ship's agent.

CHAPTER II.

APPOINTMENT AND POWERS OF OFFICERS, &c.

6. The Local Government of every place in which duties of Sea-customs are leviable, may appoint such persons as it thinks fit to be officers of Customs, and to exercise the powers conferred, and to perform the duties imposed, by this Act on such officers.

Every person so appointed may be suspended or dismissed by the Local Government which appointed him.

7. The Local Government may delegate to any officer of Customs any of the powers vested in it by the first clause of section 6.

Every person appointed in exercise of such delegated power may be suspended or dismissed by the officer who appointed him.

8. At any place for which there is no Custom-house, the Collector of the District and the officers subordinate to him shall, unless the Local Government otherwise directs, perform all duties imposed by this Act on a Customs-collector and other officers of Customs.

9. The Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time, with the sanction of the Local Government, make rules consistent with this Act

(a) prescribing and limiting the powers and duties of officers of Customs,

(b) regulating the delegation of their duties by such officers; and

(c) generally to carry out the provisions of this Act.

10. No Chief Customs-Authority or Chief Customs-Officer, and no other officer of Customs whom such Chief Authority or Chief Officer deems it necessary to exempt on grounds of public duty, shall be compelled to serve on any jury or inquest, or as an assessor.

CHAPTER III.

APPOINTMENT OF PORTS, WHARVES, CUSTOM-HOUSES, WAREHOUSES AND BOARDING AND LANDING-STATIONS.

11. The Local Government may from time to time, by notification in the official Gazette,

(a) declare the places within the territories administered by it which alone shall be Ports for the shipment and landing of goods;

(b) declare the limits of such Ports;

(c) appoint proper places therein to be Wharves for the landing and shipping of goods, or of particular classes of goods;

(d) declare the limits of any such Wharf;

(e) alter the name of any such Port or Wharf; and

(f) declare what shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be a Custom-house, and the limits thereof.

12. The Local Government may also from time to time in like manner declare places to be Ports for the carrying on of coasting trade with Customs-ports, or with any specified Customs-port, and for no other purpose.

13. The Governor General in Council may from time to time direct, by notification in the Gazette of India, that all goods or any specified class of goods imported from or exported to any Foreign Port to or from a Customs-port shall, with such limitations and on such conditions (if any) as he thinks fit, be treated for any of the purposes of this Act as goods imported from or exported to a Customs-port as the case may be.

14. The Local Government may from time to time declare, by notification in the official Gazette, that any Customs-port shall be a Warehousing Port for the purposes of this Act.

15. At any Warehousing Port, the Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time appoint public warehouses wherein dutiable goods may be deposited without payment of duty on the first importation thereof, and may cancel such appointment.

16. At any Warehousing Port, the Chief Customs-Officer may from time to time license private warehouses wherein dutiable goods may be deposited as aforesaid.

Every application for a license for a private warehouse shall be in writing, and shall be drawn up in such form as is from time to time prescribed by the Chief Customs-Authority, and shall be signed by the applicant.

Every license granted under this section may be cancelled on conviction of the licensee of any offence under this Act relating to warehouses, unless it is otherwise provided in the license, or on the expiration of one month's notice in writing given to the licensee by the Chief Customs-Officer.

17. The Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time appoint, in or near any Customs-port, stations or limits at or within which vessels arriving at, or departing from, such Port shall bring-to for the boarding or landing of officers of Customs, and may, unless separate provision therefor has been made under the Indian Ports Act, 1875, direct at what particular place in any such Port vessels, not brought into Port by pilots, shall anchor or moor.

CHAPTER IV.

PROHIBITIONS AND RESTRICTIONS OF IMPORTATION AND EXPORTATION.

18. No goods specified in the following clauses shall be brought, whether by land or sea, into British India :—

(a) any book printed in infringement of any law in force in British India on the subject of copyright, when the proprietor of such copyright, or his agent, has given to the Chief Customs-Authority a notice in writing that such copyright subsists, and a statement of the date on which it will expire :

(b) counterfeit coin : or coin which purports to be Queen's coin of India, or to be coin made under the Native Coinage Act, 1876, but which is not of the established standard in weight or fineness :

(c) any obscene book, pamphlet, paper, drawing, representation, figure or article :

(d) articles bearing any names, brands or marks being, or purporting to be, the names, brands or marks of manufacturers resident in the United Kingdom or British India, and not made by such manufacturers.

19. The Governor General in Council may from time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India, prohibit or restrict the bringing or taking by sea or by land goods of any specified description into or out of British India or any specified part of British India.

CHAPTER V.

LEVY OF, AND EXEMPTION FROM, CUSTOMS-DUTIES.

20. Except as herein after provided, Customs-duties shall be levied at such rates as may be prescribed by or under any law for the time being in force, on—

(a) goods imported or exported by sea into or from any Customs-port from or to any Foreign Port ;

(b) opium, salt or salted fish imported by sea from any Customs-port into any other Customs-port ;

(c) goods brought from any Foreign Port to any Customs-port, and without payment of duty, there transhipped for, or thence carried to, and imported at any other Customs-port ; and

(d) goods brought in bond from one Customs-port to another :

Provided that no such duties shall be levied on goods belonging to the Government.

21. Except as otherwise expressly provided by any law for the time being in force, goods whereof any article liable to duty under this Act forms a part or ingredient shall be chargeable with the full duty which would be payable on such goods if they were entirely composed of such article, or if composed of more than one article liable to duty then with the full duty which would be payable on such goods if they were entirely composed of the article charged with the highest rate of duty.

22. The Governor General in Council may from time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India, fix, for the purpose of levying duties, tariff-values of any goods exported or imported by sea on which Customs-duties are by law imposed, and alter any such values fixed by any Tariff Act for the time being in force.

23. The Governor General in Council may from time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India, exempt any goods imported into, or exported from, British India, or into or from any specified Port therein, from the whole or any part of the Customs-duties leviable on such goods.

The Local Government may, by special order in each case, exempt from the payment of duty, under circumstances of an exceptional nature, to be stated in such order, any goods on which Customs-duties are leviable.

24. The Customs-collector may, subject to any general rules relating to the lading and shipping of passengers' baggage and the passing of the same through the Custom-house, which may be made under section 75, pass free of duty any baggage in actual use, and for this purpose may determine, subject to any such rules, whether any goods shall be treated as baggage in actual use, or as goods subject to duty.

25. If goods produced or manufactured in British India be imported into any Customs-port from any Foreign Port, such goods shall be liable to all the duties, conditions and restrictions (if any) to which goods of the like kind and value not so produced or manufactured are liable on the first importation thereof :

Provided that, if such importation takes place within three years after the exportation of such goods, and it is proved to the satisfaction of the Customs-collector that the property in such goods has continued in the person by whom, or on whose account, they were exported, the goods may be admitted without payment of duty.

26. Any goods produced or manufactured in British India which have been exported therefrom, and on the exportation of which any drawback of excise has been received shall, on being imported into any Customs-port, be subjected, unless the Chief Customs-Authority in any particular case otherwise directs by special order, to payment of excise duty, at the rate to which goods of the like kind and quality are liable at such port.

27. All goods derelict, jetsam, flotsam and wreck, brought or coming into any place in British India shall be subject to the same duties, if any, to which goods of the like kind are for the time being subject on importation at any Customs-port and shall in other respects be dealt with as if they were imported from a foreign port, unless it be shown to the satisfaction of the Customs-collector that such goods are the produce or manufacture of any place, from which they are entitled to be admitted duty-free.

28. Provisions and stores produced or manufactured in British India, required for use on board of any vessel proceeding to any Foreign Port, may be shipped free of duty, whether of customs or excise, in such quantities as the Customs-collector determines with reference to the tonnage of the vessel, the numbers of the crew and passengers, and the length of the voyage on which the vessel is about to depart :

Provided that no rum shall be so shipped on any vessel going on a voyage of less than thirty days' probable duration.

29. On the importation into, or exportation from, any Customs-port of any goods, whether liable to duty or not, the owner of such goods shall, in his bill of entry or shipping-bill, as the case may be, state the real value, quantity, and description of such goods to the best of his knowledge and belief, and shall subscribe a declaration of the truth of such statement at the foot of such bill.

In case of doubt, the Customs-collector may require any such owner to declare the real value, &c., of goods in bill of entry or shipping-bill. or any other person in possession of any invoice, broker's note, policy of insurance or other document, whereby the real value, quantity, or description of any such goods can be ascertained, to produce the same, and to furnish any information relating to such value, quantity, or description which it is in his power to furnish. And thereupon such person shall produce such document and furnish such information :

Provided that, if the owner makes and subscribes a declaration before the Customs-collector to the effect that he is unable, from want of full information, to state the real value or contents of any case, package or parcel of goods, then the Customs-collector shall permit him, previous to the entry thereof, (1) to open such case, package or parcel, and examine the contents in presence of an officer of Customs, or (2) to deposit such case, package or parcel in a public warehouse appointed under section 15 without warehousing the same, pending the production of such information.

30. For the purposes of this Act the real value shall be deemed to be—

(a) the wholesale cash-price, less trade-discount, for which goods of the like kind and quality are sold, or are capable of being sold, at the time and place of importation or exportation as the case may be, without any abatement or deduction whatever, except (in the case of goods imported) of the amount of the duties payable on the importation thereof : or,

(b) where such price is not ascertainable, the cost at which goods of the like kind and quality could be delivered at such place without any abatement or deduction except as aforesaid.

31. Goods chargeable with duty upon the Examination of ad-value thereof, but for which valorem goods. a specific value is not fixed by law for the purpose of levying duties thereon, shall, without unnecessary delay, be examined by an officer of Customs. If it appears that the real value of such goods is correctly stated in the bill-of-entry or shipping-bill, the goods shall be assessed in accordance therewith.

32. If it appears that such goods are properly chargeable with a higher rate or amount of duty than that to which they would be subject according to the value thereof as stated in the bill-of-entry or shipping-bill, such officer may detain such goods.

In every such case the detaining officer shall forthwith give notice in writing to the owner of the goods of their detention, and of the value thereof as estimated by him; and the Customs-collector shall, within two clear working days after such detention, or within such reasonable period as may with the consent of the parties be arranged, determine either to deliver such goods on payment of duty charged according to the entry of such owner, or to retain the same for the use of Government.

If the goods be retained for the use of Government, the Customs-collector shall cause the full amount stated in the bill as their real value to be paid to the owner in full satisfaction for such goods, in the same manner as if they had been transferred by ordinary sale, and shall, after due notice in the local official Gazette, or some local newspaper and without unnecessary delay, cause them to be put up to public auction in wholesale lots for cash on delivery.

If the Customs-collector deems the highest offer made at such sale to be inadequate, he may either adjourn the sale to some other day, to be notified as aforesaid, or buy in the goods, and without unnecessary delay dispose of them for the benefit of Government.

If the proceeds arising from such sale exceed the sum paid to the owner, together with (in the case of goods imported) the duty to which the goods are liable and all charges incurred by Government in connection with them, a portion not exceeding one-half of the overplus shall, at the discretion of the Chief Officer of Customs, be payable to the officer who detected the under-valuation of the goods.

Nothing in this section shall prevent the Chief Officer of Customs, when he has reason to believe that any such under-valuation was solely the result of accident or error, from permitting the owner of the goods, on his application for that purpose, to amend such entry, on payment of such increased rate of duties on the excess of the amended over the original valuation, or on such other terms as the Chief Officer of Customs may determine.

33. If, on the first examination of any such goods under section 31, the owner thereof states in writing that such goods are, in consequence of damage sustained before delivery of the bill of entry, of value less than that stated in such bill, the Customs-collector, on being satisfied of the fact, may allow abatement of duty accordingly.

The reduced duty to be levied on such goods may be ascertained by either of the following methods, at the option of the owner—

(a) the real value of such goods may be fixed on appraisement by an officer of Customs and the duty may be assessed on the value so fixed; or

(b) the goods may, after due notice in the local official Gazette or some local newspaper, be sold by public auction at such time (within thirty days from the date of delivery of the bill of entry), and at such place, as the Customs-collector appoints; and the duty may be assessed on the gross amount realized by such sale, without any abatement or deduction, except (in the case of goods imported) of so much as represents the duties payable on the importation thereof.

34. When any goods, the value of which has been fixed by law for the purpose of levying duties thereon, have, before delivery of the bill-of-entry, deteriorated to the extent of more than one-tenth of their value, the duty on such goods shall if the owner thereof so desires be assessed ad valorem.

The real value of such goods shall be ascertained as provided in section 33, and the duty shall be assessed thereon.

35. No abatement of duty on account of damage shall be allowed on wines, spirit or beer, or on any other articles on which duties are levied on quantity and not on value.

36. Except as provided in section 94, no amendment of a bill of entry or shipping-bill relating to goods assessed for duty on the declared value, quantity, or description thereof shall be allowed after such goods have been removed from the Custom-house.

37. The rate of duty and the tariff valuation (if any) applicable to any goods imported shall be the rate and valuation in force on the date on which the bill of entry thereof is delivered to the Customs-collector under section 86:

Provided that when such rate or valuation has been raised after the grant of port-clearance at the port of shipment, the rate and valuation applicable to such goods shall be the rate and valuation in force on the date of such grant.

Provided also that if such goods are warehoused and re-assessed under section 115 of this Act, the rate and valuation applicable thereto shall be the rate and valuation in force at the time when application is made to clear such goods for home consumption.

Explanation.—A bill of entry shall for the purposes of this section be deemed to be delivered when it is first presented to the proper officer of Customs.

38. The rate of duty and tariff valuation (if any) applicable to any goods exported shall be the rate and valuation in force when a shipping-bill of such goods is delivered under section 137.

39. When Customs-duties or charges have been short-levied through inadvertence, error, collusion or misconstruction on the part of the officers of Customs, or through mis-statement as to real value, quantity, or description on the part of the owner, or when any such duty, or charge after having been levied, has been owing to any such cause erroneously refunded, the person chargeable with the duty or charge so short-levied, or to whom such refund has erroneously been made, shall pay the deficiency or repay the amount paid to him in excess, on demand being made within three months from the date of the first assessment or making of the refund;

and the Customs-collector may refuse to pass any goods belonging to such person until the said deficiency or excess be paid or repaid.

40. No Customs-duties or charges which have error or misconstruction, shall be returned, unless such claim is made within three months from the date of such payment.

41. The Customs-collector may, if he thinks fit, instead of requiring payment of Customs-duties and charges due from any mercantile firm or public body, at the time such duties and charges are payable under this Act, keep with such firm or body an account current of such duties and charges. Such account shall be settled at intervals not exceeding one month, and such firm or body shall make a deposit or furnish security sufficient in the opinion of the Customs-collector to cover the amount which may at any time be due from them in respect of such duties and charges.

imported by sea into any

Customs-port from any Foreign Port, and upon which duties of Customs have been paid on importation, are re-exported by sea from such Customs-port to any Foreign Port, or as provisions or stores for use on board a ship proceeding to a Foreign Port, seven-eighths of such duties shall, except as otherwise hereinafter, provided be repaid as drawback :

Provided that, in every such case, the goods be identified to the satisfaction of the Customs-collector at such Customs-port, and that the re-export be made within two years from the date of importation, as shown by the records of the Custom-house, or within such extended term as the Chief Customs-Authority, on sufficient cause being shown, in any case determines.

43. When any goods having been charged with import-duty at one Customs-port and thence exported to another, are re-exported by sea as aforesaid, drawback shall be allowed on such goods as if they had been so re-exported from the former port.

Provided that, in every such case, the goods be identified to the satisfaction of the officer in charge of the Custom-house at the Port of final exportation, and that such final exportation be made within three years from the date on which they were first imported into British India.

wine and spirit intended for the consumption of any officer of Her Majesty's Navy, on board of any of Her Majesty's ships in actual service, unless such wine and spirit have been warehoused without payment of duty on the first entry thereof.

The quantity of wine and spirit on which drawback may be so allowed in any one year for the use of such officers shall not exceed the quantities hereinafter allowed for each such officer respectively; that is to say—back for wine or spirit, as provided in section 44, shall state in the shipping bill the name of the officer for whose use such wine or spirit is intended, and of the ship in which he serves, as well as the place and date of the last supply for which drawback was allowed.

All such wine and spirit shall be delivered into the charge of the proper officers of Customs at the Port of shipment, to be shipped under their care; and when the officer commanding the ship has certified the receipt of such wine and spirit into his charge, and any such officer ofcus-toms has certified the shipment, the drawback shall be paid to the person entitled to receive the same.

46. The Customs-collector may permit the trans-

Transfer of wine or spirit from one Naval officer to another.

fer of any such wine or spirit from one Naval officer to another Naval officer on board of the same, or of any other such vessel, as part of his authorized quantity; or may permit the transshipment of any such wine or spirit from one vessel to another for the use of the same Naval officer; or the re-landing and warehousing of any such wine or spirit for future re-shipment.

The Customs-collector may also receive back the duties for any such wine or spirit, and allow the same to be cleared for home-consumption.

47. Provisions and stores for the use of Her officer thereof which are subject to duty may, in like manner, be transferred, transhipped or relanded and warehoused, free of duty; and where duties have been paid on any such provisions or stores required for shipment, drawback of such duties, whether of customs or excise, shall be allowed on receipt of an application in writing from the officer commanding the ship for which they are intended, or from some other officer duly authorized to make such application.

as to officers of Her Majesty's Navy apply also to officers of Her Majesty's Indian

Marine and Marine-survey on board of any of the ships of such Marine or Survey proceeding to any port out of India, and the rules prescribed by section 47 as to provisions and stores for the use of Her Majesty's Navy apply also to provisions and stores for the use of such Marine or Survey.

49. The Governor General in Council may from time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India, Power to declare what goods are identifiable,

(a) declare what goods shall, for the purpose of this chapter, be deemed to be capable of being easily identified; and

(b) prohibit the payment of drawback upon the re-exportation of goods to any specified Foreign Port in India.
and may prohibit drawback in case of specified Foreign Port.

50. Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, no drawback shall be allowed—
When no drawback allowed.

(a) upon goods not included in the export-manifest, or

(b) where the goods to be exported are of less value than the amount of drawback claimed, or

(c) where the claim is for drawback amounting, in respect of any single shipment, to less than five rupees, and the Customs-collector thinks fit to reject it, or

(d) on salt, salted fish, or opium.

51. No drawback shall be allowed unless the claim to receive such drawback be made and established at the time of re-export.
Time to claim drawback.

No such payment of drawback shall be made until the vessel carrying the goods has put out to sea, or unless payment be demanded within six months from the date of entry for shipment.
When payment made.

52. Every person, or his duly authorized agent, claiming drawback on any goods duly exported, shall make and subscribe a declaration that such goods have been actually exported, and have not been re-landed and are not intended to be re-landed at any Customs-port; and that such person was at the time of entry outwards and shipment, and continues to be, entitled to drawback thereon.
Declaration by parties claiming drawback.

CHAPTER VII.

ARRIVAL AND DEPARTURE OF VESSELS.

Arrival and entry of vessel inwards.

53. The Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, fix a place in any river or Port, beyond which no vessel arriving shall pass until a manifest has been delivered to the Pilot, officer of Customs or other person duly authorized to receive the same.
Power to fix places beyond which inward-bound vessels are not to proceed until manifest delivered.

If, in any river or Port wherein a place has been fixed by the Local Government under this section, the Master of any vessel arriving remains outside or below the place so fixed, such Master shall, nevertheless, within twenty-four hours after the vessel anchors, deliver a manifest to the Pilot, officer of Customs or other person authorized to receive the same.
Delivery of manifest when vessel anchors below place so fixed.

54. If any vessel arrives at any Customs-port in which a place has not been so fixed, the Master of such vessel shall, within twenty-four hours after such vessel has anchored within the limits of the Port, deliver a manifest to the Pilot, officer of Customs or other person authorized to receive the same.
Delivery of manifest where no place has been so fixed.

55. Every manifest shall be signed by the Master, shall specify all goods imported in such vessel, showing separately all goods (if any) intended to be landed, transhipped or taken on to another Port, and all ships' stores intended for consumption in Port or on the homeward voyage, and shall contain such further particulars, and be made out in such form, as the Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time direct.
Signature and contents of manifest.

The Customs-collector shall permit the Master to amend any obvious error in the manifest, or to supply any omission which in the opinion of such Collector results from accident or inadvertence, by furnishing an amended or supplementary manifest, Amendment of errors in manifest.

and may, if he thinks fit, levy thereon such fee as the Chief Customs-Authority from time to time directs.

Except as herein provided no import manifest shall be amended.

56. The person receiving a manifest under section 53 or 54 shall counter-sign the same and enter thereon such particulars as the Chief Customs-Authority from time to time directs in this behalf.
Duty of person receiving manifest.

57. No vessel arriving in any Customs-port shall be allowed to break bulk until a manifest has been delivered as hereinbefore provided; nor until a copy of such manifest, together with an application for entry of such vessel inwards, has been presented by the Master to the Customs-collector, and an order has been given thereon for such entry.
Bulk not to be broken until manifest, &c., delivered, and vessel entered inwards.

58. The Master shall, if required so to do by the Customs-collector at the time of presenting such application, deliver to the Customs-collector the bill of lading or a copy thereof for every part of the cargo laden on board, and any port-clearance, cockett or other paper granted in respect of such vessel at the place from which she is stated to have come, and shall answer all such questions relating to the vessel, cargo, crew and voyage as are put to him by such officer.
Master, if required, to deliver bill of lading, &c., to Customs-collector.

The Customs-collector may, if any requisition or question made or put by him under this section is not complied with or answered, refuse to grant such application.

59. Notwithstanding anything contained in section 57, the Customs-collector may grant, prior to receipt of the manifest, and to the entry inwards of the vessel, a special pass permitting bulk to be broken.
Special pass for break-bulk.

The granting of such pass shall be subject to such rules as may from time to time be made by the Chief Customs-Authority.

60. Notwithstanding anything contained in Manifest, &c., may be section 53, 54, 57 or 58, delivered by ship's agent. the Customs-collector may accept from the ship's agent in lieu of the Master delivery of the manifest or of any other document required by those sections to be delivered by the Master.

Entry outwards, port-clearance and departure of vessels.

61. No vessel shall take on board any part of her export-cargo, until a written application for entry of such vessel outwards subscribed by the Master of such vessel, has been made to the Customs-collector or before an order has been given thereon by such officer for such entry.

Every application made under this section shall specify the name, tonnage, and national character of the vessel, the name of the Master, and the name of every place for which cargo is to be shipped.

62. No vessel, whether laden or in ballast, shall depart from any Customs-port until a port-clearance has been granted by the Customs-collector or other officer duly authorized to grant the same.

And no Pilot shall take charge of any vessel proceeding to sea, unless the Master of such vessel produces a port-clearance.

63. Every application for port-clearance shall be made by the Master at least twenty-four hours before the intended departure of the vessel.

The Master shall, at the time of applying for port-clearance—

(a) deliver to the Customs-collector a manifest in duplicate in such form as may be prescribed by the Chief Customs-Authority, signed by such Master, specifying all goods to be exported in the vessel, and showing separately all goods and stores entered in the import-manifest, and not landed or consumed on board or transhipped:

(b) deliver to the Customs-collector such shipping bills or other documents as such Customs-collector acting under the general instructions of such Chief Customs-Authority, requires; and

(c) answer to the proper officer of Customs such questions touching the departure and destination of the vessel as are demanded of him.

The provisions of section 55 relating to the amendment of import-manifests shall mutatis mutandis apply also to export manifests delivered under this section.

64. The Customs-collector may refuse port-clearance to any vessel until

(a) the provisions of section 63 are complied with;

(b) all Port-dues and other charges and penalties due by such vessel, or by the owner or Master thereof, and all duties payable in respect of any goods shipped therein have been duly paid, or their payment secured by such guarantee, or by a deposit at such rate as such Customs-collector directs;

(c) the ship's agent (if any) delivers to the Customs-collector a declaration in writing to the effect that he will be liable for any penalty imposed under section 167, No. 17, and furnishes security for the discharge of the same;

(d) the ship's agent (if any) delivers to the Customs-collector a declaration in writing to the effect that such agent is answerable for the discharge of all claims for damage or short delivery which may be established by the owner of any goods comprised in the import-cargo in respect of such goods.

A ship's agent delivering a declaration under clause (c) of this section shall be liable to all penalties which might be imposed on the Master under section 167, No. 17, and a ship's agent delivering a declaration under clause (d) of this section shall be bound to discharge all claims referred to in such declaration.

65. When the Customs-collector is satisfied that the provisions of section 63 and if necessary of clauses (b) and (c) and (d) of section 61 have been complied with, he shall grant a port-clearance to the Master, and shall return at the same time to such Master one copy of the manifest duly countersigned by the proper officer of Customs.

66. Notwithstanding anything contained in sections 64 and 65, the Customs-collector may (subject to such rules as the Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time prescribe) grant a port-clearance to the Master when the ship's agent furnishes such security as the Customs-collector deems sufficient for duly delivering, within five days from the date of such grant, the manifest and other documents specified in section 63.

CHAPTER VIII.

GENERAL PROVISIONS AFFECTING VESSELS IN PORT.

67. The Customs-collector at any Customs-port may at any time depute at his discretion one or more officers of Customs to board any vessel in or arriving at such Port.

Every officer of Customs so sent shall remain on board of such vessel by day and by night unless or until the Customs-collector otherwise orders.

68. Whenever an officer of Customs is so deputed on board of any vessel, the Master of such vessel shall be bound to receive on board such officer, and one servant of such officer, and to provide such officer and servant with suitable accommodation of shelter and accommodation, and likewise with a due allowance of fresh water, and with the means of cooking on board.

69. Every officer of Customs so deputed shall have free access to every part of the vessel, and may fasten down any hatchway or entrance to the hold, and mark any goods before landing, and lock up, seal, mark, or otherwise secure any goods on board of such vessel.

If any box, place or closed receptacle in any Power to authorise such vessel be locked, and search and opening of the key be withheld, such lock. officer shall report the same to the Customs-collector, who may thereupon issue to the officer on board, or to any other officer under his authority, a written order to search.

On production of such order, the officer bearing the same may require that any such box, place or closed receptacle be opened in his presence; and, if it be not opened upon his requisition, he may break open the same.

70. Unless with the written permission of the Customs-collector or in accordance with a general permission granted under section 74, no goods, other than passengers' baggage, or ballast urgently required to be shipped for the vessel's safety, shall be shipped or waterborne to be shipped or discharged from any vessel in any Customs-port, except in the presence of an officer of Customs.

71. When an officer of Customs is deputed Period allowed for discharge and shipment of cargo. under section 67 to remain on board a vessel, the tonnage of which does not exceed six hundred tons, a period of thirty working days, reckoned from the date on which he boards such vessel, or such additional period as the Customs-collector directs, shall be allowed for the discharge of import-cargo and the shipment of export-cargo on board of such vessel.

One additional day shall, in like manner, be allowed for every fifty tons in excess of six hundred.

No charge shall be made for the services of a single officer of Customs for such allowed number of working days, or for the services of several such officers (if available) for respective periods not exceeding in the aggregate such allowed number of working days.

If the period occupied in the discharge and shipment of cargo be in excess of thirty working days, together with the additional period (if any) allowed under this section, the vessel shall be charged with the expense of the officer of Customs at a rate not exceeding five rupees per diem (Sundays and holidays excepted) for such excess period.

In calculating any period allowed, or any charge made, under this section, the period (if any) during which a vessel after the completion of the discharge of import-cargo, and before commencing the shipment of export-cargo, is laid up by the withdrawal of the officer of Customs upon application from the Master, shall be deducted.

72. Except with the written permission of the Customs-collector, no goods, other than passengers' baggage, shall in any Customs-port be discharged from any vessel, or be shipped or water-borne to be shipped—Goods not to be landed, &c., on Sundays or holidays, without permission, nor except within fixed hours.

(a) on any Sunday or on any holiday or day which the discharge or shipping of cargo, as the case may be, is prohibited by the Chief Customs-Authority;

(b) on any day, except between such hours as such authority from time to time appoints by notification in the official Gazette.

73. No goods shall in any Customs-port be landed at any place other than a wharf or other place duly appointed for that purpose, and Goods not to be shipped, &c. except at wharfs. unless with the written permission of the Customs-collector or when a general permission has been granted under section 74, no goods shall in any Customs-port be shipped or water-borne to be shipped from any place other than a wharf or other place duly appointed for that purpose.

74. Notwithstanding anything contained in section 70 or 73, the Chief Customs-Authority may, by notification in the local official Gazette, give general permission for goods to be shipped or water-borne to be shipped in any Customs-port from all or any places not duly appointed as wharves, and without the presence or authority of an officer of Customs.

75. The Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time make rules for the landing and shipping of passengers' baggage and the passing of the same through the Customs-house; and for the landing, shipping and clearing of parcels forwarded by Her Majesty's or other mails, or by other regular packets and passenger vessels.

When any baggage or parcels is or are made over to an officer of customs for the purpose of being landed a fee of such amount as the Local Government from time to time directs shall be chargeable thereon, as compensation for the expense and trouble incurred in landing and depositing the same in the Custom-house.

76. When any goods are water-borne for the purpose of being landed from any vessel and warehoused or cleared for home-consumption, or of being shipped for exportation on board of any vessel, there shall be sent, with each boat-load or other separate despatch, a boat-note specifying the number of packages so sent and the marks and numbers or other description thereof.

Each boat-note for goods to be landed shall be signed by an officer of the vessel, and likewise by the officer of Customs on board, if any such officer be on board, and shall be delivered on arrival to any officer of Customs authorized to receive the same.

Each boat-note for goods to be shipped shall be signed by the proper officer of Customs, and, if an officer of Customs is on board of the vessel on which such goods are to be shipped, shall be delivered to such officer. If no such officer be on board, every such boat-note shall be delivered to the Master of the vessel, or to an officer of the vessel appointed by him to receive it.

The officer of Customs who receives any boat-note of goods landed, and the officer of Customs, Master, or other officer, as the case may be, who receives any boat-note of goods shipped, shall sign the same and note thereon such particulars as the Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time, direct.

The Local Government may from time to time by notification in the local official Gazette, suspend the operation of this section in any Customs-port or part thereof.

77. All goods water-borne for the purpose of being landed or shipped shall be landed or shipped without any unnecessary delay.

Goods water-borne to be forthwith landed or shipped.

78. Except in cases of imminent danger no goods shall be discharged into or loaded in any boat for the purpose of being landed or shipped shall be transhipped into any other boat without the permission of an officer of Customs.

Such goods not to be transhipped without permission.

79. The Local Government may declare with regard to any Customs-port, by notification in the local official Gazette, that after a date therein specified, no boat not duly licensed and registered shall be allowed to ply as a cargo-boat for the landing and shipping of merchandize within the limits of such Port.

Power to prohibit plying of unlicensed cargo-boats.

In any Port with regard to which such notification has been issued, the Chief Officer of Customs or other officer whom the Local Government appoints in this behalf, may, subject to such rules and on payment of such fees as the Local Government from time to time prescribe by notification in the local official Gazette, issue licenses for, and register, cargo boats. Such officer may also, subject to rules so prescribed, cancel any license so issued.

Issue of licenses and registration of cargo-boats.

80. The Customs-collector may, whenever he thinks fit, require that goods stowed in bulk, and brought by sea or intended for exportation, shall be weighed or measured on board-ship before landing or after shipment, and may levy duty according to the result of such weighing or measurement.

Power to require goods to be weighed or measured on board before landing or after shipment.

CHAPTER IX.

OF DISCHARGE OF CARGO AND ENTRY INWARDS OF GOODS.

81. When an order for entry inwards of any vessel which has arrived in any Customs-port, or a special pass permitting such vessel to break bulk, has been given, the discharge of the cargo of such vessel may be proceeded with.

Discharge of cargo may commence on receipt of due permission.

82. Except as otherwise provided in this Act, no goods shall be allowed to leave any such vessel, unless they are entered in the original manifest of such vessel, or in an amended or supplementary manifest received under section 55.

Goods not to leave ship unless entered in manifest.

83. If the owner of any goods (except such as have been shown in the import-manifest as not to be landed) does not land such goods within such period as is specified in the bill of landing of such goods, or if no period is so specified within such number of working days, not exceeding fifteen, after the entry

Procedure in respect of goods not landed within time allowed.

of the vessel importing the same, as the Local Government from time to time appoints by notification in the official Gazette, or if the cargo of any vessel, with the exception of only a small quantity of goods, has been discharged previously to the expiration of the period so specified or appointed, as the case may be,— the Master of such vessel or, on his application, the proper officer of Customs, may then carry such goods to the Custom-house, there to remain for entry.

The Customs-collector shall thereupon take charge of and grant receipts for such goods;

and if notice in writing has been given by the Master that the goods are to remain subject to a lien for freight, primage, general average, or other charges of a stated amount, the Customs-collector shall hold such goods until he receives notice in writing that the said charges are paid.

84. At any time after the arrival of any vessel, the Customs-collector may, with the consent of the Master of such vessel, cause any small package or parcel of goods to be carried to the Custom-house, there to remain for entry, in charge of the officers of Customs, during the remainder of the working days allowed under this Act for the landing of such package or parcel.

Power to land small parcels.

If any package or parcel so carried to the Custom-house remains unclaimed on the expiration of the number of working days so allowed for its landing, or at the time of the clearance outwards of the vessel from which it was landed, the Master may give such notice as is provided in section 83, and the officer in charge of the Custom-house shall thereupon hold such package or parcel as provided in that section.

Notice regarding unclaimed packages.

85. Notwithstanding anything contained in sections 83 and 84 the Customs-collector in any Customs-port to which the Local Government, by notification in the local official Gazette, declares this section to be applicable, may permit the Master of any vessel immediately on receipt of an order under section 57 or special pass under section 59, to discharge the cargo of such vessel or any portion thereof into the custody of the ship's agents if willing to receive the same, for the purpose of landing the same forthwith,—

(a) at the Custom-house or any specified landing-place or wharf; or

(b) at any landing-place or wharf belonging to any Port Commissioners, Port Trust or other public body or company;

Any ship's agent so receiving such cargo or portion shall be bound to discharge all claims for damage or short delivery which may be established in respect of the same by the owner thereof, and shall be entitled to recover from such owner his charges for service rendered, but not for commission or the like, where any agent for the landing of such cargo or portion has been previously appointed by the owner and such appointment is unrevoked.

The Customs-collector shall take charge of all goods discharged under clause (a) of this section, and otherwise proceed in relation thereto as provided in sections 83 and 88.

A public body or company at whose landing place or wharf any goods are discharged under clause (b) of this section, shall not permit the same to be removed without an order in writing from the Customs-collector.

86. The owner of any goods imported shall on the landing thereof from the importing ship make entry of such goods for home consumption or warehousing by delivering to the Customs-collector a bill of entry thereof in duplicate, in such form and containing such particulars, in addition to the particulars specified in section 29, as may, from time to time, be prescribed by the Chief Customs-Authority.

The particulars of such entry shall correspond with the particulars given of the same goods in the manifest of the ship.

87. On the delivery of such bill the duty (if any) leviable on such goods shall be assessed, and the owner of such goods may then proceed to clear the same for home-consumption, or warehouse them, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained.

88. If any goods are not entered and cleared for home-consumption, or warehoused, within four months from the date of entry of the vessel, such goods may, after due notice to the owner, if his address can be ascertained, and in the Local official Gazette, be sold by public auction, and the proceeds thereof shall be applied, first, to the payment of freight, primage and general average, if the goods are held by the Customs-collector subject to such charges under notice given under section 83, 84 or 85; next, to the payment of the duties which would be leviable on such goods if they were then cleared for home-consumption, and next to the payment of the other charges (if any) payable to the Customs-collector in respect of the same.

The surplus, if any, shall be paid to the owner of the goods, on his application for the same; provided that such application be made within one year from the sale of the goods, or that sufficient cause be shown for not making it within such period.

If any goods of which the Customs-collector has taken charge under section 83, 84 or 85 be of a perishable nature, the Customs-collector may at any time direct the sale thereof, and shall apply the proceeds in like manner.

Provided that, where any goods liable to be sold under this section are arms, ammunition or military stores, they may be sold or otherwise disposed of at such place (whether within or without British India), and in such manner, as the Local Government may from time to time direct:

Provided also, that nothing in this section shall authorize the removal for home-consumption of any dutiable goods without payment of duties of customs thereon.

CHAPTER X.

OF CLEARANCE OF GOODS FOR HOME-CONSUMPTION.

89. When the owner of any goods entered for home-consumption, and (if such goods be liable to duty) assessed under section 87, has paid the import-duty (if any) assessed on such goods and any charges payable under this Act in respect of the same, the Customs-officer may make an order clearing the same; and such order shall be sufficient authority for the removal of such goods by the owner.

CHAPTER XI.

WAREHOUSING.

Of the admission of goods into a warehouse.

90. When any dutiable goods have been entered for warehousing and assessed under section 87, the owner of such goods may apply for leave to deposit the same in any warehouse appointed or licensed under this Act.

91. Every such application shall be in writing signed by the applicant, and shall be in such form as is from time to time prescribed by the Chief Customs-Authority.

92. When any such application has been made in respect of any goods, the owner of the goods to which it relates shall execute a bond, binding himself, in a penalty of twice the amount of duty assessed under section 87 on such goods,

(a) to observe all rules prescribed by this Act in respect of such goods;

(b) to pay, on demand, all duties, rent and charges claimable on account of such goods under this Act, together with interest on the same from the date of demand, at such rate not exceeding six per cent. per annum as is for the time being fixed by the Chief Customs-Authority; and

(c) to discharge all penalties incurred for violation of the provisions of this Act in respect of such goods.

Every such bond shall be in the Form marked A hereto annexed, or, when such form is inapplicable or insufficient, in such other form as is from time to time prescribed by the Chief Customs-Authority, and shall relate to the cargo or portion of the cargo of one vessel only.

93. When the provisions of sections 91 and 92 have been complied with in respect of any goods, such goods shall be forwarded in charge of an officer of customs to the warehouse in which they are to be deposited.

A pass shall be sent with the goods specifying the name of the importing vessel and of the bonder, the marks, numbers and contents of each package, and the warehouse or place in the warehouse wherein they are to be deposited.

94. On receipt of the goods, the pass shall be examined by the warehouse-keeper, and shall be returned to the Customs-collector.

No package, butt, cask or hogshead shall be admitted into any warehouse unless it bear the marks and numbers specified in, and otherwise correspond with, the pass for its admission.

If the goods be found to correspond with the pass, the warehouse-keeper shall certify to that effect on the pass, and the warehousing of such goods shall be deemed to have been completed.

If the goods do not so correspond, the fact shall be reported by the warehouse-keeper for the orders of the Customs-collector, and the goods shall either be returned to the Custom-house in charge of an officer of Customs or kept in deposit pending such orders, as the warehouse-keeper deems most convenient.

If the quantity or value of any goods has been erroneously stated in the bill of entry, the error may be rectified at any time before the warehousing of the goods is completed, and not subsequently.

95. Except as provided in section 100, all goods shall be warehoused in the packages, butts, casks or hogsheads in which they have been imported.

96. Whenever any goods are lodged in a public warehouse or a licensed private warehouse, the warehouse-keeper, or, in the case of the Bengal Bonded Warehouse Association, the Secretary of the said Association, shall deliver a warrant signed by him as such to the person lodging the goods.

Such warrant shall be in the Form B hereto annexed, and shall be transferable by endorsement; and the endorsee shall be entitled to receive the goods specified in such warrant on the same terms as those on which the person who originally lodged the goods would have been entitled to receive the same.

The Local Government may by notification in the local official Gazette exempt salt and salted fish from the operation of this section and may in like manner cancel such exemption.

Rules relating to goods in a warehouse.

97. The Customs-collector or any officer deputed by him for the purpose, shall have access to any private warehouse licensed under this Act.

98. The Customs-collector may at any time by order in writing direct that any goods or packages lodged in any warehouse shall be opened, weighed or otherwise examined; and after any goods have been so opened or examined, may cause the same to be sealed or marked in such manner as he thinks fit.

When any goods have been so sealed and marked after examination, they shall not be again opened without the permission of the Customs-collector; and when any such goods have been opened with such permission, the packages shall, if he thinks fit, be again sealed or marked as before.

99. Any owner of goods lodged in a warehouse shall, at any time within the hours of business, have access to his goods in presence of an officer of Customs, and an officer of Customs shall, upon application for the purpose being made in writing to the Customs-collector, be deputed to accompany such owner.

When an officer of Customs is specially employed to accompany such owner, a sum sufficient to meet the expense thereby incurred shall, if the Customs-collector so require, be paid by such owner to the Customs-collector, and such sum shall, if the Customs-collector so direct, be paid in advance.

100. With the sanction of the Customs-collector, and after such notice given, and under such rules and conditions as the Chief Customs-Authority from time to time prescribes, any owner of goods may, either before or after warehousing the same,—

(a) sort, separate, pack and repack the goods and make such alterations therein as may be necessary for the preservation, sale, shipment or disposal thereof (such goods to be repacked in the packages in which they were imported, or in such other packages as the Customs-collector permits);

(b) fill up any casks of wine, spirit or beer from any casks of the same secured in the same warehouse;

(c) mix any wines or spirit of the same sort secured in the same warehouse, erasing from the cask all import-brands, unless the whole of the wine or spirit so mixed be of the same brand;

(d) bottle off wine or spirit from any casks;

(e) take such samples of goods as may be allowed by the Customs-collector with or without entry for home consumption, and with or without payment of duty, except such as may eventually become payable on a deficiency of the original quantity.

After any such goods have been so separated and repacked in proper or approved packages, the Customs-collector may, at the request of the owner of such goods, cause or permit any refuse, damaged, or surplus goods remaining after such separation or repacking (or, at the like request, any goods which may not be worth the duty) to be destroyed, and may remit the duty payable thereon.

101. If goods be lodged in a public warehouse, the owner shall pay monthly, on receiving a bill or written demand for the same from the Customs-collector or other officer deputed by him in that behalf, rent and warehouse-dues at such rates as the Chief Customs-Authority or such officer of customs as such Authority from time to time appoints in this behalf may fix.

A table of the rates of rent and warehouse, dues so fixed shall be placed in a conspicuous part of such warehouse.

If any bill for rent or warehouse-dues presented under this section is not discharged within ten days from the date of presentation, the Customs-collector may, in the discharge of such demand (any transfer or assignment of the goods notwithstanding) cause to be sold by public auction, after due notice in the local official Gazette, such sufficient portion of the goods as he may select.

Out of the proceeds of such sale the Customs-collector shall first satisfy the demand for the discharge of which the sale was ordered, and shall then pay over the surplus (if any) to the owner of the goods:

Provided that the application for such surplus be made within one year from the date of the sale of the goods, or that sufficient cause be shown for not making it within such period.

102. No warehoused goods shall be taken out of any warehouse, except on clearance for home-consumption or shipment, or for removal to another warehouse or as otherwise provided by this Act.

103. Any goods warehoused may be left in the warehouse in which they are deposited or in any warehouse to which they may in manner hereinafter provided be removed till the expiry of three years after the date of the bond executed in relation to such goods under section 92. The owner of any goods remaining in a warehouse on the expiry of such period shall clear the same for home-consumption or shipment in manner hereinafter provided :

Provided that when the license for any private warehouse is cancelled, and the Customs-collector gives notice of such cancelment to the owner of any goods deposited in such warehouse, such owner shall in manner hereinafter provided, and within seven days from the date on which such notice is given, remove such goods to another warehouse or clear them for home-consumption or shipment.

Of the removal of goods from one warehouse to another.

104. Any owner of goods warehoused under this Act may, at any time within three years from the date of the bond executed in respect of such goods under section 92, and with the permission of the Chief Customs-Officer, and on such conditions and after giving such security (if any) as such officer directs, remove goods from one warehouse to another warehouse in the same Port.

When any owner desires so to remove any goods, he shall apply for permission to do so in such form as the Chief Customs-Authority from time to time prescribes.

105. Any owner of goods warehoused at any warehousing Port may, from time to time, within the said period of three years remove the same by sea or by inland carriage, in order to be re-warehoused at any other warehousing Port.

When any owner desires so to remove any goods for such purpose, he shall apply to the Chief Customs-Officer, stating the particulars of the goods to be removed, and the name of the Port to which it is intended that they shall be removed, together with such other particulars, and in such manner and form, as the Chief Customs-Authority from time to time prescribes.

106. When permission is granted for the removal of any goods from one warehousing Port to another under section 105, an account containing the particulars thereof shall be transmitted by the proper officer of the Port of removal to the proper officer of the Port of destination; and the person requiring the removal shall before such removal enter into a bond, with one sufficient surety, in a sum equal at least to the duty chargeable on such goods, for the due arrival and rewarehousing thereof at the Port of destination within such time as the Chief Customs-Authority directs.

Such bond may be taken by the proper officer, either at the Port of removal or at the Port of destination, as best suits the convenience of the owner.

If such bond is taken at the Port of destination, a certificate thereof, signed by the proper officer of such Port, shall, at the time of the removal of such goods, be produced to the proper officer at the Port of removal; and such bond shall not be discharged unless such goods are produced to the proper officer, and duly re-warehoused at the Port of destination within the time allowed for such removal, or are otherwise accounted for to the satisfaction of such officer; nor until the full duty due upon any deficiency of such goods, not so accounted for, has been paid.

107. The Chief Customs-Authority may permit any person desirous of removing warehoused goods to enter into a general bond, with such sureties, in such amount, and under such conditions, as the Chief Customs-Authority approves, for the removal, from time to time, of any goods from one warehouse to another, either in the same or in a different Port, and for the due arrival and re-warehousing of such goods at the Port of destination within such time as such Authority directs.

108. Upon the arrival of warehoused goods at the Port of destination, they shall be entered and warehoused in like manner as goods are entered and warehoused on the first importation thereof, and under the laws and rules, in so far as such laws and rules are applicable, which regulate the entry and warehousing of such last-mentioned goods.

109. Every bond executed under section 92 in respect of any goods shall, unless the Chief Officer of Customs in any case deems a fresh bond to be necessary, continue in force, notwithstanding the subsequent removal of such goods to another warehouse or warehousing port.

Clearance for home-consumption or shipment.

110. Any owner of goods warehoused may, at any time within three years from the date of the bond executed under section 92 in respect of such goods, clear such goods for home-consumption by paying (a) the duty assessed on such goods under section 87, or where the duty on such goods is altered under the provisions hereinafter contained, such altered duty; and (b) all rent, penalties, interest and other charges payable to the Customs-collector in respect of such goods.

111. Any owner of goods warehoused may, at any time within three years from the date of the bond executed under section 92, in respect of such goods clear such goods for shipment to a Foreign Port on payment of all rent, penalties, interest and other charges payable as aforesaid and without payment of import duty on the same :

Provided that the Governor General in Council may prohibit the shipment for exportation to any specified foreign port of warehoused goods in respect of which payment of drawback or transshipment has been prohibited under section 49 or 134 respectively.

112. Provisions and stores warehoused at the time of importation may within the said period of three years be shipped without payment of duty for use on board of any vessel proceeding to a Foreign Port.

Clearance of same for shipment as provisions, &c., on vessels proceeding to Foreign Ports.

113. Application to clear goods from any warehouse for home-consumption or for shipment shall be made in such form as the Chief Customs-Authority from time to time prescribes.

Form of application for clearance of goods.

Such application shall ordinarily be made to the Customs-collector at least twenty-four hours before it is intended so to clear such goods.

114. If any goods upon which duties are leviable ad valorem or on a tariff valuation receive damage through unavoidable accident after they have been entered for warehousing and assessed under section 87, and before they are cleared for home-consumption, they shall, if the owner so desires, be re-assessed for duty according to their actual value, and a new bond for the same may, at the option of the owner, be executed for the unexpired term of warehousing.

Re-assessment of warehoused goods when damaged.

115. If after any goods entered for warehousing have been assessed under section 87, any alteration is made in the duty leviable upon such goods or in the tariff valuation (if any) applicable thereto, such goods shall be re-assessed in accordance with the second proviso to section 37.

Re-assessment on alteration of duty or tariff valuation.

116. If it appear at the time of clearing any wine, spirit, beer or salt from any warehouse for home consumption that there exists a deficiency not otherwise accounted for to the satisfaction of the Customs-collector, an allowance on account of ullage and wastage shall be made in adjusting the duties thereon, as follows (namely),

Allowance in case of wine, spirit, beer or salt.

(a) upon wine, spirit and beer in cask to an extent not exceeding the rates specified below, or such other rates as may from time to time be prescribed in this behalf by the Local Government and notified in the official Gazette :

For any time not exceeding	6 months	...	2½ per cent.
Exceeding 6 months and not exceeding	12 "	...	5 "
Exceeding 12 months and not exceeding	18 "	...	7½ "
Exceeding 18 months and not exceeding	2 years	...	10 "
Exceeding 2 years and not exceeding	3 "	...	12 "

(b) in the case of salt warehoused in a public ware house, only the amount actually cleared shall be charged with Customs-duties ;

(c) in the case of salt warehoused in a private ware house, wastage shall be allowed at such rate as may be prescribed from time to time by the Local Government and notified in the local official Gazette.

117. When any wine, spirit, beer or salt lodged in a warehouse is found to be deficient at the time of the delivery therefrom, and such deficiency is proved to be due solely to ullage or wastage, the Chief Customs-Authority may direct, in respect of any such article, that allowance be made in any special case for a rate of ullage or wastage exceeding that contemplated in section 116.

Further special allowance.

Of the forfeiture and discharge of the bond.

118. If any warehoused goods are removed from the warehouse in contravention of section 102 ; or if any such goods have not been removed from the warehouse at the expiration of the time during which such goods are permitted by section 103 to remain in such warehouse ; or

When goods are improperly removed from warehouses or allowed to remain beyond time fixed.

if any goods in respect of which a bond has been executed under section 92 and which have not been cleared for home-consumption, or shipment or removed under this Act, are lost or destroyed otherwise than as provided in section 100 or as mentioned in section 122, or are not accounted for to the satisfaction of the Customs-collector, or or lost or destroyed.

if any such goods have been taken under section 100 as samples without payment of duty, the Customs-collector may thereupon demand, and the owner of such goods shall forthwith pay, the full amount of duty chargeable on account of such goods, together with all rent, penalties, interest and other charges payable to the Customs-collector on account of the same.

Collector may demand duty, &c.

119. If any owner fails to pay any sum so demanded, the Customs-collector may forthwith either proceed upon the bond executed under section 92, or cause such portion as he thinks fit of the goods (if any) in the warehouse on account of which the amount is due, to be detained with a view to the recovery of the demand ; and if the demand be not discharged within ten days from the date of such detention (due notice thereof being given to the owner), the goods so detained may be sold by public auction duly advertised in the local official Gazette.

Procedure on failure to pay duty, &c.

The net proceeds of any sale so made of goods so detained shall be written off upon the bond in discharge thereof to the amount received, and if any surplus be obtained from such sale, beyond the amount of the demand, such surplus shall be paid to the owner of the goods : Provided that application for the same be made within one year from the sale, or that sufficient cause be shown for not making the application within such period.

No transfer or assignment of the goods shall prevent the Customs-collector from proceeding against such goods in the manner above provided, for any amount due thereon.

120. When any warehoused goods are taken out of any warehouse, the Customs-collector shall cause the fact to be noted on the back of the bond.

Noting removal of goods.

Every note so made shall specify the quantity and description of such goods, the purposes for which they have been removed, the date of removal, the name of the person removing them, the number and date of the shipping bill under which they have been taken away if removed for exportation by sea, or of the bill of entry if removed for home-consumption, and the amount of duty paid (if any).

121. A register shall be kept of all bonds entered into for Customs-such register of all particulars required by section 120 to be specified.

When such register shows that the whole of the goods covered by any bond have been cleared for home-consumption or shipment, or otherwise duly accounted for, and when all amounts due on account of such goods have been paid, the Customs-collector shall cancel such bond as discharged in full, and shall on demand deliver it, so cancelled, to the person who has executed or who is entitled to receive it.

Cancellation and return of bonds.

Miscellaneous.

122. If any goods in respect of which a bond has been executed under section 92 and which have not been cleared for home consumption are lost or destroyed by unavoidable accident or delay, the Chief Customs-Authority may in its discretion remit the duties due thereon,

Power to remit duties on warehoused goods lost or destroyed;

Provided that, if any such goods be so lost or destroyed in a private warehouse, notice thereof be given to the Customs-collector within forty-eight hours after the discovery of such loss or destruction.

123. The warehouse-keeper in respect of goods lodged in a public warehouse, and the licensee in respect of goods lodged in a private warehouse, shall be responsible for their due reception therein and delivery therefrom, and for their safe custody while deposited therein, according to the quantity, weight or gauge reported by the Custom-house officer who has assessed such goods, allowance being made, if necessary, for ullage and wastage as provided in sections 116 and 117.

Provided that no owner of goods shall be entitled to claim from the Customs-collector, or from any keeper of a public warehouse, compensation for any loss or damage occurring to such goods while they are being passed into or out of such warehouse, or while they remain therein, unless it be proved that such loss or damage was occasioned by the wilful act or neglect of the warehouse-keeper or of an officer of Customs.

Compensation for loss or injury.

124. Every public warehouse shall be under the lock and key of a warehouse-keeper appointed by the Chief Officer of Customs.

125. The Chief Customs-Authority, or such officer of customs as such Authority from time to time appoints in this behalf, may from time to time determine in what division of any public warehouse, and in what manner, and on what terms, any goods may be deposited, and what sort of goods may be deposited in any such warehouse.

126. The expenses of carriage, packing and stowage of goods on their reception into or removal from a public warehouse shall, if paid by the Customs-collector or by the warehouse-keeper, be chargeable on the goods, and be defrayed by, and recoverable from, the owner, in the manner provided in section 119.

Expenses of carriage, packing, &c., to be borne by owners.

127. All the provisions of this Act, relating to private warehouses, shall be applicable to the warehouses wherein the Bengal Bonded Warehouse Association receives bonded goods.

Bengal Bonded Warehouse Association.

CHAPTER XII.

TRANSHIPMENT.

128. In the Ports of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Kárwár, Karáchi, Aden, Rangoon, Maulmain, Akyab, Chittagong, and such other ports as the Governor or General in Council may from time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct in this behalf, the Customs-collector may, on application by the owner of any goods imported into such Port, and specially and distinctly manifested at the time of importation as for transshipment to some other Customs or Foreign Port, grant leave to tranship the same without payment of the duty, (if any) leviable, at the Port of transshipment, and without any security or bond for the due arrival and entry of the goods at the Port of destination.

In any Customs-port other than a Port in which the preceding clause may for the time being be in force, the Customs-collector may, on application by the owner of any goods so imported and manifested, grant leave for transshipment without payment of the duty (if any) leviable at such Port; provided that, where the goods so transhipped are dutiable, and are to be removed to some other Customs-port, the applicant shall enter into a bond, with such security as may be required of him, in a sum equal at least to the duty chargeable on such goods, for the due arrival and entry thereof at the Port of destination within such time as such Customs-collector directs.

129. An officer of Customs shall, in every case, be deputed free of charge to superintend the removal of transhipped goods from vessel to vessel.

Superintendence of transshipment.

130. The powers conferred on the Customs-collector by section 128 shall be exercised, and the transshipment shall be performed, subject to such rules as may from time to time be made by the Local Government.

Subsidiary rules as to transshipment.

No rules made under this section shall come into force until after the expiry of such reasonable time from the date of the publication of the same as the Local Government may in each case appoint in this behalf.

131. All goods transhipped under the second

Entry and warehousing, on arrival, of goods transhipped under section 128, clause 2.

clause of section 128 for removal to a Customs-port shall on their arrival at such Port be entered in like manner as goods are entered on the first importation thereof, and under the laws and rules, in so far as such laws and rules can be made applicable, which regulate the entry of such last-mentioned goods.

132. If two or more vessels belonging wholly

Transshipment of provisions and stores from one vessel to another of same owner without payment of duty.

or in part to the same owner be at any Customs-port at the same time, any provisions and stores in use or ordinarily shipped for use on board may, at the discretion of the Customs-collector, be transhipped from one such vessel to any other such vessel without payment of import-duty.

133. A transshipment-fee on any goods or class of Levy of transshipment-fee.

goods transhipped under this Act, may be levied at such rules, on each bale or package, or according to weight, measurement, quantity, or number, and under such rules as the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council, may from time to time by notification in the local official Gazette prescribe for each port.

134. The Governor General in Council may from

Power to prohibit transshipment.

time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India, prohibit, at any specified

Port, or at all Ports, the transshipment, of any specified class of goods, generally or when destined for any specified ports, or prescribe any special mode of transshipping any specified class of goods.

No goods to be transhipped except as provided.

135. Except as provided in this Act, no goods shall be transhipped at any Port or place in British India.

CHAPTER XIII.EXPORTATION OR SHIPMENT, AND RE-LANDING.*136. Except with the written permission of the

No goods to be shipped, &c., till entry outwards of vessel.

Customs-collector, no goods other than passengers' baggage, or ballast urgently required for a vessel's safety shall be shipped or water-borne to be shipped in any vessel in a Customs-port until an order has been obtained under section 61 for entry outwards of such vessel.

When such order has been obtained, the export cargo of such vessel may be shipped, subject to the provisions next hereinafter contained.

137. Unless the Chief Customs-Authority shall,

Clearance for shipment.

in the case of any Customs-port or wharf, or of any class of goods, otherwise direct by notification in the local official Gazette, no goods, except passengers' baggage, shall be shipped or water-borne to be shipped for exportation, until—

(a) the owner has delivered to the Customs-collector, or other proper officer, a shipping-bill of such goods in duplicate in such form and containing such particulars in addition to those specified in section 29 as may from time to time be prescribed by the Chief Customs-Authority;

(b) such owner has paid the duties (if any) payable on such goods; and

(c) such bill has been passed by the Customs-collector.

138. Before any warehoused goods or goods subject to excise-duties, or goods entitled to drawback of Customs-duties on exportation, or goods exportable only under particular rules or restrictions, are permitted to be exported, the owner shall, if required so to do, give security by bond in such sum, not exceeding twice the duty leviable on such goods, as the Customs-collector directs, with one sufficient surety, that such goods shall be duly shipped, exported and landed at the place for which they are entered outwards, or shall be otherwise accounted for to the satisfaction of such officer.

139. When goods are cleared for shipment

Additional charge on goods cleared for shipment after port-clearance granted.

on a shipping-bill presented after port-clearance has been granted, the Customs-collector may, if he thinks fit, levy, in addition to any duty to which such goods are ordinarily liable, a charge not exceeding—

(a) in the case of goods liable to duties on fixed tariff valuations, one per cent. on the tariff value;

(b) in the case of all other goods, one per cent. on the market value.

Nothing in this section shall apply to any shipment of treasure or opium.

140. If any goods mentioned in a shipping-bill

Notice of non-shipment or re-landing, and return of duty thereon.

or manifest be not shipped, or be shipped and afterwards

re-landed, the owner shall, before the expiration of five clear working days after the vessel on which such goods were intended to be shipped, or from which they were re-landed, has left the Port, give information of such short-shipment or re-landing to the Customs-collector.

Upon an application being made to the Customs-collector, any duty levied upon goods not shipped, or upon goods shipped and afterwards re-landed, shall be refunded to the person on whose behalf such duty was paid: Provided that no such refund shall be allowed unless information has been given as above required.

141. If, after having cleared from any Customs-

Goods re-landed or transhipped from a vessel returning to Port, or putting into another Port.

port any vessel, without having discharged her cargo, returns to such Port, or puts into any other Customs-port, any owner of goods in such vessel, if he desires to land or tranship the same or any portion thereof for re-export, may, with the consent of the Master, apply to the Customs-collector in that behalf.

The Customs-collector, if he grant the application, shall thereupon send an officer of Customs to watch the vessel, and to take charge of such goods during such re-landing or transshipment.

Such goods shall not be allowed to be transhipped or re-exported free of duty by reason of the previous settlement of duty at the time of first export, unless they are lodged and remain until the time of re-export, under the custody of an officer of Customs, in a place appointed by the Customs-collector, or are transhipped under such custody.

All expenses attending such custody shall be borne by the owner.

142. In either of the cases mentioned in section 141, the Master of the vessel may enter such vessel inwards, and any owner of goods therein may, with the consent of the Master, land the same under the rules herein contained for the importation of goods.

In every such case, any export-duty levied shall be refunded to, and any amount paid in drawback shall be recovered from, such owner.

143. The Customs-collector may, on application by the Master of any vessel, which is obliged before completing her voyage to put into any Customs-port for repairs, permit him to land the cargo, or any portion thereof, and to place it in the custody of an officer of Customs during such repairs, and to re-ship and export the same free of duty.

All expenses attending such custody shall be borne by the Master.

CHAPTER XIV.

SPIRIT.

Exportation of spirit under bond for excise-duty.

144. The Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time make rules prescribing the conditions on which spirit manufactured in British India may be removed from any licensed distillery for exportation without payment of excise-duty.

The person so removing any such spirit shall execute a bond with one or more sureties, in the form marked C hereto annexed, or (when such form is inapplicable or insufficient) in such other form as the said Authority from time to time prescribes, conditioned that such duty shall be paid on all such spirit as is

(a) not exported within four months from the date of the bond, or

(b) exported to a Customs-port unless the payment of excise-duty as provided by this chapter in respect thereof at the port of destination is within six months from the date of the bond proved to the satisfaction of the proper officer.

The Chief Officer of Customs of the port of exportation may, on sufficient cause shown, extend for a further term not exceeding four months the period allowed for the exportation of any such spirit, or for the production of such proof that duty has been paid.

145. Spirit intended for exportation under bond for the excise-duty shall be taken from the distillery direct to the Custom-house, under passes to be granted for that purpose by the officers of Excise.

146. Spirit brought to the Custom-house for exportation under bond for the excise-duty shall, previous to shipment, be gauged and proved by an officer of Customs, and the quantity of spirit for which credit is to be given in the settlement of any bond shall be determined in the same manner.

147. Excise-duty shall be recoverable previous to shipment upon the excess (if any) of the quantity of spirit passed from a distillery over the quantity ascertained by gauge and proof at the Custom-house, less an allowance for ullage and wastage at such rates as are from time to time prescribed by the Local Government and notified in the local official Gazette.

148. Spirit exported under bond for excise-duty from any Customs-port to any other Customs-port, shall be charged at the Port of importation with excise-duty at the ordinary rate to which spirit of the like kind and strength is liable at such Port.

149. Spirit brought to the Custom-house for exportation under bond for the excise-duty may, on payment of such duty, be removed for local consumption under passes to be granted for that purpose by the officers of Excise.

Credit for every such payment shall be given in discharge of the bond to which it relates.

Drawback of excise duty on export of spirit.

150. A drawback of excise-duty paid on spirit manufactured in British India and exported to any Foreign Port under the provisions of section 138, shall be allowed by the Customs-collector at the Port of exportation:

Provided that the exportation be made within one year from the date of payment of such excise-duty, and that the spirit, when brought to the Custom-house, be accompanied by a pass in which such payment is certified.

Such drawback shall be regulated by the strength and quantity of such spirit as ascertained by gauge and proof by an officer of customs.

Miscellaneous.

151. If spirit manufactured in British India upon which excise-duty has been paid is exported from one Customs port to another, and the rate of local excise-duty at the port of importation is higher than that already paid upon such spirit, a differential duty shall be charged thereon, at such rate as the Local Government at such Port may by notification in the local official Gazette from time to time prescribe.

152. Rum-shrub, cordial, and other such liquor prepared in a licensed distillery under the supervision of the surveyor or officer in charge of the distillery shall be charged with excise-duty under this Act according to the quantity of spirit used in its preparation as ascertained by such surveyor or officer.

The provisions of this Act respecting spirit, except such as relate to gauge and proof, shall apply to such liquor.

153. No drawback shall be allowed for any spirit on which duty has been paid, nor shall the duty due on any spirit under bond be remitted, unless the spirit is shipped from the Custom-house, and in a vessel whereon an officer of Customs has been appointed to superintend the receipt of export-cargo.

154. No spirit shipped for exportation shall be re-landed without a special pass from an officer of Excise, in addition to any permission of an officer of Customs which may be required by the law for the time being in force.

155. When by any law for the time being in force a special duty is imposed on spirit rendered unfit for human consumption, the Local Government may from time to time make rules for ascertaining and determining what spirit imported into British India shall be deemed to have been effectually and permanently so rendered unfit and for causing such spirit to be so rendered, if necessary, by their own officers, and at the expense of the person importing the same, before the Customs-duties leviable thereon are levied.

In the absence of any such rules, or if any dispute arises as to their applicability, the Chief Customs-Officer shall decide what spirit is subject only to the said special duty, and such decision shall be final.

CHAPTER XV. COASTING TRADE.

156. Except as hereinafter provided, nothing in Chapters VII, IX, X, and part of XIII inapplicable to coasting trade, sections 136, 139 and 141 to 143 inclusive of this Act shall apply to coasting vessels or to goods imported or exported in such vessels.

157. The Local Government may, from time to time, make rules consistent with the provisions of this Chapter,

(a) extending any provision of the Chapters and Sections mentioned in section 156 with or without modification to any coasting vessels or to any goods imported or exported in such vessels;

(b) exempting any such vessels or goods from any of the other provisions of this Act except those contained in this Chapter;

(c) prescribing the conditions on which goods, or any specified class of goods, may be (1) carried in a coasting vessel, whether shipped at a Foreign Port, or at a Customs-port, or at a place declared under section 12 to be a port; (2) shipped in a coasting vessel before all dutiable goods and goods brought in such vessel from a Foreign Port have been unladen;

(d) prohibiting the conveyance of any specified class of goods generally, or to or between specified Ports in a coasting vessel;

158. Before any coasting vessel departs from the port of lading or when there are more ports of lading than one, the first port of lading, the Master shall fill in, sign and deliver to the

Customs-collector a manifest in duplicate containing a true specification of all goods to be carried in such vessel, in such form, and accompanied by such shipping-bills or other documents as may from time to time be prescribed by the Chief Customs-Authority

If the Customs-collector sees no objection to the departure of the vessel, he shall retain the duplicate and return the original manifest dated and signed by him together with its accompaniments; and such manifest shall be the port-clearance of the vessel unless, under the general orders of the Chief Customs-Authority, a separate port-clearance be prescribed.

159. Within twenty-four hours after the arrival of any coasting vessel at any Customs-port, whether intermediate or final, and before any goods are there discharged, the manifest, together with the other documents referred to in section 158, shall be delivered to the Customs-collector, who shall note on the manifest the date of delivery.

If the vessel has touched at any Foreign Port between such Port of arrival and her last preceding Customs-port of departure, the Master shall append to the manifest a declaration to that effect, and shall also indicate on the manifest the portions (if any) of the cargo therein described which have been discharged, and subjoin thereto a true specification of all goods shipped at such Port.

If the Customs-port of arrival be an intermediate Port, and a portion only of the cargo is to be discharged thereat, the Master shall likewise so deliver an extract from the manifest signed by him, relating to such portion, and the Customs-collector shall, after verifying such extract, return to him the original manifest and all documents accompanying it except those relating to such portion.

If in any case the cargo actually on board any coasting vessel on her arrival at any Customs-port does not, owing to short-shipment, re-landing, or other cause, correspond with the specification thereof in the manifest returned to the Master under the second clause of section 158, such Master shall, before delivery of such manifest under this section, note thereon the particulars of the difference.

The Customs-collector, when satisfied with the manifest and other documents, shall grant an order to break bulk.

160. Before any coasting vessel departs from any Customs-port at which she has touched during her voyage, the Master shall re-deliver the original manifest to the Customs-collector, after indicating thereon the portions (if any) of the cargo therein described which have been discharged, and subjoining thereto a true specification of all goods shipped at such Port. He shall also deliver a duplicate, signed by him, of the specification so subjoined.

If the Customs-collector sees no objection to the departure of the vessel, he shall proceed as prescribed in the second clause of section 158.

161. The Customs-collector may, for sufficient reason, refuse port-clearance to any coasting vessel declared to be bound to, or about to touch at, any Customs-port, unless the owner or Master gives a bond with such security as the Customs-collector deems sufficient for the production to the Customs-collector of a certificate from the proper officer of the Port to which such vessel is said to be bound, of her arrival at such Port within a reasonable time to be prescribed in each case by the Customs-collector.

162. When permission has been granted by the Customs-collector for the discharge of cargo from any coasting vessel—

(a) if the vessel has not touched at any intermediate Foreign Port in the course of her voyage, and has not on board any dutiable goods, the cargo may be forthwith landed and removed by the owner, without entry thereof at the Custom-house and clearance for home-consumption, but subject to such general check and control as the Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time by rules prescribe;

(b) if the vessel has so touched at any such Port, or has on board any such goods, such vessel shall be subject to all the provisions of Chapter VII of this Act relating to vessels arriving and such goods, and until such goods have been duly discharged all other goods on board shall be subject to the provisions of Chapter IX of this Act relating to goods imported.

163. If any of the goods on board of any coasting vessel be subject to any excise-duty, they shall not be unladen without the permission of the proper officer of Excise.

164. Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, the Chief Customs-Authority may authorize the Customs-collector to grant a general pass, on any conditions which such Authority thinks expedient, for the lading and clearance, and for the entry and unlading, of any coasting steam-vessel at any Ports of despatch or destination, or at any intermediate Ports at which she touches for the purpose of receiving goods or passengers.

Such pass shall be valid throughout British India, or for such Ports only as may be specified therein.

Any such general pass may be revoked by order of the Chief Customs-Authority by whom the grant thereof was authorized, by notice in writing under the hand of such Authority, delivered to the Master or to the owner of such steam-vessel, or to any of the crew on board.

165. The Chief Customs-Authority may direct that the Master of any coasting vessel which is square-rigged or propelled by steam shall keep, or cause to be kept, a cargo-book, stating the name of the Master, the vessel, the Port to which she belongs, and the Port to which on each voyage she is bound.

At every Port of lading such Master shall enter, or cause to be entered, in such book the name of such Port, and an account of all goods there taken on board of such vessel, with a description of the packages, and the quantities and descriptions of the goods contained therein or stowed loose, and the names of the respective shippers and consignees, in so far as such particulars are known to him.

At every Port of discharge of any such goods such Master shall enter, or cause to be entered, in such book the respective days on which such goods or any of them are delivered out of such vessel.

The respective times of departure from every Port of lading, and of arrival at every Port of discharge, shall in like manner be duly entered.

Every such Master shall, on demand, produce his cargo-book for the inspection of any officer of Customs, and such officer shall be at liberty to make any note or remark therein.

The Chief Customs-Authority may, in the case of any vessel the Master whereof has been directed to keep a cargo-book under this section, dispense with the manifest required under sections 158, 159 and 160.

166. Any duly empowered officer of Customs may go on board of any coasting vessel in any Port or place in British India, and may at any period of a voyage search any such vessel and examine all goods on board, and all goods then lading or unlading, and may demand the production of any document, which ought to be on board of any such vessel.

The Customs-collector may further require that any such document belonging to any coasting vessel then in Port shall be brought to him for inspection.

CHAPTER XVI.

OFFENCES AND PENALTIES.

167. The offences mentioned in the first column of the following schedule shall be punishable to the extent mentioned in the third column of the same with reference to such offences respectively :

Offences.	Section of this Act to which offence has reference.	Penalties.
1.—Contravening any rule made under this Act.	General	Penalty not exceeding five hundred rupees.
2.—If any goods be landed or shipped, or if an attempt be made to land or ship any goods, or if any goods be brought into any bay, river, creek or arm of the sea, for the purpose of being landed or shipped, at any port or place which, at the date of such landing, shipment, attempt or bringing, is not a Port for the landing and shipment of goods,	11	such goods shall be liable to confiscation.
3.—If any person ship or land goods, or aid in the shipment or landing of goods, or knowingly keep or conceal, or knowingly permit or procure to be kept or concealed, any goods shipped or landed, or intended to be shipped or landed, contrary to the provisions of this Act ; or if any person be found to have been on board of any vessel liable to confiscation on account of the commission of an offence under No. 2 of this section, while such vessel is within any bay, river, creek or arm of the sea which is not a port for the landing or shipment of goods,	General	such person shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding one thousand rupees.
4.—If any vessel which has been within the limits of any Port in British India with cargo on board, be afterwards found in any port, bay, river, creek or arm of the sea in British India, light or in ballast, and if the Master be unable to give a due account of the Customs-port where such vessel lawfully discharged her cargo,	11	such vessel shall be liable to confiscation.
5.—If any goods are put, without the authority of the proper officer of Customs, on board of any tug-steamer or pilot-vessel from any sea-going vessel inward-bound ; or if any goods are put, without such authority, out of any tug-steamer or pilot-vessel for the purpose of being put on board of any such vessel outward-bound ; or if any goods on which drawback has been granted are put, without such authority, on board of any tug-steamer or pilot-vessel for the purpose of being re-landed,	11	such goods shall be liable to confiscation, and the Master of every such tug-steamer or pilot-vessel shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding one thousand rupees.

6.—If any vessel arriving at, or departing from, any Customs-port fails, when so required under section 17, to bring-to at any such station as has been appointed by the Chief Customs-Authority for the boarding or landing of an officer of Customs,	17	the Master of such vessel shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding one thousand rupees.
7.—If any vessel arriving at any Customs-port, after having come to its proper place of mooring or unloading, removes from such place, except with the authority of the Conservator, obtained in accordance with the provisions of the Indian Ports Act, 1875, or other lawful authority, to some other place of mooring or unloading; or if any vessel not brought into Port by a Pilot be not anchored or moored in accordance with any direction of the Chief Customs-Authority under section 17,	17	the Master of such vessel shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five hundred rupees, and the vessel, if not entered, shall not be allowed to enter until the penalty is paid.

174. Every person arrested on the ground that he has been guilty of an offence under this Act, shall forthwith be taken before the nearest Magistrate or Customs-collector.

175. When any such person is taken before a Magistrate, such Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, either commit him to gaol or order him to be kept in the custody of the Police for such time as is necessary to enable such Magistrate to communicate with the proper officers of Customs:

Provided that any person so arrested, committed, or kept shall be released on giving security to the satisfaction of the Magistrate to appear at such time and place as such Magistrate appoints in this behalf.

176. If any person liable to be arrested under this Act, is not arrested at the time of committing the offence for which he is so liable, or after arrest, makes his escape, he may at any time afterwards be arrested and taken before a Magistrate, to be dealt with as if he had been arrested at the time of committing such offence.

177. When any person employed on the crew of any of the ships of Her Majesty's Navy, Indian Marine or Marine Survey is arrested under this Act, the arresting officer shall forthwith give notice thereof to the commanding officer of the ship, who shall thereupon place such person in security on board of such ship, until the arresting officer has obtained a warrant from a Magistrate for bringing up such person to be dealt with according to law.

The Magistrate shall grant such warrant upon complaint made to him by the arresting officer, stating the offence for which the person is detained.

178. Any thing liable to confiscation under this Act may be seized in any place, either upon land or water, by any officer of Customs or other person duly employed for the prevention of smuggling.

179. All things seized on the ground that they are liable to confiscation under this Act shall, as soon as conveniently may be, be delivered into the care of any Customs officer authorized to receive the same.

If there be no such officer at hand, all such things shall be carried to and deposited at the Custom-house nearest to the place of seizure.

If there be no Custom-house within a convenient distance, such things shall be deposited at the nearest place appointed by the Chief Customs-Authority for the deposit of things so seized.

180. When any things liable to confiscation under this Act are seized by any Police-officer on suspicion that they have been stolen, he may carry them to any Police-station or Court at which a complaint connected with the stealing or receiving of such things has been made, or an enquiry connected with such stealing or receiving is in progress, and there detain such things until the dismissal of such complaint or the conclusion of such enquiry or of any trial thence resulting.

In every such case the Police-officer seizing the things shall send written notice of their seizure and detention to the nearest Custom-house; and immediately after the dismissal of the complaint or the conclusion of the enquiry or trial, he shall cause such things to be conveyed to, and deposited at, the nearest Custom-house, to be there proceeded against according to law.

181. When any thing is or seized, or any person is arrested, under this Act, the officer or other person making such seizure or arrest shall, on demand of the person in charge of the thing so seized, or of the person so arrested, give him a statement in writing of the reason for such seizure or arrest.

182. In every case except the cases mentioned in section 167, Nos. 26, 72 and 74 to 76 both inclusive, in which, under this Act, any thing is liable to confiscation or to increased rates of duty, or any person is liable to a penalty, such confiscation, increased rate of duty or penalty may be adjudged—

(a) without limit, by a Deputy Commissioner or Deputy Collector of Customs, or a Customs-collector;

(b) up to confiscation of goods not exceeding two hundred and fifty rupees in value, and imposition of penalty or increased duty not exceeding one-hundred rupees by an Assistant Commissioner or Assistant Collector of Customs;

(c) up to confiscation of goods not exceeding fifty rupees in value, and imposition of penalty or increased duty not exceeding ten rupees, by such other subordinate officers of Customs as the Local Government may, from time to time, empower in that behalf in virtue of their office:

Provided that the Local Government may, in the case of any officer, performing the duties of a Customs-collector, limit his powers to those indicated in clause (b) or in clause (c) of this section, and may confer on any officer by name, or in virtue of his office, the powers indicated in clauses (a), (b) or (c) of this section.

183. Whenever confiscation is authorized by this Act, the officer adjudging it shall give the owner of the goods an option to pay in lieu of confiscation such fine as the officer thinks fit.

184. When anything is confiscated under section 182, such thing shall thereupon vest in Her Majesty.

The officer adjudging confiscation shall take and hold possession of the thing confiscated, and every officer of Police, on the requisition of such officer, shall assist him in taking and holding such possession.

185. If any vessel actually departs without a port-clearance, or after failing to bring-to when required at any station appointed under section 17, the penalty to which the Master of such vessel is liable may be adjudged by the Chief Customs Officer of any Customs-port to which such vessel proceeds, or in which she is, and in the case of Aden, by such officer as the Governor of Bombay in Council appoints in this behalf.

A certificate of such departure or failure to bring-to when required, purporting to be signed by the Chief Customs Officer of the Port from which the vessel is stated to have so departed, shall be prima facie proof of the fact so certified.

186. The award of any confiscation, penalty or increased rate of duty under this Act by an officer of Customs shall not prevent the infliction of any punishment to which the person affected thereby is liable under any other law.

187. All offences against this Act, other than those cognizable under section 182 by officers of Customs may be tried summarily by a Magistrate.

188. Any person deeming himself aggrieved by any decision or order passed by an officer of customs under this Act may, within three months from the date of such decision or order, appeal therefrom to the Chief Customs-Authority, or, in such cases as the Local Government directs, to any officer of Customs not inferior in rank to a Customs Collector and empowered in that behalf by name or in virtue of his office by the Local Government.

Such authority or officer may thereupon make such further enquiry and pass such order as he thinks fit, confirming, altering or annulling the decision or order appealed against :

Provided that no such order in appeal shall have the effect of subjecting any person to any greater confiscation, penalty or rate of duty than has been adjudged against him in the original decision or order.

Every order passed in appeal under this section shall, subject to the power of revision conferred by section 191, be final.

189. Where the decision or order appealed against relates to any duty or penalty leviable in respect of any goods, the owner of such goods, if desirous of appealing against such decision or order, shall, pending the appeal, deposit in the hands of the Customs-collector at the Port where the dispute arises the amount demanded by the officer passing such decision or order.

When delivery of such goods to the owner thereof is withheld merely by reason of such amount not being paid, the Customs-collector shall upon such deposit being made cause such goods to be delivered to such owner.

If upon any such appeal it is decided that the whole or any portion of such amount was not leviable in respect of such goods, the Customs-collector shall return such amount or portion (as the case may be) to the owner of such goods on demand by such owner.

190. If, upon consideration of the circumstances under which any penalty, increased rate of duty or confiscation has been adjudged under this Act by an officer of Customs, the Chief Customs-Authority is of opinion that such penalty, increased rate or confiscation ought to be remitted in whole or in part, or commuted, such Authority may remit the same or any portion thereof, or may, with the consent of the owner of any goods ordered to be confiscated, commute the order of confiscation to a penalty not exceeding the value of such goods.

191. The Local Government may on the application of any person aggrieved by any decision or order passed under this Act by any officer of Customs or Chief Customs-Authority, and from which no appeal lies, reverse or modify such decision or order.

192. When any fine, penalty or increased rate of duty is leviable under this Act, the goods in respect of which such fine, penalty or rate is leviable shall not be removed by the owner until such fine, penalty or rate is paid.

If any person has become liable to any such fine, penalty or rate in respect of any goods, the Customs-collector may detain any goods belonging to such person passing through the custom-house until such fine, penalty or rate is paid.

193. When a penalty or increased rate of duty is adjudged against any person under this Act by any officer of Customs, such officer, if such penalty or increased rate be not paid, may levy the same by sale of any goods of the said person which may be in his charge, or in the charge of any other officer of Customs.

When an officer of Customs who has adjudged a penalty or increased rate of duty against any person under this Act is unable to realize the unpaid amount thereof from such goods, such officer may notify in writing to any Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such person or any goods belonging to him may be, the name and residence of the said person and the amount of penalty or increased rate of duty unrecovered; and such Magistrate shall thereupon proceed to enforce payment of the said amount in like manner as if such penalty or increased rate had been a fine inflicted by himself.

CHAPTER XVIII.

MISCELLANEOUS.

194. Any officer of Customs may open any package, and examine any goods brought by sea to, or shipped or brought for shipment at, any Customs-port.

195. The Customs-collector may, on the entry of any goods, or at any time while such goods are being passed through the Custom-house, take samples of such goods, for examination or for ascertaining the value thereof on which duties are payable, or for any other necessary purpose.

Every such sample shall, if practicable, be at the option of the owner either restored to him, or sold and the proceeds accounted for to him.

196. The unshipping, carrying, shipping and landing of all goods, and the bringing of them to the proper place for examination or weighing, and the putting of them into and out of the scales, and the opening, unpacking, bulking, sorting, lotting, marking and numbering of goods, where such operations are necessary or permitted, and the removing of goods to, and the placing of them in, the proper place of deposit, shall be performed by or at the expense of the owner of such goods.

197. No owner of goods shall be entitled to claim from any officer of Customs compensation for any loss or damage occurring to such goods at any time while they remain or are lawfully detained in any Custom-house, or on any Custom-house wharf, or under charge of any officer of Customs, unless it be proved that such loss or damage was occasioned by the neglect or wilful act of such officer of Customs.

198. No proceeding other than a suit shall be commenced against any person for anything purporting to be done in pursuance of this Act without giving to such person a month's previous notice in writing of the intended proceeding, and of the cause thereof; or after the expiration of three months from the limitation, accrual of such cause.

199. The Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time fix the period after the expiration of which goods left on any Custom-house wharf, or other authorized landing place or part of the Custom-house premises, shall be subject to payment of fees, and the amount of such fees.

200. A duplicate of any certificate, manifest, bill or other Custom-house document may, on payment of a fee not exceeding ten rupees, be furnished, at the discretion of the Customs-collector, to any person applying for the same, if the Customs-collector is satisfied that no fraud has been committed or is intended by the applicant.

201. Except in the cases provided for by sections 36, 55, 63 and 94, the Customs-collector may in his discretion, upon payment of one rupee, authorize any document, after it has been entered and recorded in the Custom-house, to be amended.

202. No person authorized to act as an agent for the transaction of any business relating to the entrance or clearance of any vessel, or the import or export of goods or baggage, shall so act in any Custom-house, unless such authorization is approved by the Customs-collector.

Such officer may require any person so authorized to give a bond with sufficient security, in any sum not exceeding five thousand rupees, for his faithful behaviour as regards the Custom-house regulations and officers.

Such officer may, in case of misbehaviour of the person so authorized, suspend or withdraw such approval, but an appeal against every such suspension or withdrawal shall lie to the Chief Customs-Authority, whose decision thereon shall be final.

Every appeal under this section shall be made within one month of the suspension or withdrawal.

203. When any person applies to any officer of Customs for permission to transact any specified business with him on behalf of any other person, such officer may require the applicant to produce a written authority from the person on whose behalf such business is to be transacted, and in default of the production of such authority may refuse such permission.

The clerk, servant, or agent, of any person or mercantile firm, may transact business generally at the Custom-house on behalf of such person or firm: Provided that the Customs-collector may refuse to recognize such clerk, servant or agent unless such person or a member of such firm identifies such clerk, servant or agent to the Customs-collector as empowered to transact such business, and deposits with the Customs-collector an authority in writing duly signed, authorizing such clerk, servant or agent to transact such business on behalf of such person or firm.

204. All rules made under this Act shall be notified in the official Gazette, and shall thereupon have the force of law.

All such rules for the time being in force shall be collected, arranged and published at intervals not exceeding two years, and shall be sold to the public at a reasonable price.

205. Any notification made by any authority under powers conferred by this Act, may be cancelled in like manner by the same authority.

206. If in any case relating to the removal of goods from a warehouse without payment of duty, the person offending be an officer of Customs not acting in execution of his duty, and be prosecuted to conviction by the owner of such goods, no duty shall be payable in respect of such goods. For any damage so occasioned by such officer, the Customs-collector shall, with the sanction of the Chief Customs-Authority, make due compensation to such owner.

207. Nothing in this Act shall affect any law for the time being in force relating to the Commissioners for making improvements in the Port of Calcutta or the Trustees of the Port of Bombay respectively.

D. FITZPATRICK,
Secy. to the Govt. of India.

[Second Publication.]

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 14th March 1878, and is, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons, hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT No. IX OF 1878.

An Act for the better Control of Publications in Oriental languages.

WHEREAS certain publications in oriental languages printed or circulated in British India have of late

contained matter likely to excite disaffection to the Government established by law in British India, or antipathy between persons of different races, castes, religions, or sects in British India, or have been used as means of intimidation or extortion :

And whereas such publications are read by and disseminated amongst large numbers of ignorant and unintelligent persons, and are thus likely to have an influence which they otherwise would not possess; and whereas it is accordingly necessary for the maintenance of the public tranquillity and for the security of Her Majesty's subjects and others to confer on the executive Government power to control the printing and circulation of such publications : It is hereby enacted as follows :—

1. This section and sections eleven to sixteen both inclusive apply to the whole of British India ; the other sections of this Act apply only to those parts of British India to which they may from time to time be extended by the Governor General in Council by a notification in the Gazette of India.

Interpretation clause.

2. In this Act—

'Newspaper' means any periodical work containing public news, or comments on public news, printed wholly or partially in any oriental language, and includes two or more copies of a newspaper bearing the same name, whether published on the same day or on different days, and also includes any series of newspapers, whether printed on one day or different days, or with one name or with different names; and

"Newspaper."

'Print,' 'printed' and 'printer' apply not only to printing, but also to lithography, engraving and photography.

"Print," &c.

3. Any Magistrate of a district or Commissioner

Power to call upon printer and publisher of newspaper to give bond; of Police in a Presidency town, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any newspaper is printed or published, may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government and subject to the provisions of section five, call upon the printer and publisher of such newspaper to enter into a joint and several bond, or when the printer and publisher of such newspaper are the same person, call upon such person to enter into a bond, binding themselves or himself, as the case may be, in such sum as the Local Government thinks fit, not to—

(a) print or publish in such newspaper any words, signs, or visible representations, likely to excite disaffection to the Government established by law in British India or antipathy between any persons of different races, castes, religions, or sects in British India; or

- (b) use or attempt to use such newspaper

for the purpose of putting any person in fear or causing annoyance to him and thereby inducing him to deliver to any person any property or valuable security, or anything signed or sealed which may be converted into a valuable security, or to give any gratification to any person, or for the purpose of holding out any threat of injury to a public servant, or to any person in whom they or he believe or believes that public servant to be interested, and thereby inducing that public servant to do any act, or to forbear or delay to do any act, connected with the exercise of his public functions.

EXPLANATION.—"Valuable security," "gratification" and "public servant" are used in this section in the senses in which they are respectively used in the Indian Penal Code.

4. When any bond is executed under section three, the said Magistrate or Commissioner may further require the obligor or obligors of the same to deposit the amount thereof in money or the equivalent thereof in securities of the Government of India; and the money or securities so deposited shall, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained, remain so deposited until fifteen days after the person or persons depositing the same has or have made and subscribed a declaration under Act No. XXV of 1867, section eight.

When such person or persons has or have subscribed such a declaration, and fifteen days have elapsed from the date of subscribing the same, he or they may apply to the said Magistrate or Commissioner for the restoration of the said money or securities, and thereupon such money or securities shall, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained, be restored to such person or persons.

5. When any publisher or printer is called upon by a Magistrate or Commissioner of Police to execute a bond under this Act in respect of any newspaper, the publisher of such newspaper may deliver to such Magistrate or Commissioner an undertaking in writing to the effect that no words, signs, or visible representations shall, during the year next following the date of such undertaking, be printed or published in such newspaper which have not previously been submitted to such officer as the Local Government may appoint in this behalf, by name or in virtue of his office, or which on being so submitted have been objected to by such officer.

When such undertaking has been so delivered, no such bond or deposit shall be required from the publisher or printer of such newspaper during the said year.

6. Whenever it appears to the Local Government that any newspaper printed or published in the territories under its administration, contains any words, signs, or visible representations of the nature described in section three, clause (a), or that any such newspaper has been used or attempted to be used for any purpose described in the same section, clause (b), such Local Government may cause a notice in the form in the schedule hereto annexed, or to the like effect, to be published in the local official Gazette.

7. A true copy of such notice shall be fixed on some conspicuous part of the premises described in the declaration made in respect of the newspaper under the said Act No. XXV of 1867, section five, and the copy so fixed shall be deemed to have been duly served on the printer and publisher of such paper.

8. If after the publication of such notice and the service thereof, the newspaper in respect of which it has been issued contains any words, signs, or visible representations of the nature described in section three, clause (a), or is used, or attempted to be used, for any purpose described in the same section, clause (b), all printing presses, engines, machinery, types, lithographic stones, paper, and other implements, utensils, plant, and materials used or employed, or intended to be used or employed, in or for the purpose of printing or publishing such newspaper, or found in or about any premises where such newspaper is printed or published, and all copies of such newspaper wherever found, and

any money or securities which the printer or publisher of such newspaper may have deposited under the provisions of section three,

shall be liable to be forfeited to Her Majesty.

Provided that the publisher of any newspaper may, on the publication of a notice in respect thereof under section six, and before anything has become liable to forfeiture under this section in respect of such newspaper, deliver to the Magistrate of the District or to the Commissioner of Police in a Presidency town, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such newspaper is published, an undertaking in writing of the nature specified in section five, and, if such Magistrate or Commissioner accepts such undertaking, nothing shall become liable to forfeiture under this section between the date on which such undertaking is so accepted and the end of the period for which it is given.

9. Whenever it appears to the Local Government that any money or security deposited under this Act in respect of any newspaper is liable to be forfeited under section eight, such Local Government may, by a notification in the local official Gazette, declare such money or security to be forfeited;

And whenever it appears to the Local Government that any implements, utensils, plant or materials used or employed or intended to be used or employed in or for the purpose of printing or publishing any newspaper, or which is or are in or about any premises where such newspaper is printed or published, or any copies of any newspaper, is or are liable to be forfeited under that section,

the Local Government may declare such implements, utensils, plant, materials or copies to be forfeited and may by warrant issued by its authority under the hand of any Magistrate, empower any person to seize and take away such implements, utensils, plant, materials, and copies wherever found, and to enter upon any premises

(a) where the newspaper specified in such warrant is printed or published, or

(b) where any such implements, utensils, plant, or materials may be or may be reasonably suspected to be, or

(c) where any copy of such newspaper is sold, distributed, published, or publicly exhibited, or reasonably suspected to be sold, distributed, published, or publicly exhibited, or kept for sale, distribution, publication, or public exhibition, or reasonably suspected to be so kept,

and search for such implements, utensils, plant, materials, and copies.

Every warrant issued under this section, so far as relates to a search, shall be executed in manner provided for the execution of search-warrants under the law relating to criminal procedure for the time being in force.

10. When any book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet, or other document printed wholly or partially in any oriental language in British India contains any words, signs, or visible representations which are of the nature described in section three, clause (a),

all printing presses, engines, machinery, types, lithographic stones, paper, and other implements, utensils, plant, and materials used or employed in or for the purpose of printing or publishing such book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet, or other document, or found in or about any premises where the same is printed or published, and all copies of such book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet or other document, shall be liable to be forfeited to Her Majesty.

Whenever it appears to the Local Government that anything is liable to be forfeited under this section, the Local Government may declare such thing to be forfeited and may direct any Magistrate to issue a warrant in respect of the same, and thereupon such thing may be searched for, seized, and taken away in manner provided by section nine.

The Local Government may, upon good cause shown, cancel any forfeiture under this section.

11. When any newspaper printed elsewhere

Copies of newspaper printed elsewhere, and brought into British India, liable to forfeiture in certain cases.

than in British India contains any words, signs, or visible representations of the nature described in section three, clause (a), or is used or attempted to be used for any purpose described in the same section, clause (b), all copies of such newspaper, brought into British India, shall be liable to be forfeited to Her Majesty.

12. Whenever it appears to the Local Government that any copies of any newspaper in any of the territories under its administration are liable to be forfeited under section eleven, such Local Government may declare all copies of such newspaper wherever found to be forfeited and may by warrant issued by its authority under the hand of any Magistrate, empower any person to seize and take away all copies of such newspaper wherever found, and to enter upon any premises where any copy of such newspaper is sold, distributed, published, or publicly exhibited, or reasonably suspected to be sold, distributed, published, or publicly exhibited, or kept for sale, distribution, publication, or public exhibition, or reasonably suspected to be so kept; and search for all copies of such newspaper.

Power to seize copies of newspaper forfeited under section 11.

Every warrant issued under this section shall, so far as relates to a search, be executed in manner provided for the execution of search-warrants under the law relating to criminal procedure for the time being in force.

13. Any person feeling aggrieved by the issue

of any notification under section nine or by any declaration made or anything done in the execution of a warrant issued under that section, or under section ten or section twelve, may, within three months from the date of the notification or declaration or the doing of the thing complained of (as the case may be), appeal to the Governor General in Council; and the Governor General in Council shall take such appeal into consideration, and the order passed by him thereon shall be final and conclusive.

14. The Governor General in Council may, by

Power to exclude from British India, newspapers, books, &c., printed out of British India.

notification in the Gazette of India, direct that any newspapers printed at any place beyond the limits of British India, or any books, pamphlets, placards, broadsheets, or other documents printed wholly or partially in any oriental language at any such place, shall not be brought into, or circulated, distributed, or publicly exhibited, or sold, or kept for circulation, distribution, public exhibition, or sale, in British India.

Whoever, in contravention of any direction under this section, brings any such newspaper, book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet, or other document into British India, or circulates, distributes, publishes, exhibits, or sells the same, or keeps the same for circulation, distribution, exhibition, or sale, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both;

and all copies of such newspaper, book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet, or other document found in British India shall be forfeited to Her Majesty.

Whenever it appears to any Magistrate of a district or to any Commissioner of Police in a Presidency town that anything within the local limits of his jurisdiction is forfeited under this section, he may issue a warrant to search for and seize the same, and such warrant shall be executed in manner provided for the execution of search-warrants under the law relating to criminal procedure for the time being in force.

15. When any declaration has been made under section nine, section ten, or section twelve, in respect of any newspaper, book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet, or other document, or any notification has been issued in respect of the same under section fourteen, any officer of the Postal Department empowered in this behalf by the Governor General in Council, by name or in virtue of his office, may search or cause search to be made for any copies of the same in the custody of that Department, and shall deliver all such copies found to such officer as the Governor General in Council may appoint in this behalf by name or in virtue of his office.

Power of postal authorities to seize newspapers, books, &c.

16. Every notification and declaration of for-

Jurisdiction barred.

feiture purporting to be issued or made under this Act shall, as against all persons, be conclusive evidence that the forfeiture therein referred to has taken place; and no proceeding purporting to be taken under this Act, or in execution of a warrant issued under this Act, shall be called in question by any Court of civil or criminal jurisdiction; and no Civil or Criminal proceeding shall be instituted against any person for anything purporting to be done under this Act or in execution of any such warrant, or for the recovery of any property purporting to be seized under this Act.

17. Any publisher or printer of a newspaper

SCHEDULE.

FORM OF NOTICE UNDER SECTION 6.

WHEREAS a certain newspaper (state name of newspaper) contains words, signs, or visible representations (as the case may be) of the nature described in section 3, clause (a), of Act No. IX of 1878 [or is used for a purpose mentioned in section 3 of Act No. IX of 1878, clause (b), or Whereas an attempt has been made to use a certain newspaper (state name of newspaper) for a purpose, &c.]

This is to give notice to all whom it may concern, and to give all such persons warning, according to the provisions of section 6 of the said Act No. IX of 1878.

This day of 187 .

A. B.

Secretary to { the Government of the Chief Commissioner of

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

1. The main object of this Bill is to place newspapers which are published in the vernacular languages of India under better control, and to furnish the Government with more effective means than are provided by the existing law, of punishing and repressing seditious writings which are calculated to produce disaffection towards the Government in the minds of the ignorant and unenlightened masses. Another object is to prevent unscrupulous native editors using their papers as a means of intimidation or extortion.

2. As regards the latter of these objects, it is enough to state that the Government is informed on reliable authority that certain vernacular papers have from time to time been used as a means of intimidating, and extorting money from, our feudatories and native employes. As regards the former and more important object, a fuller statement of the reasons which have led to the introduction of this Bill seems desirable.

3. That a section of the vernacular Press has of late years assumed an attitude of fixed hostility to the Government; that it does not confine itself to criticising particular measures or the acts of individual officers on their merits, but attacks the very existence of British rule in India; and that the evil has been steadily growing and has now attained a magnitude which calls for the application of some strong means of repression, are facts patent to all who read the native papers.

4. The necessity for immediate action has been pressed on the Government of India from many quarters; and those most competent to form an opinion on such a point have advised that the existing law does not furnish a sufficient remedy, and that fresh legislation is accordingly necessary.

5. The only question has been as to the form which such legislation should assume, or, to speak more precisely, whether the object in view could be attained by any mere amendment of the general criminal law, or whether some measure of a special nature is required.

The Government of India have come to the conclusion that a special measure is necessary, and they have been led to this conclusion chiefly by two considerations:

6. In the first place, the object in view is simply to repress an evil which is altogether of a special and limited nature, and for the existence of which a small and strictly defined class of persons is answerable. It is not in any way necessary for that object to expand the general law relating to State offences, or to render that law more stringent. To do so would be to inflict an unmerited hardship on a large number of Her Majesty's subjects.

7. Secondly (and this seems to put the necessity of a special law, as distinguished from any mere amendment of the general law, beyond a doubt), the ordinary criminal law confines itself to imposing penalties for offences already committed, whereas the particular offence to be dealt with here is of such a nature that it is not enough that it should be punished when committed. Its commission must be prevented, and this can be done only under a special procedure devised expressly for that purpose.

8. The Bill now introduced is restricted in its operation to publications in oriental languages. Its chief provisions will take effect only in those parts of British India to which they may be specially extended by the Governor General in Council, and will cease to have effect in those parts whenever the Governor General in Council so directs.

9. The system of check it establishes in the case of newspapers in oriental languages published in British India is as follows:

First.—The Magistrate may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, require the printer or publisher of any such newspaper to enter into a bond binding himself not to print or publish in such newspaper anything likely to excite feelings of disaffection to the Government or antipathy between persons of different races, castes, religions or sects, and not to use such paper for purposes of extortion. The Magistrate may further require the amount of this bond to be deposited in money or securities.

Secondly.—If any newspaper (whether a bond has been taken in respect of it or not) at any time contains any matter of the description just mentioned, or is used for purposes of extortion, the Local Government may warn such newspaper by a notification in the Gazette, and if, in spite of such warning, the offence is repeated, the Local Government may then issue its warrant to seize the plant, &c., of such newspaper, and when any deposit has been made may declare such deposit forfeited.

Thirdly.—As the provisions regarding the deposit of security and the forfeiture of the deposit would, perhaps, be found to press unduly on some of the less wealthy newspaper proprietors, clauses have been inserted enabling the publisher of a newspaper to take his paper out of the operation of this portion of the Act for such time as he pleases by undertaking to submit his proofs to an officer appointed by the Government before publication, and to publish nothing which such officer objects to.

Any publisher may, if he chooses, do this at the time when he is called upon to deposit security; and if he does so, no security can be demanded from him.

Again, if he does not choose to avail himself of this provision at that stage, he may subsequently, in the event of a warning being issued against him, offer such an undertaking, and if the Magistrate accepts it, the proceedings are at an end.

10. As regards books, pamphlets, &c., printed in British India, containing matter of the description above referred to or used for purposes of extortion, the Bill gives the Local Government a power to seize them and the presses at which they are printed.

11. Newspapers and books published out of British India but circulated in British India remain. And in regard to them the Bill provides—first, that if they contain matter of the nature already referred to or are used for purposes of extortion, the Local Government may seize them; and secondly, that the Governor General in Council may prohibit their importation altogether.

12. The only other points calling for special notice are that an appeal is given to the Governor General in Council against anything done by a Local Government or any inferior authority; that declarations of forfeitures and other proceedings under the Act are made final and conclusive, subject only to such appeal; and that penalties are provided for printing or publishing a newspaper without executing a bond or making a deposit after such bond or deposit has been required, and for breach of an undertaking to submit proofs to a Government officer.

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 15th March 1878, and is hereby promulgated for general information:—

ACT NO. X OF 1878.

An Act for the levy of Additional Rates on land in the Central Provinces.

WHEREAS, in order to defray the expenditure incurred and to be incurred for the relief and prevention of famine, it is necessary to make a permanent increase to the annual revenues; and it is therefore expedient to provide, in the territories administered by the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, for the levy of additional rates on land; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. This Act may be called "The Central Provinces Additional Rates Act, 1878."

It extends only to the territories administered by the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces;

And it shall come into force on such date as the Governor General in Council by notification in the Gazette of India directs.

2. Every estate shall be liable, in addition to the rates and cesses payable under any settlement for the time being in force, to the payment of such further rate not exceeding one per cent. on its annual value, as the Chief Commissioner, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, from time to time imposes.

"Annual value" means

(1) in cases in which the settlement of the land-revenue is liable to periodical revision, double the amount of the land-revenue for the time being assessed on the estate;

(2) in cases in which such settlement is not liable to such revision, or in which the land-revenue has been, wholly or in part, released, compounded for, redeemed or assigned, double the amount which, if the settlement were liable to such revision and an assessment at full rates were made, would be assessed as land-revenue on the estate.

3. All sums due on account of any rate imposed under this Act shall be recoverable as if they were arrears of land-revenue due in respect of the land on account of which the rate is payable.

4. The proceeds of all rates levied under this Act shall be carried to the credit of the Local Government.

5. From the sums so credited the Chief Commissioner shall from time to time appropriate such amount as the Governor General in Council may direct, for the purpose of increasing the revenues available for defraying the expenditure incurred or to be incurred for the relief and prevention of famine in the said territories: or if the Governor General in Council so directs, in any other part of British India.

The residue of the said sums after such appropriation may be applied by the Chief Commissioner, subject to the control of the Governor General in Council, to such local works likely to promote the public health, comfort or convenience as the Chief Commissioner thinks fit.

6. The Chief Commissioner, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may by notification in the Local Gazette from time to time--

(a) determine by what instalments and at what times any rate under this Act shall be payable, by whom it shall be assessed, collected and paid, and what portion (if any) thereof, paid by any person in respect of an estate, may be recovered by such person from any other persons having any interest in such estate;

(b) make rules consistent with this Act for the guidance of officers in matters connected with its enforcement;

(c) exempt wholly or in part any portion of the said territories from the operation of this Act, or exempt any estate from liability to pay the whole or any part of any rate under this Act, and cancel any exemption under this clause;

(d) direct fresh measurements of estates liable to pay rates under this Act, and vary the assessments accordingly.

THE FIRST SCHEDULE.

THE SECOND SCHEDULE.

An Act to consolidate and amend the law relating to Arms, Ammunition and Military Stores.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to arms, ammunition and military stores; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

I.—Preliminary.

1. This Act may be called "The Indian Arms Act, 1878"; and it extends to the whole of British India.

Local extent.

Savings.

But nothing herein contained shall apply to—

(a) arms, ammunition or military stores on board any sea-going vessel and forming part of her ordinary armament or equipment, or

(b) the manufacture, conversion, sale, import, export, transport, bearing or possession of arms, ammunition or military stores by order of the Government, or by a public servant or a volunteer enrolled under the Indian Volunteers Act, 1869, in the course of his duty as such public servant or volunteer.

2. This Act shall come into force on such day as the Governor General in Council by notification in the Gazette of India appoints.

Commencement.

3. On and from that day the enactments mentioned in the first schedule hereto annexed shall be repealed to the extent specified in the third column of the said schedule. But all authorities and permissions given, licenses and exemptions granted, orders and appointments made, notifications published, and rules, conditions, and forms prescribed under any enactment hereby repealed shall be deemed to be respectively given, granted, made, published and prescribed under this Act.

Repeal of enactments.

And all such authorities, permissions, licences and exemptions shall, except as otherwise provided by this Act, continue in force for the periods for which they may have been given or granted respectively, or, where no such period is expressly fixed, for one year from the date on which this Act comes into force, and shall then cease to have effect.

4. In this Act unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context—

Interpretation-clause.

"Cannon" includes also all howitzers, mortars wall pieces, mitrailleuses and other ordnance and machine-guns, all parts of the same, and all carriages, platforms and appliances for mounting, transporting and serving the same:

"Arms" includes fire-arms, bayonets, swords, daggers, spears, spear-heads and bows and arrows, also cannon and parts of arms, and machinery for manufacturing arms:

"Ammunition" includes also all articles specially designed for torpedo service and submarine mining, rockets, gun-cotton, dynamite, lithofracteur and other explosive or fulminating material, gunflints, gunwads, percussion caps, fuses, and friction tubes, all parts of ammunition and all machinery for manufacturing ammunition, but does not include lead, sulphur or saltpetre:

"Military stores" in any section of this Act as applied to any part of British India means any military stores to which the Governor General in Council may from time to time by notification in the Gazette of India specially extend such section in such part, and includes also all lead, sulphur, saltpetre and other material to which the Governor General in Council may from time to time so extend such section.

"License" means a license granted under this Act, and "licensed" means holding such license:

II.—Manufacture, Conversion and Sale.

5. No person shall manufacture, convert, or sell, or keep, offer or expose for sale, any arms, ammunition or military stores except under a license and in the manner and to the extent permitted thereby.

Unlicensed manufacture, conversion and sale prohibited.

Nothing herein contained shall prevent any person from selling any arms or ammunition which he lawfully possesses for his own private use to any person who is not by any enactment for the time being in force prohibited from possessing the same; but every person so selling arms or ammunition to any person other than a person entitled to possess the same by reason of an exemption under section twenty-seven of this Act shall, without unnecessary delay, give to the Magistrate of the district or to the officer in charge of the nearest police-station notice of the sale and of the purchaser's name and address.

III.—Import, Export and Transport.

6. No person shall bring or take by sea or by land into or out of British India any arms, ammunition or military stores except under a license and in the manner and to the extent permitted by such license.

Unlicensed importation and exportation prohibited.

Nothing in the first clause of this section extends to arms (other than cannon) or ammunition imported or exported in reasonable quantities for his own private use by any person lawfully entitled to possess such arms or ammunition; but the Collector of Customs or any other officer empowered by the Local Government in this behalf by name or in virtue of his office may at any time detain such arms or ammunition until he receives the orders of the Local Government thereon.

Explanation.—Arms, ammunition and military stores taken from one part of British India to another by sea or across intervening territory not being part of British India are taken out of and brought into British India within the meaning of this section.

7. Notwithstanding anything contained in the Sea-customs Act, 1878, no arms, ammunition or military stores shall be deposited in any warehouse licensed under section 16 of that Act without the sanction of the Local Government.

Sanction of local Government required to warehousing of arms, &c.

8. In lieu of the duties imposed by the Indian Tariff Act, 1875, upon the articles mentioned in the second schedule hereto annexed when imported by sea, there shall be levied and collected, in every part of British India, upon the same articles the duties specified in the same schedule:

Levy of duties on arms, &c., imported by sea.

Provided that no duty in excess of ten per cent. ad valorem shall be levied upon any of the said articles imported in reasonable quantity for his own private use by any person lawfully entitled to possess the same:

Provided also that when any articles which have been otherwise imported and upon which duty has been levied or is leviable under this section are purchased retail from the importer by a person lawfully entitled as aforesaid, in reasonable quantity for his own private use, the importer may apply to the Customs-collector for a refund or remission (as the case may be) of so much of the duty thereon as is in excess of ten per cent. ad valorem; and if such collector is satisfied as to the identity of the articles, and that such importer is in other respects entitled to such refund or remission, he shall grant the same accordingly.

9. The Governor General in Council may from time to time by notification in the Gazette of India direct that duties not exceeding those specified in the second schedule hereto annexed shall be levied upon any articles mentioned in that schedule and brought by land into any part of British India, and may in like manner cancel any such notification.

10. The Governor General in Council may from time to time by notification in the Gazette of India --
 (a) regulate or prohibit the transport of any description of arms, ammunition or military stores over the whole of British India or any part thereof, either altogether or except under a license and to the extent and in the manner permitted by such license, and

(b) cancel any such notification.

Explanation.—Arms, ammunition or military stores transhipped at a port in British India are transported within the meaning of this section.

11. The Local Government with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council may, at any places along the boundary line between British India and Foreign territory and at such distance within such line as it deems expedient, establish searching posts at which all vessels, carts and baggage animals and all boxes, bales and packages in transit may be stopped and searched for arms, ammunition and military stores by any officer empowered by such Government in this behalf by name or in virtue of his office.

12. When any person is found carrying or conveying any arms, ammunition or military stores, whether covered by a license or not, in such manner or under such circumstances as to afford just grounds of suspicion that the same are being carried by him with intent to use them, or that the same may be used, for any unlawful purpose, any person may without warrant apprehend him and seize such arms, ammunition or military stores

Any person so apprehended and any arms, ammunition or military stores so taken by a person not being a Magistrate or Police-officer shall be delivered over as soon as possible to a Police-officer.

All persons apprehended by, or delivered to, a Police-officer and all arms and ammunition seized by or delivered to any such officer under this section shall be taken without unnecessary delay before a Magistrate.

IV.—Going armed and possessing Arms, &c.

13. No person shall go armed with any arms except under a license and to the extent and in the manner permitted thereby.

Any person so going armed without a license in contravention of its provisions may be punished by any Magistrate, Police-officer or other person empowered by the Local Government in this behalf by name or by virtue of his office.

14. No person shall have in his possession or under his control any non-fire-arms, or any ammunition or military stores except under a license and in the manner and to the extent permitted thereby.

During the three months next following the date on which this Act comes into force nothing in the former part of this section shall apply to the possession by any person of any fire-arms, ammunition or military stores in any place to which section 32, clause 2, of Act No. XXXI of 1860 does not apply at such date.

Any person having within the said period of three months any fire-arms, ammunition or military stores in his possession in any such place may, and any person having at the expiry of the same period any fire-arms, ammunition or military stores in his possession in any such place without a license shall, deposit the same with the officer in charge of the nearest police-station.

If the owner of any thing deposited under this section does not within the year next following the date on which this Act comes into force, obtain a license authorizing him to possess such thing and apply for delivery of the same, such thing shall be forfeited to Her Majesty.

15. In any place to which section 32, clause 2 of Act No. XXXI of 1860, applies at the time this Act comes into force or to which the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may by notification in the local official Gazette specially extend this section, no person shall have in his possession any arms of any description except under a license and in the manner and to the extent permitted thereby.

16. Any person possessing arms, ammunition or military stores, the possession whereof by him has, in consequence of the cancellation or expiry of a license or by the issue of a notification under section fifteen become unlawful, shall deposit the same without unnecessary delay with the officer in charge of the nearest police-station.

If the owner of any thing deposited under this section does not within three years from the date on which such thing is so deposited produce a license authorising him to possess the same and apply for delivery of the same, such thing shall be forfeited to Her Majesty.

V.—Licenses.

17. The Governor General in Council may from time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India, make rules to determine the officers by whom, the form in which, and the terms and conditions on and subject to which, any license shall be granted; and may by such rules among other matters—

(a) fix the period for which such license shall continue in force;

(b) fix a fee payable by stamp or otherwise in respect of any such license granted in a place to which section 32, clause 2, of Act No. XXXI of 1860 applies at the time this Act comes into force, or in respect of any such license other than a license for possession granted in any other place;

(c) direct that the holder of any such license other than a license for possession shall keep a record or account in such form as the Local Government may prescribe of anything done under such license, and exhibit such record or account when called upon by an officer of Government to do so;

(d) empower any officer of Government to enter and inspect any premises in which arms, ammunition or military stores are manufactured or kept by any person holding a license of the description referred to in section five or section six;

(e) direct that any such person shall exhibit the entire stock of arms, ammunition and military stores in his possession or under his control to any officer of Government so empowered, and

(f) require the person holding any license or acting under any license to produce the same, and to produce or account for the arms, ammunition or military stores covered by the same when called upon by an officer of Government so to do.

Cancelling and suspension of license.

18. Any license may be cancelled or suspended—

(a) by the officer by whom the same was granted, or by any authority to which he may be subordinate, or by any Magistrate of a district or commissioner of police in a presidency town, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the holder of such license may be, when, for reasons to be recorded in writing, such officer, authority, Magistrate or commissioner deems it necessary for the security of the public peace to cancel or suspend such license; or

(b) by any Judge or Magistrate before whom the holder of such license is convicted of an offence against this Act, or against the rules made under this Act; and the Local Government may at its discretion by a notification in the local official Gazette cancel or suspend all or any licenses throughout the whole or any portion of the territories under its administration.

VI.—Penalties.

19. Whoever commits any of the following offences (namely)—

(a) manufactures, converts or sells, or keeps, offers or exposes for sale any arms, ammunition or military stores in contravention of the provisions of section five;

(b) fails to give notice as required by the same section;

(c) imports or exports any arms, ammunition or military stores in contravention of the provisions of section six;

(d) transports any arms, ammunition or military stores in contravention of a regulation or prohibition issued under section ten;

(e) goes armed in contravention of the provisions of section thirteen;

(f) has in his possession or under his control any arms, ammunition or military stores in contravention of the provisions of section fourteen or section fifteen;

(g) intentionally makes any false entry in a record or account which by a rule made under section seventeen, clause (c), he is required to keep;

(h) intentionally fails to exhibit anything which by a rule made under section seventeen, clause (e), he is required to exhibit; or

(i) fails to deposit arms, ammunition or military stores, as required by section fourteen or section sixteen;

shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

20. Whoever does any act mentioned in clause

For secret breaches of sections 5, 6, 10, 14 and 15. (a), (c), (d) or (f) of section nineteen, in such manner as to indicate an intention that such act may not be known to any public servant as defined in the Indian Penal Code, or to any person employed upon a Railway or to the servant of any public carrier, and whoever, on any search being made under section twenty-five, conceals or attempts to conceal any arms, ammunition or military stores, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years, or with fine, or with both.

21. Whoever, in violation of a condition subject to which a license has been granted, does or omits to do any act shall, when the doing or omitting to do such act is not punishable under section nineteen or section twenty, be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

22. Whoever knowingly purchases any arms, ammunition or military stores from any person not licensed or authorized under the proviso to section five to sell the same; or delivers any arms, ammunition or military stores into the possession of any person without previously ascertaining that such person is legally authorized to possess the same, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

23. Any person violating any rule made under this Act, and for the violation of which no penalty is provided by this Act, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with both.

24. When any person is convicted of an offence punishable under this Act committed by him in respect of any arms, ammunition or military stores, it shall be in the discretion of the convicting Court or Magistrate further to direct that the whole or any portion of such arms, ammunition or military stores, and any vessel, cart or baggage animal used to convey the same, and any box, package or bale in which the same may have been concealed, together with the other contents of such box, package or bale, shall be confiscated.

VII.—Miscellaneous.

25. Whenever any Magistrate has reason to believe that any person residing within the local limits of his jurisdiction has in his possession any arms, ammunition or military stores for any unlawful purpose, or that such person cannot be left in the possession of any such arms, ammunition or military stores without danger to the public peace, such Magistrate, having first recorded the grounds of his belief, may cause a search to be made of the house or premises occupied by such person, or in which such Magistrate has reason to believe such arms, ammunition or military stores are or is to be found, and may seize and detain the same, although covered by a license, in safe custody for such time as he thinks necessary.

The search in such case shall be conducted by, or in the presence of, a Magistrate, or by or in the presence of some officer, specially empowered in this behalf by name or in virtue of his office by the Local Government.

26. The Local Government may at any time order or cause to be seized any arms, ammunition or military stores in the possession of any person, notwithstanding that such person is licensed to possess the same, and may detain the same for such time as it thinks necessary for the public safety.

27. The Governor General in Council may from time to time by notification published in the Gazette of India—

(a) exempt any person by name or in virtue of his office or any class of persons or exclude any description of arms or ammunition or withdraw any part of British India, from the operation of any prohibition or direction contained in this Act; and

(b) cancel any such notification and again subject the persons or things or the part of British India comprised therein to the operation of such prohibition or direction.

28. Every person aware of the commission of any offence punishable under this Act, shall in the absence of reasonable excuse, the burden of proving which shall lie upon such person, give information of the same to the nearest Police-officer or Magistrate, and every person employed upon any railway or by any public carrier shall, in the absence of reasonable excuse, the burden of proving which shall lie upon such person, give information to the nearest Police-officer regarding any box, package or bale in transit which he may have reason to suspect contains arms, ammunition or military stores in respect of which an offence against this Act has been or is being committed.

29. Where an offence punishable under section nineteen, clause (f), has been committed within three months from the date on which this Act comes into force in any province, district or place to which section 32, clause 2 of Act XXXI of 1860 applies at such date, or where such an offence has been committed in any part of British India not being such a district, province or place, no proceedings shall be instituted against any person in respect of such offence without the previous sanction of the Magistrate of the district or in a presidency town of the commissioner of police.

30. Where a search is to be made under the Code of Criminal Procedure or the Presidency Magistrate's Act 1877 in the course of any proceedings instituted in respect of an offence punishable under section nineteen, clause (f), such search shall, notwithstanding anything contained in the said Code or Act, be made in the presence of some officer specially appointed by name or in virtue of his office by the Local Government in this behalf, and not otherwise.

31. Nothing in this Act shall be deemed to prevent any person from being prosecuted under any other law for any act or omission which constitutes an offence against this Act or the rules made under it, or from being liable under such other law to any higher punishment or penalty than that provided by this Act: Provided that no person shall be punished twice for the same offence.

32. The Local Government may from time to time by notification in the local official Gazette direct a census to be taken of all fire-arms in any local area, and empower any person by name or in virtue of his office to take such census.

On the issue of any such notification, all persons possessing any such arms in such area shall furnish to the person so empowered such information as he may require in reference thereto, and shall produce such arms to him if he so requires.

Any person refusing or neglecting to produce any such arms when so required, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with both.

33. No proceeding other than a suit shall be commenced against any person for any thing done in pursuance of this Act, without having given him at least one month's previous notice in writing of the intended proceeding and of the cause thereof, nor after the expiration of three months from the accrual of such cause.

PART V.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Third Publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 23rd February 1878, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

No. 3 of 1878.

A Bill to regulate Ferries in the Panjáb, North-Western Provinces and Oudh.

WHEREAS it is expedient to regulate ferries in the Panjáb, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

I.—PRELIMINARY.

1. This Act may be called “The Northern India Ferries Act, 1878.”

It extends only to the territories respectively administered by the Lieutenant-Governors of the Panjáb and the North-Western Provinces and the Chief Commissioner of Oudh; and

It shall come into force in each of the said territories on such date as the Local Government may by notification in the local official Gazette fix in this behalf.

2. On and from the date on which it shall come into force in the territories respectively administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and the Chief Commissioner of Oudh, Bengal Regulation VI of 1819 shall be repealed therein.

3. In this Act the word “ferry” includes a bridge of boats, pontoons or rafts, and also includes the approaches to, and landing-places of, a ferry.

Interpretation-clause.

II.—PUBLIC FERRIES.

Power to declare and establish public ferries. 4. The Local Government may, from time to time,

(a) declare what ferries shall be deemed public ferries, and the respective districts in which, for the purposes of this Act, they shall be deemed to be situate;

(b) take possession of a private ferry and declare it to be a public ferry;

(c) establish new public ferries, where, in its opinion, they are needed;

(d) change the course of any public ferry;

(e) discontinue any public ferry which it deems unnecessary.

Every such declaration, establishment, change or discontinuance shall be made by notification in the local official Gazette:

Provided that, when a river lies between two Provinces, the powers conferred by this section shall in respect of such river be exercised by the Governor General in Council, by notification in the Gazette of India and not otherwise:

Provided also that, when any alteration in the course of a public ferry is rendered necessary by changes in the bed of the river, such alteration may be made by the Commissioner of the Division in which such ferry is situate.

5. Claims for compensation for any loss sustained by any person in consequence of a private ferry being taken possession of under section four shall be enquired into by the Magistrate of the District and submitted for the consideration and orders of the Local Government, and shall not be cognizable by the Civil Courts.

Claims for compensation.

6. The immediate superintendence of all public ferries shall, except as provided in section seven, be vested in the Magistrate of the District in which such ferries are situate, or in such other officer as the Local Government may, from time to time, appoint in this behalf; and such Magistrate or officer shall make all necessary arrangements for the supply of boats for such ferries, and for the collection of the authorized tolls leviable thereat.

7. The Local Government may direct that any public ferry situated within the limits of a town be managed by the officer or public body charged with the superintendence of the municipal arrangements of such town; and may further direct that all or any part of the proceeds from such ferry be paid into the Municipal Fund of such town; and thereupon such ferry shall be managed, and such proceeds or part thereof shall be paid, accordingly.

8. The tolls at any public ferry may from time to time be let by public auction for such term not exceeding five years as may be deemed expedient by the Commissioner of the Division in which such ferry is situate, and may be let to the highest bidder.

The lessee shall conform to the rules made under this Act for the management and control of such ferry; and may be called upon by the officer conducting the auction, to give such security for his good conduct and for the punctual payment of the rent as such officer thinks fit.

Such officer may, for sufficient reason recorded in writing under his hand, refuse to accept the offer of the highest bidder, and may accept any other bid, or may withdraw the tolls from auction.

9. All arrears due by the lessee of a public ferry on account of his lease may be recovered from the lessee or his surety (if any) by the Magistrate of the District in which such ferry is situate, as if they were arrears of land-revenue.

10. The Local Government may cancel the lease of any public ferry, on the expiration of six months' notice to the lessee of its intention to cancel such lease.

When any lease is cancelled under this section, the Magistrate of the District shall pay to the lessee such compensation as he may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, award.

11. Subject to the revision and confirmation of the Local Government, the Commissioner of each Division may from time to time make rules consistent with this Act—for the control and the management of all public ferries within his division; for regulating the time and manner at and in which, and the terms on which, the tolls of such ferries may be let by auction;

for collecting the rents payable for the tolls of such ferries; and for fixing the limits of such ferries; and, when the tolls of a ferry have been let under section eight, he may from time to time (subject as aforesaid) make additional rules consistent with this Act—

(a) in cases in which the communication is to be established by means of a bridge of boats, pontoons or rafts, for regulating the manner in which such bridge shall be constructed and maintained, and

(b) in cases in which the traffic is conveyed in boats, for regulating (1) the number and kinds of such boats and their dimensions, (2) the number of the crew to be kept by the lessee for each boat, (3) the maintenance of such boats continually in good condition, (4) the hours during which, and the intervals within which, the lessee shall be bound to ply, and (5) the number of passengers, carts, carriages and animals, and the quantity of goods, that may be carried in each kind of boat at one trip.

The lessee shall make such returns of traffic as the Commissioner may from time to time require.

12. No person shall, except with the sanction of the officer charged with the management of a public ferry, keep a ferry boat for the purpose of plying for hire to or from any point within a distance of two miles from the limits of a public ferry:

Provided that, in the case of any specified public ferry, the Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, reduce the said distance of two miles to such extent as it thinks fit:

Provided also that nothing hereinbefore contained shall prevent persons plying between two places, one of which is without and one within the said limits, when the distance between such two places is not less than three miles, or apply to boats which the Local Government expressly exempts from the operation of this section.

13. No person shall use the approach to, or landing-place of, a public ferry, unless he has paid the toll payable for crossing such ferry.

III.—TOLLS.

14. Tolls, according to such rates as are from time to time fixed by the Local Government, shall be levied on all persons, animals and other things crossing any river by a public ferry:

Provided that the Local Government may, from time to time, declare what persons, animals or other things shall, when employed or transmitted on the public service, or for other sufficient reason, be exempt from payment of such tolls.

Where the tolls of a ferry have been let under section eight, any such declaration, if made after the date of the auction, shall entitle the lessee to such abatement of the rent payable in respect of the tolls as may be fixed by the Commissioner of the Division with the concurrence of the Local Government.

15. The lessee or other person authorized to collect the tolls of any public ferry, shall affix a table of such tolls, legibly written or printed in the vernacular language, in some conspicuous place near the ferry, and shall be bound to produce, on demand, a list of the tolls, signed by the Magistrate of the District or such other officer as he appoints on this behalf.

16. Except as provided by section seven, all tolls or rents received under this Act, after defraying thereout all charges incurred in carrying out this Act in the Province in which they are so received, shall be disposed of as follows, that is to say, (a) in the territories administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces, such tolls and rents shall be credited to the Fund constituted for those Provinces by the North-Western Provinces Local Rates Act, 1878; (b) in the territories administered by the Chief Commissioner of Oudh, such tolls and rents shall be credited to the Fund constituted for that Province by the Oudh Local Rates Act, 1878; and (c) in the territories administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjáb, such tolls and rents shall be credited to the Local Government and applied at its discretion in any portion of such territories to any of the purposes specified in the second clause of section 7 of the Panjáb Local Rates Act, 1878.

17. Any person may compound for the tolls payable for the use of a public ferry at such rates as may, from time to time, be fixed by the Commissioner of the Division, with the previous sanction of the Local Government.

IV.—PRIVATE FERRIES.

18. The Commissioner of the Division may with the previous sanction of the Local Government from time to time, make rules for the maintenance of order and for the safety of passengers and property at ferries other than those which may have been declared to be public ferries.

19. The tolls charged at such ferries shall not exceed the highest rates for the time being fixed under section fourteen for similar public ferries.

V.—PENALTIES.

20. Every lessee or other person authorized to collect the tolls of a public ferry, who neglects to affix and keep in good order and repair the table of tolls mentioned in section fifteen, or who wilfully removes, alters or defaces such table, or allows it to become illegible, or who fails to produce, on demand, the list of the tolls mentioned in section fifteen, shall be punished with fine which may extend to fifty rupees.

21. Every such lessee or other person as aforesaid and any person in possession of a private ferry asking or taking other than the lawful toll, or without due cause delaying any person, animal or other thing, shall be punished with fine which may extend to one hundred rupees.

22. Every lessee of the tolls of a public ferry breaking any rule for the management of such ferry made under section eleven, and every person in possession of a private ferry breaking any rule for the management of such ferry made under section eighteen, shall be punished with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with both.

23. When any lessee of the tolls of a public ferry has been convicted of an offence under section twenty-two, or, having been convicted of an offence under section twenty or section twenty-one, is again convicted of an offence under either of those sections, the Magistrate of the District may, with the sanction of the Commissioner of the Division, cancel the lease of the tolls of such ferry, and make other arrangements for its management during the whole or any part of the term for which the tolls were let.

24. Every person crossing any river by a public ferry, or using the approach to, or landing-place thereof, who refuses to pay the proper toll, or who, with intent of avoiding payment of such toll, fraudulently or forcibly crosses any ferry-station without paying the toll, or who obstructs any toll-collector or lessee of the tolls of a public ferry, or any of his assistants, in any way in the execution of their duty under this Act, shall be punished with fine which may extend to fifty rupees over and above the value of the damage, if any, which he has done to the ferry concerned.

25. Whoever conveys for hire any passenger, animal, cart, carriage or other vehicle or any goods or merchandise to or from any point within a distance of two miles from the limits of any public ferry in contravention of the provisions hereinbefore contained, shall be punished with fine which may extend to fifty rupees.

Where the tolls of such ferry have been let under the provisions hereinbefore contained, the whole or any portion of any fine realized under this section or section twenty-four may, at the discretion of the convicting Magistrate or Bench of Magistrates, be paid to the lessee.

26. All offences against this Act shall be heard and determined by any Magistrate or Bench of Magistrates, and any Magistrate having summary jurisdiction under chapter XVIII of the Code of Criminal Procedure shall try such offences in manner provided by that chapter.

27. Every Magistrate or Bench of Magistrates trying offences under this Act, may enquire into and assess the value of the damage (any) done by the offender to the ferry concerned.

and shall order the amount of such value to be by him in addition to any fine imposed upon him under this Act; and the amount so ordered to be paid shall be leviable as if it were a fine.

28. All matters determined, orders issued, acts done, penalties imposed and proceedings held in the territories administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjáb after the repeal of Bengal Regulation VI of 1819 by the Panjáb Laws Act, 1872, section 4, and before this Act comes into force in such territories shall, whenever such determinations, orders, acts, penalties or proceedings would have been lawful if the said Regulation had been in force, be deemed to have been lawfully determined, issued, done, imposed and held respectively.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

An Act for the regulation of ferries in the Panjáb is much needed. Up to the 1st June 1872, when Act No. IV of 1872 (The Panjáb Laws Act) came into force, ferries in the Panjáb were governed by Bengal Regulation VI of 1819; but by the Panjáb Laws Act that Regulation was inadvertently repealed, and, no other law being substituted for it, there has from that date been no law for the control of ferries in the Panjáb. Another result is that, as the law now stands, it would be difficult for the Local Government to prevent an unlicensed person from setting up a rival ferry alongside of a Government ferry, and thus materially reducing the income of the latter ferry and the funds available for its maintenance.

To remedy this state of things, and at the same time to provide generally for the regulation of Government ferries, a Bill to regulate ferries in the Panjáb was prepared. About the same time the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Chief Commissioner of Oudh submitted a draft Bill for the regulation of ferries in the territories under his administration. The Bill so submitted, and the Bill for the Panjáb, as modified and supplemented in accordance with communications subsequently received from the Panjáb, were found to differ so little, that it was thought advisable to amalgamate the two Bills, and accordingly the present Bill, extending to the Panjáb, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, has been prepared.

The Bill is based upon the Burma Ferries Act, II of 1873, and the provisions of that Act have been followed as closely as the different circumstances and requirements of the provinces with which this Bill deals would permit.

In section 3 it has been thought desirable to declare that the term 'ferry' includes boat-bridges, as they often take the place of ferries in Northern India, and are managed in the same way as ferries properly so called.

There appear to be no recognized private ferries in the Panjáb, but they exist in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh. A clause has, therefore, been introduced in section 4, in accordance with the wishes of the Lieutenant-Governor and Chief Commissioner, giving the Local Government power to take possession of private ferries and make them public, and in section 5 the manner in which claims for compensation made by persons whose ferries are so taken by the Government are to be dealt with, is laid down. This section follows the provisions of section 6 of Regulation VI of 1819.

In cases in which an alteration in the course of a public ferry is rendered necessary by changes in the bed of the river, power has been given to the Commissioner (section 4) to make such alteration as is necessary without referring to the Local Government.

Section 9 provides that arrears due by the lessee of a public ferry on account of his lease may be recovered as if they were arrears of land-revenue.

By section 13 it is provided that any person using the approach to, or landing-place of, a ferry shall pay toll.

By section 17 power is given to any person to compound for ferry-tolls. This seems a reasonable provision for people living in the neighbourhood of the ferry, who have constantly to cross it for purposes of business or otherwise.

Sections 18 and 19 deal with private ferries: the former empowers the Commissioner, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, to make rules for the maintenance of order and the safety of passengers and property: the latter declares that the tolls chargeable at such ferries shall not exceed the highest rates fixed for similar public ferries.

The penalties generally have been increased in accordance with the wishes of the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Chief Commissioner of Oudh.

WEEKLY CONDITION REPORT OF THE DISTRESSED DISTRICTS OF THE MYSORE PROVINCE.

PROVINCE OF MYSORE.

(No. 56).

Special Famine Report for the Week ending 2nd March 1878.Statement No. 56, regarding Famine Relief Operations in the Province of Mysore, for the Week ending the 2nd March 1878.

The weather continues warm. Prospects are unchanged and, unless prices rise, no serious difficulty is anticipated in dealing with those who still require assistance. Prices have not varied during the past week on the whole, though they are constantly fluctuating, and importations continue fairly active.

2. By rail, the imports amounted to 1,935 tons, or 113 tons more than last week. From Bangalore 544 tons were sent to the interior, being 60 less than for the week previous.

3. The number of laborers on Civil Relief Works increased from 6,317 to 8,818, being 2,501 in excess. The increase was due to the opening of works to relieve some of the larger towns, or tentatively to ascertain the extent of distress believed to exist. Thus a small improvement to the Sompur Road was begun to check a disposition on the part of some of the poor of Dod Ballapur town to wander towards Bangalore. The Anekal-Bannerghatta Road in the Anekal Taluk was commenced for a similar reason, and as the laborers in that taluk form the bulk of those under Civil Agency in the Bangalore District, the works there will shortly be taken over by the Public Works Department. In the Kolar District, two petty works have been opened for Kolar and Mulbagal Towns, and the work in the Shrinivasapur Taluk not proving sufficient, a second has been commenced, which will very probably be transferred to D. P. W. management. In Tūmkūr, there are still a large number under Civil Agency, chiefly on the Sira-Mysore Road, and it would be very desirable if this work could also be got under professional supervision. Besides this large work, there are a few petty ones near towns. One new work has also been tentatively started in the Harnhalli Taluk of Hassan.

4. The Department Public Works employed 41,984 laborers, or 1,639 less than in the previous week. Half this decrease is owing to the exclusion of the Bangalore Water Works from the returns, as that project is not now worked on Relief principles; and half to a falling off on the Mysore Water Works, in which district the numbers on Relief are steadily declining. In the Hassan District also between 600 and 700 laborers, hitherto included, have this week been omitted, as not properly Relief coolies. The following statement shews the more important works in progress:—

No.	District.	Name of Work.	Number employed.
			Previous Week.	Present Week.

14	Do.	Kotgunda Tank	687	631
TOTAL			40,258	40,096

* Labor has been transferred as the tank is nearly complete to works not yet brought on this list.

5. In Relief Camps there were 3,248 inmates, or 280 less than in the preceding week. There were besides 473 persons in receipt of the village grain dole. There were 43 admissions to Camps and 481 discharges. The following numbers were dealt with in Bangalore :—

REPORTS ON THE STATE OF THE SEASON AND PROSPECTS OF THE CROPS
FOR THE WEEK ENDING THE 12th MARCH 1878.

GENERAL REMARKS.—No rain has fallen during the week in Madras; it continues to be much wanted in Madura, and is also needed in parts of Chingleput and North and South Arcot; the standing crops are in fair condition, but prices continue to rise. The number on relief works is 122,016, and on gratuitous relief 132,651, a decrease of 4,953 and 580 on the figures of last week respectively. In Mysore there has been no rain; the crops are generally in good condition; the number on works for the week ending the 2nd instant is reported as 10,802, but there is probably some mistake in this figure; the number gratuitously relieved was 3,721, which is 81 less than in the previous week. In Bombay showers are reported in Sind, where prospects are improving; there is no change elsewhere. In the Central Provinces the weather has been clear during the week: cutting and threshing are progressing; the outturn is said to be everywhere below the average; export continues, with rising prices. In Berar the rabi is said to have partially failed in Basim. In Central India there has been no rain; in Gwalior and other Northern States the crops have suffered from blight, and distress is increasing. In Rajputana there has been no rain; the crops are progressing favourably. In Bengal rain has fallen in the Eastern and showers in most of the Central districts, Balasore, and Pooree; the rabi crops are being reaped, and give promise of a good outturn, except in parts of the Patna division, where damage has been caused by blight, frost and insects. Some rain has fallen in Sylhet, none in the valley districts of Assam; prospects are good. No crops are now on the ground in Burma. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh the weather is dry and clear; the harvest is going on in the Eastern and Southern districts, and the ripening crops elsewhere promise very well; the new grain is coming into the market, and prices are slightly falling. In the Punjab there has been no rain during the week; agricultural prospects are good generally, and have much improved in the Peshawar district.

Darjeeling	0.20	Squally weather, with a little rain; the minor crops are doing well; the land is being prepared for the rice sowings.
Midnapore	0.62	Weather somewhat cooler than it was, except on the 9th, it is now cloudy and hot; those crops that still remain on the ground are in good condition.
Howrah	0.01	Weather getting hot; the little boro dhon on the ground is doing well.
Hooghly	0.16	Weather cool in the first part of the week; ploughing is retarded for want of rain; a few cases of small-pox and cholera have been reported from the Chinsurah Municipality; cattle disease is prevalent in thara Pundooah.
Burdwan	Nil	Sugarcane is being cut and pressed, the outturn is good; wheat and barley are doing well; cholera still lingers in Culna sub-division.
Bankoora	Nil	Weather pleasant, but warm since 8th instant; sugarcane, cotton, gram, wheat, and barley have all given a good outturn; the growing crops viz., boro rice, tobacco, and indigo promise well.
Beerbhoom	Nil	Weather seasonable, not too warm; nothing new to report on the state and prospects of the crops.
Sonthal Pergunnahs	Nil	Weather still cool; no change in the state and prospects of the crops since last week's report; there is some small-pox and cholera about, but no serious cases.
Bhágulpur	Nil	Night and mornings are cool; days are warm and bright; prospects of the rabi crops are very favourable; no further rise in prices this week; health is good.
Monghyr	Nil	West wind prevailing; state and prospects of the crops are excellent.
Purneah	Nil	Weather fair and mild; westerly winds have been prevalent; the outturn of the crops harvested is good; the rabi crops generally are of excellent promise; the bhadai sowing has commenced; light rain for this crop is required.
Maldah	Nil	Weather fair; state and prospects of the crops are satisfactory; cholera has broken out about Manick-huck, where a native doctor has been sent, also with less severity in thara Nawabgunge; in all 28 deaths from cholera were reported during the week.
Durbehunga	Nil	Weather seasonable; the rabi crop is being harvested; it promises to be one of the best an average crop.
Mozufferpore	Nil	Season getting warm; the harvesting of the rabi crops has commenced here and there in all the three sub-divisions of the district, and a fair outturn is expected, save in the pulses which have suffered somewhat from frost, blight, or insects; a few cases of small-pox are reported from Soosund in Setaamurhee sub-division, as well as from the Sunder sub-division.
Sarun	Nil	Weather seasonable; west wind prevailing; the prospects of the cold-weather crops continue good; rahur is fast approaching maturity; wheat, barley, peas, mustard, gram, and masoor are still being harvested; people are busy in sowing the spring crops; indigo seed is being put in the ground; the early sowings have germinated; poppy-heads are being tapped; mango is still doing well; new peas and other pulses are coming into the market; prices are stationary; public health is good.
Chumparun	Nil	Weather nice and cool at night, hot during the day; the prospects of the rabi crops are fair throughout the district; towards the south and east of the district (Tolaria and Madhuban) these crops are very promising; the average outturn would be, as reported in the previous week, 10 annas; food-grain market is steady; indigo sowings have commenced; opium prospects are not favourable.
Patna	Nil	Weather still cold in the mornings and evenings, seasonably warm at midday; the rabi crops are being harvested, and the outturn is fairly favourable where caterpillars did not damage them; health is good.
Gya	Nil	Weather warm and unclouded; maximum thermometer in the shade 83.6°; no change to report in the state and prospects of the crops; prices are about stationary.
Shahabad	Nil	Weather getting hot and clear; the rabi crops are being partially cut; much injury seems to have been caused by insects in various parts of the district; where this has not happened the crops are good; the planting of sugarcane has commenced.
Hazáribágh	Nil	The temperature is still below the usual average; no change to report about the crops; there is very little now on the ground; export still continues, and prices are rising; general health is good.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

No. 1911, dated 18th March 1878.

RESOLUTION—By the Government of India, FINANCIAL DEPT.

1. Such full explanations of the general financial situation of the Government of India have lately been given in the Legislative Council of the Governor General, in connection with the new measures of taxation which have been adopted, that the necessity for entering into much detail at present has been obviated. As no legislation is required to carry out any measures which the Government of India now proposes to adopt, the Financial Statement necessarily takes the form of a Resolution of the Government, for no Statement could be made in the Legislative Council without disregarding the provisions of the Act of Parliament by which the Council is constituted. It will, however, be convenient to recapitulate the main facts which have lately been laid before the Council and the public, and to refer to the more important measures, whether of taxation or of financial administration, which have been taken during the past year.

2. A Statement in explanation of the Accounts of the year 1876-77, of the Regular Estimates of the current year 1877-78, and of the Budget Estimate of the coming year 1878-79, accompanies this Resolution. The main results will now be summarized.

3. The Accounts of 1876-77 show a deficit on the ordinary account £2,182,778, of which a sum of £3,450,000 is due to Famine Expenditure and Loss of Revenue.

4. The Expenditure on Productive Public Works (under which designation the class of works will be henceforth spoken of hitherto termed Extraordinary) was £3,809,284.

5. The Regular Estimate for 1877-78 shows a deficit on the Ordinary Account of £3,431,000. This result is worse than the Budget Estimate £2,809,300, due to the prolongation of the Famine in Southern India, which is now expected to cost, in loss of revenue and direct expenditure during the current year, £3,500,000.

6. The Expenditure on Productive Works for 1877-78 is now estimated £4,877,000.

7. The effects of the Famine have so entirely disturbed the whole of the Financial arrangements of these two years that no useful comparison can be instituted between the Budget Estimates and the later results. Full details, however, will be found in the Statement appended to this Resolution.

8. The Budget Estimates for 1878-79 show the Ordinary Revenue at £63,250,000, and the Ordinary Expenditure at £61,094,000, with a surplus of £2,156,000.

9. The increase of the Revenues compared with the Regular Estimates for 1877-78 is due, to the extent of £2,654,000, to the incorporation of Provincial rates which have hitherto been excluded; £929,000 arises from new taxation.

The land revenue of 1877-78 having been about £1,300,000 in deficit of the normal receipts, and that of 1878-79 being about £700,000 in excess, accounts for an apparent improvement in the Budget Estimate of nearly £2,000,000.

The improvement in the Excise, £248,000, is partly real and the result of improved administration, and partly due to depression in 1877-78.

Under Assessed Taxes is shown the proceeds of the New License Tax amounting to £765,000.

The decrease under Customs and increase under Salt will be explained subsequently.

The net revenue under Opium is taken at 6 millions, being less by about £500,000 than the Regular Estimate. This decrease is mainly due, as explained in the Statement, to a failure in the opium crop in Malwa.

The decrease under Mints is due to the very large coining operations of 1877-78.

The head Guaranteed Railways shows a decrease of £965,000, the revenue having been swollen by famine and other exceptional causes during the current year.

State Railways show an estimated increase of £430,000, with a gross income of £967,000.

10. The ordinary expenditure excluding £555,000 for Famine amounts to £60,444,600, showing an increase over the corresponding estimated expenditure for 1877-78 (also excluding Famine) of £3,765,000, of which £2,832,100 is due to the incorporation of the Provincial Expenditure now for the first time brought into the general accounts.

Under Expenditure, the increase under Interest is £161,000, the total charge being £5,909,000. The apparent increases under Land Revenue, Minor Departments, Police, Education and some other less important heads are due to the transfers from Provincial Funds.

The reduction under Opium, £469,000, arises from reduced payments to cultivators.

The largely increased remittances in the coming year lead to an increase of £1,384,000 under the head Loss by Exchange.

Famine Relief shows a reduction of £4,734,000. The estimate provides for £500,000 for relief, to which £55,000 has to be added under Army. The corresponding charge last year under Army was £200,000.

The Expenditure under Army shows a satisfactory diminution of £636,000, due to the extent of £225,000 to expenditure in India, the rest being under Stores in England.

The increase under Public Works Ordinary is due to the Provincial Expenditure.

State Railways show an increase of £298,000 with a total of £704,000, leaving a net increase of £263,000.

11. The Expenditure under Productive Public Works, hitherto classed as Public Works Extraordinary, is estimated for 1878-79 at £4,555,000. This grant is less by £322,000 than the Regular Estimate for 1878-79, but exceeds the Budget Grant of that year by £927,000. The excess expenditure under this head in the current year was due partly to the desire to complete the Indus Valley Railway, and partly to works undertaken for Famine relief.

12. Taking into account the capital transactions with the Guaranteed Railway Companies and the loans to Native States, &c., the net sum borrowed in 1876-77 was £3,306,595, exceeding by £1,409,795 the sum (£1,896,800) entered in the Regular Estimates. This, and some other circumstances, explain the excess of £2,776,865 in the Opening Balances of 1877-78 as compared with the Regular Estimates. In 1877-78 the net sum borrowed similarly calculated amounts to £6,726,000, exceeding by £1,344,900 the sum £5,381,100 shown in the Budget Estimates. The Closing Balances of the year are now expected to be £16,000,000, being more than the Opening Balances by £535,335, and than the estimated Closing Balances by £2,488,800. The great extra expenditure imposed upon the State by the prolongation of the Famine was practically almost entirely met by the excess sum borrowed in the two years compared with the Estimates of the 15th March last, viz., £2,754,695.

Next year it is proposed to borrow in all only £2,500,000, of which £600,000 is wanted for loans to Native States and the like, and £1,000,000 for repayment to the Guaranteed Railway Companies; the net sums therefore added to the Debt will, if the Estimates are realised, be only £900,000. But, on the other hand, the balances will be reduced by £1,500,000. The Government of India cannot at present give any information about the time or manner in which it will borrow the £2,500,000 set down in the Estimates, or any other sum which it may actually want. The Closing Balance of 1878-79 is estimated at £14,500,000. Of the Closing Balances, £14,734,600 in 1877-78 and £13,069,200 in 1878-79 are expected to be in the Indian Treasuries.

13. The total net cost of the Famine in Southern India is now estimated to be—

In 1876-77	3,450,000
In 1877-78	6,500,000
TOTAL	9,950,000

In 1878-79 it is, at present, expected that arrears of land revenue lying over from the famine years will be recovered in excess of the famine expenditure occurring in the year by about £116,000. Upon the whole, it seems probable that the whole net cost of the Famine will be about nine-and-three-quarters millions sterling, viz. :—

	£
In the Bombay Presidency	1,300,000
In the Madras Presidency	8,450,000

14. In the Financial Statement for 1877-78 made by the Hon'ble Sir John Strachey on the 15th March 1877 it was shown as the result of a careful examination of the actual Accounts of the Revenues and Expenditure of the Empire during the preceding seven years that, excluding the cost of famine relief, the Government had just managed to pay its way. Before the commencement of the great famine from which the country has lately been suffering, and the effects of which have even now not entirely passed away, the finances of India might be considered to be in a condition of equilibrium. But for one reason the financial position would have been satisfactory. The ordinary public expenditure, with the exception of that incurred in England for the Army, not only showed no tendency to increase, but, excluding famine relief, it was less in 1875-76 by more than £1,000,000 than it had been seven years before. Excluding Loss by Exchange, an element altogether beyond our control, the net expenditure during the same period had decreased by £2,251,000. It was shown also that the net revenue of the Empire had increased in seven years by more than £2,000,000, or at the average rate of nearly £300,000 a year. Thus, but for one cause, we might have hoped that no addition to the burdens of the country would be necessary, and that the normal growth of the revenues would have enabled the Government to go on gradually carrying out those measures of fiscal and administrative reform which it felt to be essential to the prosperity and progress of the Empire. The cause which rendered nugatory all such anticipations and beliefs was the recognition of the fact that the obligations entailed on the Government by the periodical and inevitable recurrence of famine must be provided for among the ordinary charges of the State.

16. It was not possible to estimate with any confidence the amount of financial relief which was necessary before the Government could undertake these new burdens, but for reasons which were explained by the Hon'ble Sir John Strachey in his speech in the Legislative Council on the 27th December 1877, the Government decided that the yearly average cost of famines, in loss of revenue and actual expenditure, could not safely be estimated at less than £1,500,000.

17. It was necessary therefore (on account of famine alone) to improve the financial position by that amount. Besides this it was necessary to provide a margin on the annual estimates of at least £500,000, to meet those contingencies which cannot be foreseen but to which we must always be liable, and to assist the Government in providing the means of proceeding steadily with the administrative and fiscal improvements which from time to time become necessary.

Thus, the conclusion was arrived at, that when the late famine commenced, or we may say at the beginning of the current year 1877-78, the revenues were deficient to the amount of about £2,000,000 a year.

18. In considering how these additional resources could be supplied, the Government of India anxiously directed its attention in the first instance to the possibility of reducing expenditure. In regard to the civil expenditure, although there are still some branches of the Administration for which the charges ought undoubtedly to be diminished, the Government was satisfied that no very great reduction could be hoped for. In the seven years to which reference has been made the net civil expenditure was reduced by £1,500,000 a year. This fact justifies the Government of India in declaring that the administration of the finances has been conducted with care and economy in the past, and entitles it to claim confidence when it asserts its resolution to exercise similar care and economy in the future.

19. No reduction could be looked for in the charges for Productive Public Works, for, although the receipts from the Railways and Irrigation Works have rapidly increased and the financial results that have been obtained from these great undertakings are as a whole satisfactory and encouraging, the Government hopes to push on these useful works even more vigorously in the future than it has done in the past. Thus only can it discharge the responsibility which it has accepted, of sparing no efforts which it is possible to make for the purpose of protecting the country against the consequences of drought and famine. Past experience has proved that even from a merely financial point of view it is wise strenuously to persevere in this policy. The burden on the revenues on account of these great works goes on steadily diminishing. During the last twenty-five years more than £130,000,000 has been spent in India, either directly by the Government, or through the Guaranteed Companies, on Railways and Works of Irrigation. In 1876-77 the total net charge for interest on this account was about £1,000,000, or about sixteen shillings per cent. on the capital outlay, an insignificant price to pay for works of such incalculable usefulness. In 1877-78, under circumstances no doubt exceptional, this charge has virtually disappeared. That the policy which the Government has been pursuing in regard to the construction of productive works may, if it be wisely applied, be followed without financial risk, is further illustrated by the fact that the total charge for interest on debt of all sorts and Guaranteed Railway Capital, is in the present year less than the charge in 1870-71 by about £2,000,000.

20. Up to the year 1875-76, the efforts of the Government to reduce the Military charges had been as successful as those made to reduce the charges for the Civil Services. The net cost of the army in 1875-76 was less by £1,000,000 than it had been seven years before. Unfortunately its cost during the last two years was again increased by upwards of £1,000,000, chiefly on account of increase to the Home charges. It is satisfactory that the Estimates for the coming year 1878-79 show a reduction under this head of more than £600,000 compared with the Budget Estimate of the present year. The Government of India has been in communication with Her Majesty's Secretary of State on this important subject, and trusts that some arrangement may be found practicable which shall prevent further demands on account of the Home military charges, over which this Government has no power of control, being thrown on the Revenues of India.

21. The measures taken during the past year for increasing the powers and responsibilities of the Local Governments, the nature of which was described in the Financial Statement for 1877-78, will, it is believed, when they are complete, improve the financial position of the Government of India by an annual sum of nearly £400,000. No part of this improvement is due to fresh taxation. It is the result of the administrative changes and improvements to which the policy of decentralization has led. The original measures taken in 1870 by the Government of Lord Mayo had previously led to a saving of £330,000, and this policy, which has given increased efficiency to almost every branch of the Administration, has thus added to the Imperial Revenues a sum of about £700,000 a year, without the imposition of any fresh burdens on the people. These measures of decentralization have now been more or less completely carried out in Bengal, in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, in the Punjab, the Central Provinces, and in Bombay, and in all cases with the complete approval of the Local Governments. The only great province in regard to which no satisfactory arrangement has hitherto been found practicable is Madras.

22. After taking credit for the gain of £400,000 just referred to, there remained to be provided a sum of £1,100,000 to complete the amount of £1,500,000 declared necessary to enable the Revenues to meet the estimated charges on account of famine. It appeared to the Government that this sum could only be provided by fresh taxation.

23. It is not necessary to repeat here the reasons which led the Government of India to the conclusion that the new taxes necessary for providing an insurance against famine should fall partly on the trading and partly on the agricultural classes. Nor is it necessary to describe again in detail the measures of taxation which have recently been passed into law. It is sufficient to refer to those measures in general terms.

24. The new taxation imposed on the trading classes has taken the form of a License Tax on trades and dealings. The Acts passed for the various provinces differ in some of their details, but in all matters of importance they are similar. In those which apply to the provinces of Northern India, the maximum fee chargeable in any case is Rs. 500. The minimum fee is Re. 1. The tax will be imposed on no person whose net earnings are less than Rs. 100 a year, and no person will be called on to pay an amount exceeding 2 per cent. on his annual income. In Bombay the maximum fee has been fixed at Rs. 200. The License Tax will be levied throughout India. It is estimated to yield to the Imperial Government about £700,000 after meeting charges of collection, and allowing a margin to Local Governments.

25. The tax on the agricultural classes has been imposed in the provinces of Northern India and Bengal alone. It has taken in each province the form of an addition to the existing Local Rates on land. It is expected to yield about £500,000 a year.

26. Similar additional rates have not been imposed in Madras or Bombay. In order to carry out the long-declared policy of the Government in regard to the equalisation of the salt duties throughout India, an increase to the Salt Tax in those presidencies became unavoidable. Although, before any thought of imposing new taxation on account of famine had arisen, this increase had been virtually decided upon, and had therefore no connection with the new measures of famine taxation, the Government of India did not think that it would be right to impose additional direct taxation on the agricultural classes in Madras and Bombay at the same time that it was increasing the salt duties. No fresh taxation has therefore been imposed in those presidencies on the land.

27. The total amount which the new taxes on the trading and agricultural classes will yield is thus estimated at £1,200,000. The full amount, however, will not be collected in the coming year, because it will not be right to levy the additional rates on land in the North-Western Provinces, until the country has recovered from the serious loss which it suffered in the almost total failure of the last summer crops.

28. The proceeds of these taxes, together with the sum of £400,000 which will be gained by the extension of Provincial responsibility, make up a little more than the £1,500,000 which is annually required for the insurance of the country against famine. The manner in which the Government proposes actually to apply this sum was fully explained by the Hon'ble Sir John Strachey in his speech in the Legislative Council on the 9th February 1878.

• Appendix A.

This explanation will be found in an Appendix* to this Resolution. By following the course which is proposed, the Government of India will virtually reduce the Public Debt by £1,500,000 a year; and resources will be stored up in years of prosperity, by means of which, when famine actually occurs, it will be possible to discharge the heavy obligations which then fall upon the State. By investing in Productive Public Works from the resources thus specially created a sum of $1\frac{1}{2}$ millions yearly, instead of from borrowed money, the charge for interest which would otherwise arise will be saved, while an additional income will be created from the works, which will supply in the future a source from which to meet without increased strain on the finances a corresponding interest payment on any debt which may then be incurred to meet Famine charges.

29. When introducing the new measures of taxation, it was explained by Sir John Strachey that, in the opinion of the Government of India, it was necessary that a surplus should be shown on the Accounts of each year amounting at least to £2,000,000. Of this, £1,500,000 was for insurance against Famine; the remaining £500,000 was said to be required as the smallest sum which would enable the Government to meet contingencies, and to furnish, in combination with the natural growth of the Revenues, the means of carrying out necessary administrative and fiscal reforms.

30. To provide a portion of this surplus, new taxation was necessary. The new taxes were expected to improve the Imperial Revenues by £1,100,000 a year. The steps taken towards the equalisation of the Salt duties, to be further referred to hereafter, gave temporary relief to the extent of £300,000. The £600,000 required to make up the full amount of £2,000,000 would, it was expected, be provided partly by the new measures of decentralisation, which involved no fresh taxation, and partly by the normal increase of the General Revenues.

31. It is important to ascertain how far the estimates for the coming year, which are now published, support the anticipations made by the Government a few months ago.

32. To obtain a true conception of the present financial position, it is, first, necessary to eliminate certain disturbing causes. In this view, it must be remembered that a sum of £281,000 is shown among the receipts on account of the extinct Military Funds. This is a merely nominal credit, and it must be deducted in estimating the real amount of our Revenues. It must further be remembered that the Accounts of the past, of the present, and of the coming year are all much disturbed by the effects of the Famine. It is from this cause that in the coming year 1878-79, £671,000 is expected to be received on account of the arrears of the land-revenue of past years. Hence, if we look only to the normal facts of the Revenue, allowance must be made for these disturbing causes, and the estimated receipts for 1878-79 must be reduced by the aggregate of these two amounts, namely, £952,000.

33. If after making these allowances, no fiscal changes were now made; if all existing taxes were to remain unaltered; and no provision had to be made for the relief of famine for which £555,000 has actually been granted, the surplus of £2,156,000 as shown in the Estimates of the ensuing year would be reduced to £1,991,000. Hence after providing for the estimated Famine Expenditure of £555,000, and allowing £945,000 as expenditure for Famine Insurance, making together the 1½ millions required, there would still be left a margin of £484,000. Thus there appears to be a deficiency of only £16,000 to be provided, if the ultimate surplus of £500,000 is to be made good from the normal revenues of the year. As regards the Ways and Means of the coming year, the additional exceptional receipts of arrears of Land Revenue, amounting to £671,000, will far more than make good this small deficiency.

34. Thus the Government trusts that it will be able in the ensuing year to fulfil satisfactorily the engagements which it has undertaken and the pledges which it has given. It will be able to provide from its ordinary revenues a sum of £555,000 for the relief of famine, and to devote at least £1,000,000 towards Famine Insurance, thus the pledge that £1,500,000 shall be set aside from the ordinary Revenues for the relief and prevention of famine, will be fulfilled. It will indeed be more than fulfilled, for the actual pledge given was not that this amount should always be provided in the Estimates of the year, but that it should always be shown to have been applied when the actual accounts of the year were closed.

35. After thus assigning from the Revenues of the coming year £1,500,000 on account of famine, there will still be at the disposal of the Government an available surplus of £656,000 for meeting those contingencies, and carrying out those fiscal and other reforms to which reference has been made.

36. Although it is thus confidently expected that the new taxation will enable the Government to fulfil, in the coming year, its pledge to devote £1,500,000 to the relief and prevention of Famine, it is clear that the financial position is not such as to justify at the present time new measures which would involve considerable reductions in any great branch of the existing revenue. It is true that all those branches of revenues are prosperous, but there are several causes which render caution obligatory on the part of the Government.

37. The extreme pressure of the famine has passed away, but relief operations still continue in a large tract of Southern India, and much suffering still exists among the poorer classes in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh. Thus the prospects of the future are not free from anxiety. The state of political affairs in Europe cannot wisely be ignored. Further, although the position of the silver market seems far more hopeful than it was, it is impossible to contemplate without some anxiety an operation of such unexampled magnitude as the remittance from India to England in the ensuing year of £17,000,000.

38. With every desire to press on the accomplishment of the fiscal reforms which it has bound itself to undertake, or which have been prescribed for its adoption by Parliament and the Secretary of State, the Government of India feels that it cannot, with due regard to the condition of the finances, do very much at the present time. It would be in opposition to the pledges given by the Government, and to the instructions of the Secretary of State, to undertake any such measures of reform if they would involve fresh taxation, and this prohibition must be applied to the future as well as to the present. No risk therefore must now be incurred of doing that which might render it necessary hereafter to impose fresh burdens.

39. There are two great measures to which the Government is pledged: the first is the equalization of the salt duties, the abolition of the Inland Customs line, and, with it, of the inland duties on sugar; the second is the improvement of the Customs tariff and the removal of the import duties on cotton manufactures.

40. Towards the accomplishment of the first of these measures great steps have been taken during the present year. Throughout the Presidencies of Madras and Bombay, including Sindh, the duty on salt, whether foreign salt imported by sea or home manufactured salt, has been raised to Rs. 2-8 per maund. At the same time the mileage duty which was levied on salt brought by Railway from Bombay into the Central Provinces, has been abolished, so that the duty of Rs. 2-8 per maund is the rate for those Provinces also, since they derive their supply of salt from Bombay and Madras. The duties in Lower Bengal, both import and excise, have been reduced to Rs. 3-2 per maund, and the duty on salt imported across the Inland Customs Line for consumption in the Upper Provinces, as well as the excise duty on salt manufactured in those Provinces, has been reduced to Rs. 2-12 per maund. At the same time the price of Punjab mines salt, the property of Government, has been diminished by 4 annas per maund. More recently, that is on the 1st of this month, the price of Sambhar salt, purchased for importation into British Territory, has been reduced by 2 annas a maund, but a great part of this reduction has been counteracted by the simultaneous raising of the Railway freight on this salt, when brought to Agra, by $1\frac{1}{2}$ anna per maund. The freight had been kept abnormally low under an arrangement by which the Inland Customs Department made up to the Railway any deficiency from a fixed standard of profit. This arrangement, which was inconvenient and anomalous, has now ceased.

41. The object of these measures has been recently fully explained. That object is not to increase the burden of the salt taxes on the people of India or to derive therefrom a larger revenue, but to make as large a step as the finances will permit toward the equalisation of those duties, a condition of taxation desirable in itself and an essential preliminary to the abolition of that great opprobrium to British administration, the Inland Customs Line. The Government of India regrets, that on a general review of its position no further steps in this direction can at the present moment be taken, but it confidently hopes that the time is not distant when this great reform, the object of which is to give the people of India "the means of obtaining, with the least possible inconvenience, and at the cheapest rate consistent with financial necessities, a supply of salt only limited by the people's capacity for consumption, will be completely carried out."

42. After making due allowance for these changes and for the normal development of the salt-revenue, as well as other circumstances affecting it, the Budget Estimate of 1878-79 shews a net increase of £247,000 over the Regular Estimate of 1877-78.

43. In Sir John Strachey's Financial Statement made a year ago, he referred to the duties levied on sugar exported across the Inland Customs Line in the following terms:—

"These are one rupee per maund on refined sugar, and six annas per maund on unrefined sugar, or saccharine produce. Except where the line runs along the left bank of the Indus, exports across it are taken to Native States; but, when it passes the Indus, the sugar is nearly taken from one part of British territory to another. This sugar is all the produce of our own people in the North-Western Provinces, Oudh, and the Punjab: it is one of the most important agricultural staples of those provinces; and it is important not only to the agriculturists and manufacturers and consumers, but directly to the Government, which looks greatly to sugar cultivation for its irrigation revenue.

"While we are taxing heavily our own sugar grown on the east of the Customs Line, for the supply of the country beyond it, we admit into the same country the Mauritius sugar, which is imported largely to Bombay, taxed at a much lower rate. It is calculated that the Inland Customs duty is equivalent to 10 per cent. on the value; but the incidence of the duty varies considerably, particularly on refined sugar: on the cheaper kinds the duty is equivalent to more than 20 per cent. on its value: the sea import duty on Mauritius sugar is 5 per cent. ad valorem. I do not assert that there is, at present, any great competition between the sugar of the Upper Provinces of this Presidency and foreign sugar; but, so far as competition exists, the Inland Customs duty acts as a protective duty in favor of foreign and against our own sugar: to this extent, the duty must fall on the producer within the Customs Line. The competition will be more apparent and severe when the connection of the Rajputana State Railway with the Bombay and Baroda Line is completed.

"Little or no sugar is grown in Rajputana or Central India; and the increase of price caused by the Inland Customs Line must tend to diminish consumption, and so, still further, to injure the producer. It is impossible to estimate the injury to the people and the Government caused by placing artificial obstructions on the export of one of the great agricultural staples of the country. Such obstructions obviously affect not only the export but the import trade as well. The Government of India has repeatedly urged upon Native States the policy of abolishing their transit duties, but it is difficult to see with what consistency we can do this, so long as we retain our sugar duties. They yield about £165,000 a year: this is my only excuse for not proposing their instant abolition: they will, at any rate, disappear with the abolition of the Inland Customs Line."

44. The negotiations relating to salt, with the Native States of Rajputana and Central India, which have for their object the abolition of the Customs Line, are rapidly approaching successful completion. The maintenance of the sugar duties after the arrangements connected with salt in the Native States are put into effect, will not be consistent with the engagements made with those States, and after the Customs Line, along which they are levied, has been removed their retention will be impossible. The Government of India will therefore be compelled under any circumstances to relinquish these duties very shortly, and as no practical financial advantage would be obtained by postponing the measure for a few months, it has been decided that the duties shall be at once abolished. The country will thus be relieved of these sugar duties, which have been more than once characterized as "the most discreditable relic of the dark ages of taxation that exists in India."

45. It is estimated that these Inland sugar duties would have produced in the coming year £155,000. They appear under the head of "Customs" and their abolition has led to a corresponding reduction.

46. The second of the measures of fiscal reform before mentioned, the improvement of the Customs Tariff, next calls for notice.

47. Her Majesty's Secretary of State has called the attention of the Government of India to the Customs Tariff generally, and to the duties levied on cotton goods in particular, in several despatches received during the past year.

First, in a despatch, No. 81, dated the 7th June 1877,* His Lordship pointed out that there were numerous articles in the Tariff on which the duty levied was quite insignificant, and he requested that at a convenient time the propriety of excluding from the Tariff items that will not be productive of revenue might be considered.

Next, a despatch, No. 124, dated the 23rd August 1877,† forwarded a copy of a memorial from the Council of the East India Association, and a reply thereto by Mr. Raynsford Jackson on behalf of the Associated Committees of Employers and Workmen in the cotton manufacturing districts, respecting the abolition of the duties on the importation of cotton goods and yarns into India. Lord Salisbury observed with reference to these papers:—

"Your Excellency is well aware of the great importance attached by Her Majesty's Government to the gradual reduction of these duties at the earliest period that is not inconsistent with the financial requirements of your administration."

Finally, the Secretary of State transmitted with his despatch No. 136, dated the 30th August 1877,‡ a Resolution which was adopted by the House of Commons on the 11th July 1877 without a division in the following terms:—

"That, in the opinion of this House, the duties now levied upon cotton manufactures imported into India, being protective in their nature, are contrary to sound commercial policy, and ought to be repealed without delay so soon as the financial condition of India will permit."

His Lordship expressed his concurrence with the views of this Government, as reported in the speeches of His Excellency the Viceroy and of Sir John Strachey in the Proceedings of the Legislative Council on the occasion of the Budget Statement in March last.

The despatch concluded in the following words:—

"I can only, in conclusion, express my hope that the financial prospects of your Government in the approaching year may not preclude the possibility of commencing the reform of this branch of the Indian Tariff, but if, as now seems too probable, it shall unfortunately be such as to render you unable to incur the risk of any material loss of revenue from remission of duties, there are still two measures in connexion with this reform which should not, in my opinion, be delayed beyond the present year. I mean the repeal of the duty of 5 per cent. on foreign raw cotton imported into India, and the exemption from import duty of the lower qualities of cotton manufactures, upon which the present tax is incontestibly protective, not only in principle but in fact, and the value of which for revenue purposes is wholly insignificant."

48. The questions thus brought before the Government of India by Her Majesty's Secretary of State have received careful consideration. It is evident that, in the present state of the finances of India, any large measure of reduction of the Customs duties would be not only impossible, but would not be in accordance with the views of the House of Commons or of Her Majesty's Secretary of State. The Government of India is, however, of opinion that there is no reason for delaying compliance with the instructions of the Secretary of State, that something should be done towards removing from the Tariff the coarser qualities of cotton goods which are subject to competition from the Indian mills and looms and some other articles which are productive of but a small amount of revenue.

49. Although as just stated it is not at present possible to sacrifice any important part of our existing revenue, for the purposes of reforming the commercial taxation of India, the Government deems it right to place on record the principles on which its action is at the present time guided, and by which it desires to be guided in the future.

50. It is not necessary now to discuss the advantages to a country of free trade and the disadvantages of protective duties. It is sufficient to say that these have been admitted for many years by the Statesmen who, of whatever party, have guided the policy of the United Kingdom. In pursuance of the principles thus accepted, the Tariff of the United Kingdom, which, less than thirty years ago, subjected to duty more than one thousand different articles, has been brought down by various stages to some half dozen, of which the only important ones are wine and spirits, tea and tobacco. At the same time all export duties have been abolished.

51. The principles on which the Customs legislation of the United Kingdom has been based are now admitted axioms by all who recognise the theoretic advantages of free trade. They must be regarded as a part of the national policy which Great Britain has finally adopted, and which the Secretary of State for India, with the deliberate approval of the House of Commons, has required the Government of India in this country to carry out.

These principles are, as regards imports;—

(1) that no duty should exist which affords protection to native industry, and, as a corollary, that no duty should be applied to any article which can be produced at home, without an equivalent duty of excise on the home production, also, that no duty should be levied except for purely fiscal purposes;

(2) that, as far as possible, the raw materials of industry and articles contributing to production should be exempt from customs taxation;

(3) that duties should be applied only to articles which yield a revenue of sufficient importance to justify the interference with trade involved by the machinery of collection.

As regards exports;—that duties should be levied on those commodities only in which the exporting country has practically a monopoly of production.

52. These principles are of general application, but in the case of India, they possess a peculiar significance. India is a country of unbounded material resources, but her people are a poor people. Its characteristics are great power of production, but almost total absence of accumulated capital. On this account alone the prosperity of the country essentially depends on its being able to secure a large and favourable outlet for its surplus produce. But there is a special feature in the economic conditions of India which renders this a matter of yet more pressing, and even of vital importance,—this is the fact that her connection with England and the financial results of that connection, compel her to send to Europe every year about 20 millions sterling worth of her products without receiving in return any direct commercial equivalent. It is this excess of exports over imports which, in the language of the economists, is described as tribute. It is, really, the return for the foreign capital, in its broadest sense, which is invested in India, including under capital not only money, but all advantages which have to be paid for, such as the intelligence, strength, and energy, on which good administration and commercial prosperity depend. From these causes the trade of India is in an abnormal position, preventing her receiving, in the shape of imported merchandise and treasure, the full commercial benefit which otherwise would spring from her vast material resources.

53. The comparatively undeveloped condition of the trade of India may be illustrated by the following figures. The value of the imports and exports taken together per head of the population is in the United Kingdom about £20. In British India it is about 10 shillings. The Custom revenue on the few articles now retained in the Import Tariff of the United Kingdom is about 12 shillings per head, while that of India, on all the articles of its lengthy Tariff, is about 3 pence, showing that small as is the proportion of the foreign trade of India to that of England, the proportion of customs revenue derived from it is smaller still.

54. Here then is a country which, both from its poverty, the primitive and monotonous condition of its industrial life, and the peculiar character of its political condition, seems to require from its Government, before all things, the most economical treatment of its resources, and, therefore, the greatest possible freedom in its foreign exchanges.

Under these circumstances, what are the conditions of production and consumption in India? How far is it possible to construct a Tariff of import and export duties, which will comply with the accepted canons of taxation? And how far does the existing Tariff conform to those canons?

55. In answering these questions, it will be found that India, by the extent and favourable conditions of its territory, is capable of producing almost every article required for the use of man. If, therefore, the Import Customs Tariff be maintained, it will involve the evils of protection, unless an excise duty to counter-vail the customs duty be imposed upon almost every item which the tariff now includes. Now, as excise duties are generally costly, vexatious, and inconvenient forms of taxation, and would be in most cases impracticable in India, this of itself is a reason against the permanent retention of the existing Customs Tariff, and one which interposes a very serious difficulty in the way of constructing one that shall be free from objection. Since almost every article that is now on the Tariff, or that could be named, is either produced or is capable of being produced in India, it follows that import duties must in every case be actually or potentially protective, while, with the exception of liquors and salt, none of them are subject to an excise.

Again, the people of India are too poor to consume many luxuries. The import trade merely consists of what may be considered either the materials of industry or the necessities of life. It will accordingly be found that nearly all the heads of customs revenue which are of any importance are derived from one or other of these descriptions of commodities, and that the revenue derived from other articles is so insignificant as neither to justify the machinery of collection nor the interference with the trade.

56. The total amount of import duties was, in 1876-77, £4,170,917, or, deducting erroneous collections, refunds, and drawbacks on re-exportation, £4,098,296; of this latter sum there was realised—

From Salt	2,191,010
From Liquors	331,761
Total	2,522,771

On these articles there is an internal excise duty countervailing the customs duty.

Deducting the duty on these two articles, there remains £1,275,525. Deducting again from this the revenue realised from cotton goods, or £811,340, there remains £464,185, which is thus distributed:—

Copper	65,024	} .. 112,740
Iron	17,096
Other metals	30,020
Silk, raw and manufactured		43,727
Woollen manufactures		38,068
Provisions		32,901
Apparel		25,658
Hardware and cutlery		21,049
Spices		18,724
Sugar		13,886
Glass		13,241
Railway materials		11,335
Articles, each group of which gave less than £10,000		132,853
Total		464,185

Many of the numerous articles in the last class yield each an insignificant revenue, and nearly the whole are, or can be, produced in India. The duties on them are thus indefensible in principle, and cannot consistently be maintained longer than financial exigencies require their retention.

57. To revert to the cotton duties, regarding which the Resolution of the House of Commons has declared that, being contrary to sound commercial principles, they ought to be abolished, the Government of India has been at some pains to ascertain how such of them as are now actually protective can be defined. The real test is the quality or fineness of the yarn of which the goods consist. At present the Indian manufacture is confined to the coarser yarns and goods made of such yarns, and it is evident that the 5 per cent. import duty does protect such yarns and goods against competition from without. It is difficult to determine exactly how far it is effective. The coarser Indian yarns and piece-goods may, by their comparative cheapness, displace, as indeed it is asserted that they have displaced, finer imported goods in the Indian market. So far as this happens, the duties are destructive of the Customs revenue. However this may be, it is generally admitted, and the Customs returns, so far as they supply information, show, that there are certain descriptions of goods regarding which it can safely be asserted that they are of the kinds with which the Indian manufactures can compete successfully. These are unbleached T cloths under 18 reed, jeans, domestics, sheetings, and drills. The duty paid by these descriptions of piece-goods in 1876-77 was only £22,227, of which probably some portion was given back in the shape of drawbacks and refunds, as there is a considerable re-export of grey piece-goods from India. The total value of such goods re-exported in 1876-77 was £302,234. They are taken chiefly to Persia, Arabia, and the east coast of Africa. The total refunds and drawbacks in 1867-68 amounted to £12,563. It is not known how much of this was on account of the coarser goods specified above.

58. The Government of India has determined to commence by exempting these descriptions with the further condition that the goods so exempted shall not contain finer yarn than what is known as 30s, that is, yarn of which 30 hanks of 840 yards each weigh one pound. The loss of duty, calculated on the figures of 1876-77, cannot exceed £22,227, and, for the reasons above stated, will probably be less. For yarns themselves, the limit selected for exemption is for mule twist 32s and for water twist 20s. The former yielded in 1876-77 £3,400, and the latter £39, minus any refunds and drawbacks that may have been granted. The duty on long-stapled raw cotton yielded £15, and it is quite unnecessary to maintain this duty. The maximum remission of duty proposed under these heads, calculated on the figures of 1876-77, amounts to £25,681.

59. It has been urged in some quarters that instead of taking the duties off imported cotton goods or so long as they are retained, it would be right to excise the Indian manufactures. Regarding this proposal, it may be said, first, that it would be impossible to excise the product of all the hand-looms and spinning apparatus in India, and that to confine the excise duty to the large mills and looms worked by European machinery would be not only an unjust and incomplete measure, but would place an obstruction on a most legitimate and desirable development of the industry of India; secondly, that it would be impossible to tax the manufactures produced in India in Native States outside of British territory without maintaining the present Inland Customs lines, which the Government of India are strenuously endeavouring to abolish, and without establishing many more similar lines; and thirdly, that the imposition of an excise duty is inconsistent with the declared future policy of the Government of India, and of Her Majesty's Government, namely, eventually to abolish all import duties on cotton manufactures. The Government of India has, therefore, no hesitation in rejecting the proposal in question. Orders giving effect to the decisions will be found in the Notification issued with this Resolution.

60. Another class of articles is also clearly marked out for exemption. These are materials for railways. Under any circumstances, it must be a short-sighted fiscal policy to add artificially to the cost of railways, on which the development of the wealth of India is so greatly dependent; but when it is considered that, under the guarantee system, the Government of India has to pay five per cent. on the customs duties which it imposes on railway plant not imported by itself, the inexpediency and inconsistency of retaining these duties is beyond question. Locomotives and other machinery for railways, as well as wooden sleepers, have already been freed from duty. On the rest £11,335 net duty was realised in 1876-77, and the Government of India has determined to free this head of the Tariff from duty.

61. It has also decided to relieve the Tariff of 26 other major heads, comprising a larger number of sub-heads and innumerable articles, the details of which will be found in the Notification published with this Resolution. The whole of these Tariff heads produced in 1876-77 £39,610. The most important is the head "Fruits and Vegetables," being chiefly cocoanuts, dates, and the like—articles of food of the poorer classes. These yielded a revenue of £6,126.

62. With respect to the Export Tariff, the only duties now remaining are those on rice, indigo, and shell and button lac. Although India cannot be said to possess a complete monopoly of these articles, still this condition is nearly enough complied with to justify their present retention on the Tariff. As soon as the finances will permit of it, the question of the retention of these duties may be reconsidered. They yielded in 1876-77 the following amounts:—

Rice	529,739
Indigo	41,132
Lac of all sorts	33,952

63. There will now remain out of the 62 tariff numbers of Schedule A of the Indian Tariff Act, 1875, only 35 numbers, and this important reduction including the remissions of duties on the cotton goods and minor articles is effected with a loss of about £77,000.

64. Thus, these measures, designed to be the first steps towards giving effect to the policy that has been enjoined on the Government of India by Parliament and the Secretary of State, strictly comply with the conditions under which that policy was to be carried out. The estimate of the Customs revenue of 1878-79 is, after allowing for all the proposed remissions, taken at £2,480,000 or £150,000 less than the regular estimate of 1877-78. This decrease is less than what will be given up by the relief of sugar from Inland Customs duty, so that the sea customs duty remitted has no part in this decrease. The amount of sea customs duties in the coming year is smaller than in the earlier years of the series given below, by reason of the reductions made in the tariff in the year 1875 by the Government of Lord Northbrook:—

1873-74 " 	2,628,000
1874-75 " 	2,678,000
1875-76 " 	2,723,000
1876-77 " 	2,483,000
1877-78, Regular Estimate	2,630,000
1878-79, Budget " 	2,480,000

The Government of India, in pursuing for the future the policy that has guided it in making these remissions, will always give full consideration to the general financial position of the country and will recognise the obligation laid upon it not to attempt to hasten this important fiscal reform by additional taxation. It confidently expects that the normal growth of the revenues will place at its disposal the necessary means.

65. After the explanation that has now been given of the actual financial measures taken by the Government in the past year, and those now to be adopted, it is further necessary to refer to the plans by which the Governor General in Council hopes to give effect to the policy of enlarging the responsibilities of the Local Governments, and through them to accomplish the task that devolves upon it, of providing as far as practicable for the protection of the country from the effects of Famine.

66. The keystone of the whole financial policy of the present Government is the enforcement to the utmost of the responsibility of every great Province of the Empire for meeting its own local wants. It has given to the Local Governments largely increased powers; it declares that they, alone, are competent to deal wisely with the details of administration; that they have advantages which the Government of India cannot possess, of seeing what their own provinces require; and that it is only by acting on these principles that the Supreme Government can obtain either good Provincial administration, or exercise that intelligent power of control which is essential to the prosperity of the Empire. A sound financial system and financial safety can only be secured by efficient administration in every great department of the State. It is by the application of these principles that the Government of India hopes to discharge the greatest of the responsibilities which now rests upon it—that of protecting the people against the terrible calamity of periodical famines.

67. During the year 1877-78 the scheme of making Provincial Governments responsible for provincial finances has been much developed, and the Government of India has received interesting reports upon the working of the scheme. Every Local Government that has expressed any opinion has reported favourably upon the result of the provincialization arrangements begun by the late Lord Mayo in 1870. It happens that during the past year nearly all of the larger provinces, except Bengal, have been more or less afflicted by drought. The first financial effect of drought and of famine relief outlay is to reduce the provincial balances and to cause large provincial expenditure. Under the pressure of famine exigencies, therefore, the provincial finance system has been more or less strained in almost every province except Bengal. From that province most favourable accounts of the results of the system have been received. The Local Government of Bengal is now financially responsible for all civil expenditure of every kind within Bengal, except only the Opium Department operations; it has full authority over, and the benefit of, all branches of the public revenue except only land revenue, salt and opium; and it provides locally for any loss that may occur on Productive Public Works such as canals and railways. The Guaranteed Railways in Bengal earn considerably more than the full guaranteed interest. And so the Imperial Treasury is relieved from all burdens on account of future increases in the cost of the civil administration, or the material improvement of Bengal, while it reserves to itself the right to a share in future increments of the provincial revenues entrusted to the Local Government. From the imperial point of view the scheme of financial provincialization is thus eminently advantageous.

68. The Hon'ble the Lieutenant-Governor's report of December last shows that from the Local Government's point of view also the scheme is not less beneficial. That report, of which a copy will be found in Appendix E to this Statement, shows that the revenues made over to Bengal increased 17 per cent. during the first half of the year 1877-78, and that, to use the Lieutenant-Governor's words, "in the majority of headings the expenditure, so far from showing any tendency to grow, is actually somewhat less than during the corresponding period of last year." Some of the increases of revenue are abnormal, and may not recur. But the general result appears to be fairly summed up in the concluding paragraph of the Lieutenant-Governor's report, which runs as follows:—

"The Lieutenant-Governor has found that the general effect of the extension of the decentralization system in respect to the facilities which it has given to provincial administration has been even more satisfactory than he anticipated. In making the Local Government responsible for expenditure, and giving them a direct interest in the development of various branches of the revenue, it has secured a careful scrutiny over the expenditure of all departments, and a deep interest in all improveable heads of revenue, which has extended to all grades of the services. District officers understand that the Provincial Government can sanction no new schemes and few new works unless it has a constantly improving revenue, and they have shewn an earnest desire to assist the Government by the adoption of every measure which their local experience suggests as likely to have a beneficial effect upon the revenues. At the same time the Local Government has, since the inauguration of the system of provincial finance in 1870-71, been in a position to carry out many works and many measures of improvement on its own responsibility, which would, under the old system, have possibly been delayed for an indefinite period. All friction with the Imperial Government has been obviated, and much useless and unsatisfactory correspondence avoided."

69. Though the failure of the autumn crop has caused a severe strain on the provincial finances of the North-Western Provinces, where the localization of the financial responsibility has been introduced as completely as in Bengal, still it is worthy of note that, even in a year of drought and partial famine, the Imperial Treasury has in those provinces benefitted greatly from the provincialization system. The Local Government has already spent nine lakhs of rupees on relief works and in charitable relief, and it expects to spend five lakhs more before the rainy season begins. Under the old system this money would have come out of the Imperial Treasury, but the whole sum has this year been found by the Provincial Government; it has come from the provincial balances and from savings made in previous years. Not only has the Imperial Treasury been benefitted, but the Local Government and its officers have had the strongest possible interest in spending their money with careful economy and on permanently useful works; and it is certain that the North-Western Provinces' relief expenditure of 1877-78 will bequeath to the country a considerable legacy of useful canals, railway works and roads.

70. Although there is hardly any branch of the public administration, improvement in which will not help the Government to fulfil the great task which it has undertaken, it is obvious that the principal means by which the end in view will be attained is the construction of works for increasing the productiveness of the country, and improving its communications. Of all things, therefore, the most essential at the present time is this, that the best and most economical arrangements possible should be made with the least practicable delay, yet with no unwise precipitance, in covering the country with that net-work of railways, and with those works of irrigation, which the country requires.

71. The development that has been recently given to the financial responsibilities of the Local Governments, and the transfer to some of them of the entire charge arising from the larger reproductive public works constructed within their territories, having been approved by Her Majesty's Government, and otherwise being found by experience to be conducive to improved administration and public economy, the Government of India has adopted the conclusion that it should be made generally applicable as soon as circumstances permit, and the needful preliminary arrangements have been completed with the several Local Governments and Administrations.

72. This resolution renders it necessary to review the rules under which funds are supplied for the prosecution of such works, the sanction of expenditure takes place, and the general system of management, financial and administrative, is conducted; and the urgency for this is the greater now that the Government of India has declared its intention of applying the funds at its disposal, for providing protection against famine, to works to be carried out through the agency of the Local Governments.

73. Her Majesty's Government have also recently directed that certain modifications should be made in the method of recording the financial results of all such works, with a view to presenting them to Parliament in a form likely to be more readily understood, and the present time may conveniently be taken for consolidating and revising the rules that have hitherto been in force in relation to this class of works.

74. The policy which has hitherto guided the Government of India in its action has been based on the assumption, which experience has shown to be a sound one, that the gradual improvement of the income derived from the larger reproductive works, including under this head the guaranteed railways, would admit of a certain yearly additional expenditure of borrowed money for extending such undertakings without bringing on the revenues any consequent larger net charge, when the increased income had been set off against the increased interest on the borrowed capital. It was on this principle that Lord Lawrence in 1869, in his minute on railway extension, advocated the gradual but systematic construction of railways, and on it the Government has since been acting with most satisfactory results. By regulating its operations within these prudent limits, the Government has been able to apply a sum of not less than 25½ millions to reproductive works during the last eight years, without thereby adding to the total charge of interest on account of the public debt, including under that name the guaranteed railway capital.

75. It is the intention of the Governor General in Council to follow the same general course in the future, subject to such modifications of detail as will be required by the somewhat changed system that will henceforth be adopted on making use of the agency of the Local Governments in carrying out the works. Heretofore the aggregate interest charge on the capital invested in the works had to be met from the general revenues, under the condition that the net burden should not exceed a certain sum which experience had shown could be borne without inconvenience; so in future, a similar liability will be held to attach to the provincial outlay of capital applied to these objects, otherwise than from the revenues of year. The provincial revenues will be made to bear the net charge for all interest on such capital, after deducting the net receipts from the works; and the net burden of interest thus thrown on the provincial resources year by year will not be allowed to exceed the sum which in each case experience shows that they can bear without inconvenience or undue interference with other administrative demands.

76. It will manifestly be a necessary condition of success in carrying out such a policy that the works undertaken shall in fact produce the growing income from which to meet the gradual increase of interest charge, and it therefore becomes essential to examine very strictly the character of all projects brought forward for execution, so that borrowed capital shall not, under any circumstances, be supplied for any work of which it cannot reasonably be anticipated that it will in a definite period of time produce a net income at least as great as the interest on the capital outlay upon it.

77. Further, the same limitation that it is thus necessary to apply to the grant of borrowed money to these works, must also be applied to the grant of all funds the expenditure of which does not appear as a direct charge against the revenues of the year, under which will be included the new resources lately specially created to provide a surplus from which to meet charges on account of the relief or prevention of famine.

78. The sum that is likely to be available for capital outlay on works of this class from the ordinary revenues would, under any circumstances, be small, and the inconvenience of distinguishing in the accounts between outlay from ordinary revenue, and that met from other sources, would be great. The justification for granting, for productive works, funds from the surplus revenues which might otherwise be applied to the extinction of debt, is, that so far as it prevents an increase of debt, it will virtually be equivalent to a corresponding discharge of debt; a condition however that cannot be fulfilled unless the works are properly remunerative. In all cases then the interest on the whole capital, from whatever sources it is obtained, must be secured generally by the provincial revenues, and specially in each case by the ascertained profitable character of the work, so far as a careful examination can serve to test it.

79. It will be seen that the general policy thus explained necessarily starts with the acceptance, for a limited period, of a dead weight of interest charge during the time when the income of the works is not fully developed. This charge may properly be met from the provincial revenues at the disposal of the Local Governments for carrying out works of internal improvement; and Her Majesty's Government has recognized the propriety of thus applying the local resources, subject to the general obligation that rests on Local Governments to see that the essential wants of the provinces under their administration are provided for in the manner that shall on the whole be most conducive to their well-being.

80. The reasons that support this view will likewise justify the Government of India in accepting, in proof of the financial sufficiency of the estimated income of any proposed work, during what may be termed the unremunerative period of its operation, a calculation which should include any well established saving of outlay that would follow upon the execution of the work, such as the reduction of the cost of maintenance of a road which would be diminished in consequence of the opening of a line of railway.

81. So also in the case of any work undertaken avowedly with the intention of its being wholly or in part paid for by any special rate or cess imposed, outside of all general rates or taxes, on those likely to benefit by the work, the proceeds of any such special rate would be properly included with any ordinary receipts due to specific payments for the actual use of the work as income in the estimate of financial return.

82. In these cases, and possibly in others, special considerations will present themselves, on which the Government of India will have to form a judgment as they arise, but the general principles that have now been laid down will indicate the spirit in which any such proposals will hereafter be dealt with.

83. Within the limits thus marked out, the Government of India will endeavour to meet the reasonable requirements of the Local Governments for funds, in addition to those available for expenditure from the ordinary revenues, to carry out works of material improvement, especially such as will have for their more immediate effect the protection of the country against the effects of famine, whether by supplying improved means of communication, or of irrigation, or otherwise. The power of the Government of India to do this, however, will be necessarily restricted by the amount that it can spare from the surplus revenues, or raise by loan without unduly forcing the money market, or coming under inconvenient liabilities. Neither can it consistently with the instructions of Her Majesty's Government enlarge the borrowed grants beyond the sums that can be raised in India.

84. It will be the wish of the Governor General in Council to comply as far as possible with the wishes of the Local Governments in carrying out the policy thus explained, subject of course to any instructions of a general or special character that may be given by the Secretary of State, or that may be found otherwise necessary to secure financial regularity or administrative convenience.

85. Under orders of the Secretary of State, works of the class now under consideration will henceforth be designated as Productive Public Works, and the expressions Extraordinary Works and Grants will cease to be employed. The whole of the rules now in force as to the preparation of designs and estimates, and the sanction of works hitherto called Extraordinary, and as to the grants of funds to carry out such works and the manner of rendering the accounts, will however continue to be applicable to all Productive Public Works already constructed or hereafter undertaken.

86. As a rule, all Productive Works, which will for the most part consist of Works of Irrigation or Navigation and Railways (excluding however the Guaranteed Railways, which will continue to be managed as heretofore), within the territories of the several Local Governments and Administrations, will be carried out under their direct orders and financial management, subject only to a general control by the Government of India, and in the manner described in the detailed rules that will be issued hereafter. The earliest possible effect will be given to this arrangement.

“ For the attainment of this object, the material appliances we intend to promote, by means of additional revenue, are cheap railroads and extended irrigation works. We are conscious of the reproach we should justly incur if, after such a declaration as I have now made, the prosecution of these necessary works were commenced, suspended, or relinquished, according to the increased or relaxed pressure of annual circumstance, or the intermittent activity of spasmodic effort. We, therefore, propose to entrust, in the first instance, to the Local Governments the duty of framing a sufficient and carefully considered scheme of local railroad and irrigation works. We are prepared to provide them with the means whereby they may from year to year work systematically forwards and upwards to the completion of such a scheme. The funds locally raised for this purpose will be locally applied. But Provincial Governments will have to meet the cost of provincial famines out of provincial funds to the fullest extent those funds can bear. They will find that thriftless expenditure in one year may involve the risk of diminished allotments in subsequent years; and I cannot doubt that the unavoidable recognition of this fact will make them wisely eager to spend the requisite proportion of their annual income upon well-planned and carefully estimated railway and irrigation works which will be their best insurance against the losses of famine, and the postponement of all administrative progress which famine generally entails. It will be the special duty of the Public Works Department of this Government to keep those objects constantly in view of the Local Governments, and to assist them, no less constantly, in their endeavours to give a rational preference to really useful and remunerative works, over those more captivating, but less compensating, subjects of expenditure which, in all comparatively small communities, so powerfully appeal to provincial pride, professional proclivities, or popular pleasure."

88. In amplification of these views, His Excellency has subsequently recorded a Minute, in which are laid down the principles that will henceforth guide the Financial and Public Works Departments in dealing with projects for Public Works designed to improve the internal communications of the country or to increase the means of irrigation, by which works protection from the consequences of famine can best be secured. The Minute of His Excellency is appended to this Resolution (Appendix F).

ORDERED, that this Resolution, with the annexed Statement and Appendices A to G, be published in a Gazette of India Extraordinary, and that copy thereof be forwarded to Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India; and also for information and guidance to each Department of the Government of India;

to each Local Government and Administration;

to the Comptroller General; and to each Accountant General and Deputy Accountant General in independent charge.

By order of His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General in Council,

1. Statement in explanation of the Estimates with eight Abstracts of the Estimates.

STATEMENT IN EXPLANATION OF THE ACCOUNTS OF BRITISH
INDIA FOR THE YEAR 1876-77, THE LATEST ESTI-
MATES FOR THE YEAR 1877-78, AND THE FIRST
ESTIMATES FOR THE YEAR 1878-79.

THE Accounts of the Public Revenue and Expenditure and Receipts Preliminary and Disbursements of British India, in 1876-77, are herewith presented, together with the Regular Estimates based upon the latest information in the possession of the Government, of the Revenue and Expenditure and Receipts and Disbursements of the current year 1877-78, and the Budget Estimates of the Revenue and Expenditure and Receipts and Disbursements of 1878-79.

FORMS OF THE ACCOUNTS AND ESTIMATES.

For reasons given by the Hon'ble Sir John Strachey in the Financial Statement dated 15th March 1877, the Abstracts then published were compiled in rupees. In accordance with instructions received from Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, some important changes have been introduced into the forms now adopted, and other modifications have been made which call for explanation.

The system of exhibiting the amounts in conventional pounds sterling of ten Rupees has been reverted to and, except where the context, or some specific assertion indicates the contrary, the same conventional notation is employed throughout this Statement and its Appendix.

Two new adjusting Heads of Account, Balances of the Local Governments decreased and Balances of the Local Governments increased, were introduced last year, in order to provide for the consolidation of the Accounts of the Provincial Governments with those of the Imperial Government without disturbance of the independence of the Provincial Finances. The revenues actually collected, and the expenditure actually incurred, are recorded in the Public Accounts, just as they would be recorded if there were no internal or domestic contracts between the Supreme Government and the Local Governments; but, if the revenue of a Local Government exceeds its expenditure, the excess is paid to it from the Imperial Treasury; if, on the contrary, its expenditure exceeds its revenue, the Local Government must make good the deficiency to the Imperial Treasury. By the particular terminology originally used for the new adjusting Heads, it was intended to emphasise and stereotype the fundamental rule that the Local Governments shall so administer their affairs as never to exhaust the balances at their credit with the Imperial Government. Now, however, it is thought better to adopt the fuller titles Adjusting receipts from Provincial Governments (Provincial Deficits) and Adjusting payments to Provincial Governments (Provincial Surpluses).

UNIFICATION OF THE ACCOUNTS BY INCORPORATION SEPARATE LOCAL TRANSACTIONS
AFFECTING WHOLE PROVINCES.

Besides the resources provided from the General or Imperial Revenues, the Local Governments have, more or less absolutely at their disposal for provincial uses, considerable sums of money provided otherwise—as, for example, the revenues from Ferries, Tolls, Cattle Pounds, the Nuddea and Calcutta Canals, Local Rates and Cesses, and, in the Central Provinces, the Pandhary tax inherited from the Mahratta Government. When the system of Provincial Service contracts was initiated in 1871-72, it was thought that it would be convenient to include this separate Revenue and Expenditure in the Provincial Accounts and Estimates; but, as this amalgamation was found to obscure comparisons between the new and the old systems, it was postponed. The existence of the two Accounts side by side has, however, produced difficulty and confusion, for it has never been found possible to separate them perfectly; and, meanwhile, an important part of the public Revenue and Expenditure has been excluded from the General Accounts of the Empire. The Provincial Service system has now passed from the experimental stage, and, owing to its successive developments and to the progress of other events, it would now be as difficult as it would be useless to institute detailed comparisons between it and the system which it has superseded. Altogether, the Government of India consider that the best solution of present difficulties will be to adopt now the policy of the complete unification of the Public Accounts: there seems in short no sufficient reason why the Revenue and Expenditure of the country, and the transactions of the Local Governments, should be divided into two categories differing from each other in no essential characteristics. The Government of India has, therefore, determined that, from the beginning of 1878-79, the separate Revenue and Expenditure of the Provincial Governments shall be incorporated in the General Estimates and Accounts of the Revenue and Expenditure of the country, which will, thenceforth, show the Whole Public Revenue and Expenditure of British India. It must be clearly understood that the Government of India does not intend, by thus incorporating these transactions in the General Accounts, to prescribe, or authorise, any change of practice in respect to them; and, in particular, that, to whatever extent the application of any of these funds is governed by law, such law will continue to be exactly as binding as at present.

CHANGE IN APPROPRIATION OF THE FUNDS.

MAINTAINING LOCAL FUNDS.

The receipts and disbursements of those Local Funds which are appropriated to specially defined purposes, or are quasi-private property, and are not, at any stage, under the direct control of the Local Governments, and do not affect whole Provinces, will still be excluded from the General Estimates and Accounts, and shown in subsidiary Statements; but, excepting the Port Funds, their amount will be unimportant.

PROVINCIAL
HEADS.

HEADS OF
PROVINCIAL RATES.

One effect of this change will be the disappearance of the Head of Provincial Contributions, which was required only for the adjustment of transactions between the two separate purses of the Local Governments. On the other hand, two new Heads of Provincial Rates must be opened, one on each side of the Account, to show, on the Revenue side, the whole of the Provincial Rates now incorporated and, on the Expenditure side, the cost of their collection. The rest of the expenditure of the Local Governments, whether met from the Provincial Rates, or from assignments of the general or Imperial Revenues, will be distributed under the existing Heads of Account.

GUARANTEED
COMPANIES TO BE NET GROSS.

Hitherto the guaranteed interest paid to Railway and other Companies has been shown net, after deduction of the net traffic receipts: henceforth, the whole Net Traffic Receipts received from the Companies, including all the gain by exchange whether upon capital or revenue account, will be shown, in one line, as revenue, and the gross payments of interest and surplus profits to the Companies, together with the cost of land and of Government supervision, will appear, in another line, as expenditure.

WORKING EXPENSES.

A new Head has been introduced to show separately the working expenses and maintenance charges of Irrigation Works, which charges have hitherto been incorporated under Public Works Ordinary. The growing importance of these works demands this separation. From this Head and, henceforth, from the Head of State Railway Expenditure will be excluded all capital expenditure: the object being to afford the means of a comparison between the Revenue and the Working Expenses of these Works. Such capital expenditure as may not, under Rule, be transferred to the Head Productive Public Works will be recorded under Public Works Ordinary. Preliminary.

Under instructions from the Secretary of State, the Heading Productive Public Works has been substituted for Public Works Extraordinary. The change is significant of a more rigid adherence to the sound policy of excluding nothing from the Total Expenditure upon a comparison of which with the Revenue the surplus or deficit of each year is ascertained, excepting expenditure which may confidently be expected to produce a direct net return at least equal to interest upon it at the current rate. NEW HEADING PRODUCTIVE PUBLIC WORKS.

A fresh Abstract Statement No. II is appended in the form in which the Secretary of State has resolved, for the future, to present the Accounts of the Revenue and Expenditure of British India to Parliament. The design of this change of form is that the transactions relating to the investment of capital by the State in works of material improvement, and the financial consequences of such investments, may, as far as possible, be distinguished, upon the face of the balance-sheet of the country, from the rest of the transactions of the State. NEW PARLIAMENTARY FORM OF ABSTRACT.

The chief differences between the Abstracts Nos. I and II will be that, in Abstract No. II, (1) the interest on that part of the public debt which may be regarded as having been incurred for the construction of Productive Public Works and, as soon as the necessary enquiries are completed, that portion of the Land-Revenue which is believed to be due to the Irrigation Works of which the cost is included in the Capital Expenditure thus distinguished, will be shown separately; and (2) the Account will be broken up into two subdivisions, the first intended to show the results of all the transactions that are not connected with State investments in Productive Public Works, and the second those that are dependent on such investments. The Total Revenue and Expenditure and the Surplus or Deficit will be the same in both Abstracts; but the division, in the new Abstract, of the Revenue and Expenditure into two categories will, when it is completely effected, enable a judgment to be formed of the general financial results of the State investments in Public Works, a subject on which much doubt has been expressed, and on which the older form of Abstract did not throw full light. The new form cannot, however, be prepared with sufficient completeness to answer its purpose fully until the Government of India is in a position, which it is not at present, to distinguish the Land Revenue due to the Capital Expenditure of the State on Irrigation. For this reason, the present Statement does not contain detailed remarks upon the results shown in the new Abstract No. II. OLD AND NEW VERSIONS COMPARED.

The importance and interest of the separate Provincial Finances call now for their separate exhibition and illustration. A new Abstract Statement No. III is, accordingly, annexed to show the Accounts and Estimates of the whole Revenue and Expenditure for which the Provincial Governments have accepted separate responsibilities, with the resulting surplus or deficit accruing to these Governments. The entries in this Abstract correspond generally with the entries in the General Abstracts Nos. I and II; but there are some important distinctions. On the Revenue side is shown the Allotment placed at the credit of the Local Governments for Provincial Services in addition to the revenues specifically assigned to them: no corresponding entry is required, or would be admissible, in the General Accounts. On the Expenditure side are shown, first, the portion of the Interest on the Funded and Unfunded Debt which is made good by Provincial Governments for the capital invested in Provincial Productive Public Works; secondly, the value of the stationery and stamps supplied to the several Provinces from the Central Stores; and thirdly, the amount contributed to the Imperial Treasury from the Provincial Rates and Taxes by way of insurance against Famines. In the general Imperial Accounts all these charges are either deducted from the Provincial surplus which would otherwise be payable to the Provincial Governments, or, as the case may be, added to the deficit which must be made good by the Provincial Governments. ABSTRACT OF THE PROVINCIAL ACCOUNTS.

ACCOUNTS, 1876-77.

Accounts, 1876-77. The Public Revenue and Expenditure and Receipts and Disbursements actually recorded in the Accounts of 1876-77 may be thus compared with the Regular Estimates:

	Regular Estimates	Actual
Opening Balances	17,872,500	17,872,393		7
Revenue	55,796,300	56,022,277	225,977	...
Other Receipts	57,115,400	61,001,319	6,855,949	...
Expenditure	61,875,200	62,011,339	...	139,139
Other Disbursements	56,251,700	60,117,015		4,165,315
Closing Balances	12,687,800	15,161,655	2,776,865	...
Deficit of Revenue compared with whole Expenditure	6,078,300	5,992,062	86,238	...
Less invested in Productive Public Works	3,800,000	3,809,284	...	9,284
Remaining Deficit	2,278,300	2,182,778
Deficit of Revenue compared with Expenditure	6,078,300	5,992,062	86,238
Excess of Other Receipts compared with Other Disbursements	893,700	3,581,334	2,690,634
Reduction of Balances in the Public Treasuries	5,184,600	2,107,72	2,776,872

It thus appears that the whole Expenditure recorded in the Accounts of 1876-77, including Famine and Productive Public Works, exceeded the recorded Revenue by £5,992,062, being £86,238 less than was expected in March last; the expenditure on Productive Public Works was more by £9,284 than was then estimated; so that the net result of the rest of the Accounts was better than the Regular Estimates by £95,522. This result was attained notwithstanding that the loss of revenue and the expenditure attributed to the Famine brought to account in 1876-77 exceeded the estimates by a net amount which cannot be calculated at less than £350,000. This excess is nominal, and requires no explanation, because the distribution of the financial effects of the Famine in Southern India between the Accounts of that year and those of this year is a detail of no importance. The excess net charge for the Famine was counterbalanced by the postponement to 1877-78 of some heavy payments due at Home to Her Majesty's Government on account of Her Majesty's British Forces serving, or having served in India. There are many other variations in the Accounts from the Regular Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure: but none of them are of sufficient interest to require further notice.

The principal cause of the improvement (£2,690,634) in the Surplus of "Other Receipts," that is to say, in the Debt Account, which contributed most of the increase of £2,776,865 in the Closing Balance in the Public Treasuries, is that £1,000,000 was borrowed in England in the month of March 1877 instead of, as had been intended, later in the calendar year 1877. The other variations, though aggregating a large sum, are none of them of prominent importance; but the following may be mentioned:—

The Mahārājā Sindhiā paid in advance, on account of His Highness's Railway Loan, £56,000; certain loans amounting to £140,000 (chiefly in the Bombay Presidency) were not taken so soon as was expected; the Guaranteed Railway Companies supplied themselves to the amount of £244,000 with stores from their Capital reserve instead of, as had been estimated, by new disbursements of cash; bills and assay certificates remained over for discharge in 1877-78 to the amount of £392,000; the deficit of Local Revenues was smaller than the Estimate by £154,000.

In the following Table the Accounts of 1876-77 are similarly compared with the Budget Estimates for that year:

The outturn of the Revenue compared with the Expenditure was worse than the Budget Estimates, altogether, by £2,326,778, and, if the expenditure on Productive Public Works be included, then by £2,377,062.

The cause of this failure was the Famine, which was not foreseen when the Estimates were prepared: the Accounts show a worse result by, probably, £3,450,000 than they would have shown if there had been no Famine: thus, apart from that calamity, there was an improvement in the Ordinary Account of £1,072,938, which is more than accounted for by the improved earnings of the Guaranteed Railways (£1,140,000), of which some part no-doubt was due to the increase of traffic arising from the Famine relief operations.

The Expenditure having thus, owing to the Famine, exceeded the Revenue, it was necessary to supply ways and means for the service of the year otherwise. Fortunately, the opening balance in the Public Treasuries was larger than was estimated by £881,593, of which £645,428 was absorbed in supplying the deficit of Revenue. The remaining £1,731,634 was obtained under the Debt Heads. The excess amount raised by Public Loans was £1,772,145, so that, but for the Famine and the consequent necessity for increased Loans, the net result of the transactions on the Debt Account would have differed from the Budget Estimates by only £40,511. If, therefore, the effects of the unforeseen Famine be eliminated, it will be found that the Accounts correspond satisfactorily with the Estimates made two years ago; the only exception being the great improvement in the Guaranteed Railway Earnings, which was not anticipated.

The transactions for which the Local Governments had accepted defined separate responsibilities resulted, in 1876-77, in a small surplus, to them, of £5,842.

Of the sum of £3,809,284 recorded as Expenditure on Productive Public Works, £949,423 was spent on Irrigation and Navigation Works, and £2,865,865

The expenditure on the realignment of the Western Jumna Canal (£51,000) is necessary for sanitary reasons and to remove serious defects of original construction, but will not add materially to the Revenue; and, as explained by Sir John Strachey last year, it cannot be predicated concerning the Indus Valley and Punjab Northern Lines that they will yield a direct revenue sufficient to cover the interest on their cost. Strictly speaking, therefore, £1,359,000, the outlay on these works, should rather have been added to the deficit on the ordinary account, than included in the Productive Expenditure of the year.

The Accounts of the three last years 1874-77 record an expenditure of £12,329,479 on Productive Public Works, being only £798,000 less than the net sum borrowed (£13,128,000), and only £194,766 less than the aggregate net deficit (£12,524,245) of revenue during the three years as recorded in the Accounts. It must, however, be remembered that, of the expenditure thus recorded under the Head of Productive Public Works, £3,873,000 spent on the Indus Valley and Punjab Northern State Railways and on the realignment of the Western Jumna Canal cannot be expected to be fully reproductive.

Thus, if only the expenditure on truly Productive Public Works during the three years be deducted from the rest, there would remain a deficit of £4,068,000. As explained by the Hon'ble Sir John Strachey last year, it is necessary to make other adjustments before the true financial indications of the Public Accounts can be appreciated. If these adjustments were made and no expenditure were excluded excepting such as may be expected, with some confidence, to be reproductive, the true deficit of the three years would amount to about £5,878,000.* On the other hand, an expenditure of £4,979,000 is recorded in the Accounts of this period for Famine Relief, and, if count be taken of loss of revenue and of expenditure due to the Famine but recorded under other Service Heads, the Accounts of the three years must be the worse for the Famine by perhaps net 6 millions sterling. Upon the whole, considering the financial inconvenience of the unprecedentedly rapid divergence of the values of gold and silver during this period, the general result does not appear to be unfavourable. The true deficit of the three years does not, probably, exceed the cost of Famine recorded in the Accounts of this period; and, though there may be good reasons for excluding from the Head Productive Public Works the £3,873,000 spent on the realignment of the Western Jumna Canal and on the Frontier State Railways, yet that large expenditure need hardly be accepted, without reserve, as an ordinary incident of the administration.

REGULAR ESTIMATES COMPARED WITH BUDGET ESTIMATES.

The improvement of the opening balance has been already explained in the review of the Accounts of 1876-77.

When the Estimates of the current year were prepared a year ago, the Gross Deficit of Revenue, as compared with the whole recorded expenditure, was expected to be £4,249,700, which would be reduced to £621,700 if the expenditure on Productive Public Works were excluded. The Gross Deficit is now estimated at £8,308,000 and the Deficit on the Ordinary Account at £3,431,000, being in excess of the Original Estimates by £4,058,300 and £2,809,300 respectively.

INCREASE OF DEFICIT.

As last year, so, again, this year, this disappointment is to be attributed entirely to the Famine. In March last year, the Government of India ventured to hope that the Famine in Southern India was drawing to a close; and the Estimates were framed in the expectation of the return of prosperity as soon as the South-West Monsoon should come: but the Monsoon did not come till after much delay, and indeed, in some parts of India, it scarcely came at all. Consequently, the sufferings of the people and the drain upon the public treasuries not only continued, but assumed proportions which were, at one time, gravely alarming. In the Bombay Presidency, although the rain fell irregularly, much loss of crop occurred, and men's minds remained for a long time in uncertainty and apprehension, yet the relief expenditure was kept within bounds, so that the present estimate of the cost of the Famine in that Presidency is less than the estimate of last year: the Government of Bombay and its officers are to be congratulated upon the efficiency and economy with which the disaster was met there. In Madras, the gross cost of the Famine, after setting off only the price recovered for the grain provided by the Government of Madras, is now estimated at £8,687,000 in all, being much more than double the amount estimated a year ago. The Government cannot hope now that operations will altogether cease in the Madras Presidency until the next South-West Monsoon shall set in favourably. The Famine has been, in like manner, prolonged and intensified in Mysore also.

Moreover, the result of the want of rain in Upper India was that, throughout the North-Western Provinces and Oudh and a great part of the Punjab, as well as in the Native States of Rajputana and Central India, the autumn (kharif) crops upon which multitudes depend for food, almost wholly failed, and there ensued great distress which is not yet, by any means, at an end. At one time there was imminent apprehension that the spring (rabi) crops must also be wanting throughout vast regions, in which case an appalling calamity must have followed. Happily, timely and abundant rain removed these gloomy forebodings, an unusually large breadth of land was sown with spring crops, and there is now good reason to hope for a fairly abundant spring harvest in Northern India. The Lower Provinces of Bengal, the Central Provinces, and Burmah have, throughout, been prosperous, obtaining from the necessities of their neighbours great prices for abundant crops.

The general effect of the Famine upon the finances of 1877-78 may be traced in the Abstract Statements, in the entries opposite to Land Revenue and Famine Relief. An average year's land revenue is now about £21,400,000; the land revenue of the current year is expected to be only £20,103,000: a loss of not less than £1,300,000 may be set down to the Famine here. The estimated expenditure on Famine Relief is £5,234,000: this includes, as will be presently explained, the greater part of the excess outlay upon the Public Establishments generally: it does not include £200,000, the estimated addition to the cost of the Army in 1877-78 on account of the Famine; or £102,900 granted to the Governments of Madras and Bombay as opening balances at their credit on Provincial Account. There are also losses of Excise and Customs and of some other Revenues: but these are, perhaps, more than balanced by the excess net traffic earnings of the Guaranteed Railways. Upon the whole, the financial results of the Famine which will be recorded in the Accounts of 1877-78 may now be set down at net 6½ millions sterling, being upwards of 4½ millions more than the estimate of March 1877.

The total net cost of the Famine then estimated was—

In 1876-77	3,100,000
In 1877-78	2,150,000

TOTAL ... 5,250,000

The present Estimates are—

In 1876-77	3,450,000
In 1877-78	6,500,000

TOTAL ... 9,950,000

In 1878-79, the arrears of land revenue recovered may be expected to exceed the Famine expenditure. The whole net cost of the Famine in Southern India may therefore be now estimated approximately at 9½ millions sterling, of which, roughly £1,300,000 net, may be attributed to the Bombay Presidency, and £8,450,000 to the Madras Presidency. It is necessary, however, to remember that it is never possible to give a perfectly accurate account of the total net cost of a Famine: the bulk, indeed, of the direct relief expenditure and of the direct loss of revenue can be readily ascertained; but a large margin of indirect loss and gain of revenue on the one hand, and of indirect excess expenditure on the other, must, to the last, be matter for estimate rather than account.

Besides the actual cost of the Famine to British India, it has been necessary for the Government of India to lend £500,000 to Mysore and £500,000 to His Highness the Mahārājā Sindhia, making £1,000,000 in all. A large sum has also been expended on additions to the rolling-stock of the State Railways and on the construction of Railways which would not otherwise have been constructed: for instance, the Dhond and Manmar Line alone is estimated to cost £758,000 in the two years 1877-78 and 1878-79. Perhaps two-thirds of the £1,249,000 spent on Productive Public Works in excess of the Grant for the year is due to the Famine.

To revert, now, to the comparison of the Regular Estimates with the Budget Estimates of the year 1877-78, it will be observed that the excess deficit on the ordinary account (£2,809,300) is less than the excess cost of the Famine (net £4,350,000) by £1,540,700; in other words, that, if the Famine had not cost more than was expected a year ago, instead of a deficit of £3,431,000, the result of the year would have been a surplus on the ordinary account of £919,000. If the whole £6,500,000 net estimated cost of the Famine recorded in the Regular Estimates of 1877-78, be eliminated, then the surplus upon the ordinary account would be £3,069,000; and, assuming that £800,000 of the excess expenditure on Productive Public Works is due to the Famine, the Whole Expenditure, including Productive Works, would exceed the revenue recorded during the year by only £1,008,000. The adjustments necessary to bring out the true financial condition of the year would have reduced the surplus on the ordinary account by £1,113,000; and once again it is necessary to remember that, of the total entry against Productive Public Works, £89,000 spent upon the Western Jumna realignment, and £1,659,000 on the Frontier Railways should rather be recorded as ordinary than extraordinary expenditure.* Nor must it be forgotten that some of the first-fruits of the recent financial measures are being reaped this year. The Governments of Bengal and the North-Western Provinces are contributing to the Imperial Exchequer, as the result of those measures, £279,200, as follows:—

EFFECTS OF FINANCIAL MEASURES.

Bengal	200,000
North-Western Provinces	289,500
Total	489,500
Less net profits on Canals and Railways—	£
Bengal	5,900
North-Western Provinces	204,400
	210,300
Net	279,200

And the following retrenchments have been secured:—

	£
Bengal	59,000
North-Western Provinces and Oudh	42,700
Punjab	22,400
Central Provinces	9,000
Bombay	56,700
	189,800

The following are the detailed explanations of the differences between the Original and Present Estimates:—

REVENUE.

I, Land Revenues.—Less £837,800.

The chief defaulter is Madras, which is responsible for £656,600; Bombay, on the other hand, hopes to yield £129,200 more than estimated: thus the two Southern Presidencies together are expected to give £527,400 less than estimated. As a consequence of the drought in Northern India, the Punjab falls short by £25,700, and the North-Western Provinces and Oudh by £347,500. Other differences are unimportant.

III and 5, Forests.—Revenue more £49,800; Expenditure more £31,700; Net Revenue better £18,100; Net Revenue £179,000. The net increase is in Burmah £19,000, including the net price (£8,300) of some teak supplied to the Admiralty in England.

IV and 6, Excise.—Revenue less £59,700; Expenditure less £7,100; Net Revenue less £52,600; Net Revenue £2,402,000. There were net improvements as follows:—Assam

* A more correct estimate of the real financial position in 1877-78 may, perhaps, be formed by making the following adjustments:—

	Compared with Whole Expenditure.	Compared with Expenditure exclusive of investments in Productive Public Works.
	£	£
Deficit of recorded Revenue according to the Accounts	8,308,000	3,431,000
Add credited from extinct Military Funds	297,000	297,000
Saved by borrowing in England instead of remitting	815,000	815,000
Total	9,420,000	4,543,000
Transfer from Productive Public Works, expenditure not fully reproductive	1,748,000	1,748,000
Total	11,168,000	6,291,000
Deduct net cost of Famine, less the estimated annual average of £1,500,000	5,000,000	5,000,000
Remaining Deficit	6,168,000	1,291,000

£10,000, Bengal £45,000, Bombay £34,000 (of which £15,000 is nominal, there having been an error of classification in the original Grant), the Central Provinces £10,000, and the Punjab £3,000: and deficits as follows:—North-Western Provinces and Oudh £24,000, and Madras £128,000.

Thus, the Famine in Southern India and the Drought in Upper India caused a net loss of Excise revenue compared with the Estimates (which were normal Estimates) of £133,000. This loss was compensated, to the extent of £80,000, by favourable returns in other Provinces; notably in Bengal, where, the Board of Revenue remarks, "the localisation of the Excise Revenue has instilled energy into the administration" of the department.

68. F and 7. Assessed Taxes.—The entries here (net £84,000) are for the License Tax in the North-Western Provinces, the only Province in which this tax was in operation in 1877-78.

69. VI, Provincial Rates, and XXVII, Provincial Contributions.—It was estimated that the Provincial Governments would contribute £415,100 to the Imperial Treasury from their own independent resources, the main tributaries being Bengal (£281,700), almost wholly for interest on the capital invested in the Provincial Canals and Railways, and the North-Western Provinces (£100,000), on the same account. In the Budget Estimates these contributions were placed under the head "XXVII, Provincial Contributions."

To enable these Governments to bear their new burdens, the Government of Bengal was authorised to impose a Public Works cess (Bengal Provincial Public Works Act (II), 1877), and, by Act VII of 1877, the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces was empowered to apply, at his discretion, in payment of charges incurred on account of Canals and Railways declared to be works of general provincial utility, any sum not exceeding one-tenth of the rates levied under the North-Western Provinces Local Rates Act, 1871: the sum actually so applied is expected to be only £28,000. Further, by the North-Western Provinces License Act (VIII), 1877, the Government of the North-Western Provinces was empowered to levy a license tax on trades and dealings, the results of which in 1877-78 are shown, as has been explained, under the preceding Head, "F Assessed Taxes."

The proceeds of the Bengal Public Works Cess Act, 1877, (£185,000) and the North-Western Provinces Amended Local Rates Act, 1877, (£28,000) are shown in the Regular Estimates for 1877-78 under the Head "VI Provincial Rates."

70. The actual contributions to be paid by the Local Governments, whether under the arrangements completed last year, as just described, or under the further arrangements for Famine Insurance, described in the preliminary Resolution, appear in the separate Abstract Statement of Provincial Revenues and Expenditure No. III. The entries in that Statement under 1 Interest, contain the gross amounts payable by the Governments of Bengal and the North-Western Provinces and Oudh as interest (including the imperial share of profits) on the capital cost of the Provincial Works for which those Governments have accepted responsibility; to ascertain the net charge upon the Local Governments on this account, the net revenue which they receive from the Canals and Railways made over to them, must be deducted from the amount shown under 1 Interest. The entry opposite to Famine Insurance is the total amount which will be paid by the Local Governments, in consequence of the recent legislation as explained in the preliminary Resolution. The effect of the entry of those sums in this way in that pro forma Account, is to reduce the Surplus payable to the Provincial Governments by the Imperial Government, or, as the case may be, to increase the Deficit payable by the Provincial Governments to the Imperial Government: the relief to the Imperial Government appears in the General Finance Accounts, Abstracts I and II, only in the shape of less Surplus to pay to the Provincial Governments, or more Deficit to receive from them.

A necessary result of all this is, that the contributions from the Governments of Bengal and the North-Western Provinces shown in the Original Estimates under "Provincial Contributions" disappear in the Regular Estimates.

71. It may be mentioned here that, as the Government of Bengal found a difficulty in levying the Provincial Public Works Cess during the first quarter of 1877-78, the Government of India consented to reduce the gross amount of interest to be contributed by that Government in 1877-78 from £274,700 to £200,000 only: the net amount that will be actually contributed is now estimated at £5,900 less, viz., £194,100.

VII and 9.—Customs.—Revenue more £149,100; Expenditure more £8,700; Net CUSTOMS. Revenue more £136,400; Net Revenue £2,430,000. The net improvements were, in Bengal £214,000 and Bombay £67,000; the failures were in Burmah £21,000, Madras £80,000, and on the Inland Customs Line £44,000. Here, again, the failures in Burmah, Madras, and Upper India, aggregating £125,000, are due entirely to the Famine. The estimate, as a whole, was abnormally low, and the Regular Estimate shows considerable recovery, great prosperity in Bengal having counterbalanced the loss in Madras and Upper India: Bombay has nearly regained its usual condition.

VIII and 10.—Salt.—Revenue more £223,000; Expenditure more £12,300; Net SALT. Revenue more £210,700; Net Revenue £6,035,000. The Net Revenue would have been greater by £165,000 but for the rectification of an erroneous procedure in Madras, where it has been the habit to credit as Revenue, Government Securities deposited by Salt Contractors: if it had not been necessary to make this correction, the Net Revenue would have been £6,200,000. The improvements are as follows:—Bombay £154,000, Bengal £128,000, Inland Customs Line £35,000 (would have been £51,000 but for the cost of certain negotiations with the Native States in Rajputana, and indemnity payments already made to some of them). The defaulters are, Madras £102,000 (but for the transfer already described, there would have been an improvement of £63,000), and Burmah £3,000.

By the Salt Act (XVIII), 1877, which became law on the 27th Decem- CHANGES IN ber 1877, the duty on Salt consumed in Bombay and Madras was raised from DUTIES.
Rs. 1-13 to Rs. 2-8 a maund; the duty on Salt consumed in Sindh was raised from the special rate of 8 annas to the general rate of Rs. 2-8 a maund; and, simultaneously, the duty in Upper India was reduced from Rs. 3 to Rs. 2-12, and the duty in Bengal from Rs. 3-4 to Rs. 3-2 a maund: some other changes were also made. Although these measures were taken with a view to the eventual equalisation of the Salt Duties throughout India, still they were calculated to produce a temporary net yearly addition to the Revenue of £300,000: it is impossible to say how much of the considerable increase of Revenue this year is due to their operation; the expectation was that little increase would result at first; and it is probable that not much of the excess Revenue is due to the increased rates of duty: but that this Head of Revenue has been exceptionally productive this year.

IX and 11.—Opium.—Revenue more £588,000; Expenditure more £355,000; Net Revenue OPUM.
more £229,000; Net Revenue £6,429,000. Of the improvement, £10,000 is in Bombay and the rest in Bengal.

On the 16th July 1877, the duty on a chest of opium exported from Bom- INCREASE OF bay was raised by Rs. 50; that is to say, the duty on a chest of opium DUTY.
for export from Bombay was increased, if weighed at Ajmir, from Rs. 625 to Rs. 675, and, if weighed elsewhere, from Rs. 600 to Rs. 650. This measure was adopted in order to prevent the loss of revenue caused by the displacement in China by Malwa opium, of Bengal opium, which, at present prices, yields, on a quantity of opium equal to the contents of a chest of Malwa opium, a net revenue of about Rs. 1,000.

The drought in Upper India extended to Malwa with such disastrous effects FAILURE OF upon the poppy cultivation there, that the Governor General's Agent, after care- MALWA CROP.
ful personal inspection, does not expect the crop to yield 25,000 chests of opium, which is less than half an average crop. The effect of this anticipated failure has been, for some time past, manifest; the market prices having risen, at Bombay, from Rs. 1,275 for new, and Rs. 1,312 for old opium, to Rs. 1,540 and Rs. 1,590, or by more than 20 per cent.: prices have, indeed, been still higher. In consequence of the stimulus of these high prices, the falling-off in the export of Malwa opium this year has been less than might have been expected; 41,651 chests passed the scales to the end of February, compared with the following corresponding figures:—

1872-73	39,905	1875-76	38,418
1873-74	42,129	1876-77	46,253
1874-75	45,281	1877-78	41,651

Esti- 77-78. Forty-nine thousand five hundred chests of Bengal Opium have been sold during the year, at an average of Rs. 1,266-6-7, yielding £6,268,760, which may be compared with the following figures :—

NUM.	No. of Chests.	Average.			No. of Chests.	Average.
		Rs.	A.	P.		Rs.	A.	P.
1872-73	... 42,675	1,385	11	6	1876-77	... 47,240	1,270	1 11
1873-74	... 42,750	1,265	18	4	1877-78	... 49,500	1,266	6 7
1874-75	... 45,000	1,207	0	4	1878-79	... 55,500
1875-76	... 45,510	1,259	2	11

1878. The produce of Bengal Opium in 1876-77 was again abundant the harvest yielding 67,167 chests: thus the stock in hand on the 1st of January 1878 was no less than 102,482 chests. Seeing the large supply thus accumulated, the Government of India, on the 27th April, notified 54,000 chests for sale in the calendar year 1878, leaving for sale in 1879, 48,882 chests of old opium, in addition to the crop of 1877-78 now on the ground. At the same time, the price paid to the cultivators was reduced from Rs. 5 to Rs. 4½ a seer 70° consistence, and the Chutia Nagpur Agency and the Rohini Factory were closed. The cultivators have manifested no unwillingness to accept the reduced price; and, had not the season in Bengal, as in Malwa, been unpropitious, there would probably have been no great contraction of the area under poppy.

X and 12, Stamps.—Revenue more £88,600; Expenditure more £4,800; Net Revenue more £83,800; Net Revenue £2,882,000; being more by £140,000 than the highest net revenue ever before collected. The improvements are as follows: Assam, £6,000; Bengal, £90,000; the Punjab, £25,000; Burma, £6,000; Central Provinces, £10,000; North-Western Provinces and Oudh, £4,000. On the other hand, Madras has defaulted by £22,000, and Bombay by £30,000. Stores in England, too, have cost £3,000 more than was estimated.

The great increase in Bengal is partly accidental, being due to the effects of the Land Registration Act (VII) of 1876, the operation of which will be for the most part temporary: this Act, though not passed for revenue purposes, was estimated to yield £59,000 of Stamp Revenue. The failure in the Minor Presidencies is probably due to the Famine.

XI and 13, Mint.—Revenue more £274,000; Expenditure more £12,800; Net Revenue more £231,200; Net Revenue £317,000,—the largest net revenue ever received, with the single exception of the year 1865-66, when a net revenue of £321,793 was recorded.

MANAGE OF The net imports of silver in the first ten months of the year amounted to the enormous sum of £13,115,767; and the still larger sum of £13,695,559 has been actually coined during these ten months. It has been necessary to keep both the Calcutta and Bombay Mints working, for months together, to the utmost of their power, and the exertions of the Mint and Assay Masters and their establishments deserve public acknowledgment. The brunt of the work has fallen upon the Bombay Mint, which has coined during the ten months £9,388,134; the Calcutta Mint has coined £1,307,425.

INCY
EXT. By the Currency Law, as it stands, the Paper Currency Department is bound to issue notes, convertible on demand into coin, in exchange for all silver bullion, after it has been assayed. The Government has statutory power to interpose any interval which it thinks proper between the assay of the bullion and the issue of notes in exchange therefor; but, although the obligation to make these great advances has caused, this year, considerable inconvenience, and even some anxiety, no such usance has been, hitherto, imposed. Since the end of August, the amount of the currency reserve absorbed in advances upon bullion has always largely exceeded £2,000,000; throughout December and January and the first week of February, the sum thus locked up exceeded £3,000,000; and, at one time, it stood at £3,680,560. At that time, however, the circulation and, therefore, the coin reserve, were so inflated that no uneasiness was felt. The pressure upon the resources of the Currency Department was really greatest on the 15th October, when, although only the more moderate sum of £2,629,884 was outstanding as bullion advances, there remained a coin reserve of only £3,864,473 to support outstanding notes for £12,487,608.

XXI and 30, Miscellaneous.—Revenue more £59,700; Expenditure more £7,400; Net Revenue more £52,300. The only item deserving notice in India is a recovery from the Rangoon Port Fund of a loan of £7,700 which had been written off. The main improve ment is at home; where the Cinchona produced upon the Government plantations was sold for £27,400 more than was estimated. Regular Statement, 1877

Irrigation.—Revenue more £17,400; Expenditure more £4,900; Net Revenue more £42,500; Net Revenue £51,000. The improvement is mostly in the North-Western Provinces, where the drought was favorable to the revenue under this Head. IRRIGATION.

EXPENDITURE.

1 and XVIII.—Interest.—Expenditure more £101,500; Revenue more £23,500; Net Interest. Expenditure more £78,000; Net Expenditure £5,212,000,

The Home Treasury spent net £7,500 less than the Grant: the whole excess was in India, and is explained entirely by the discount on the loan raised during the year which has been recorded under this Head. It was not formerly the practice to adjust the premium or discount on Loans as Revenue and Expenditure; but this is always now done. Four per cent. Bonds were sold in England during the year for £4,200,000, the premium thereon amounting to £59,000; in India, Four per cent. Promissory Notes were issued for £3,304,780, at an average rate of Rs. 96-6 per cent., the discount thereon amounting to £119,939: thus the net discount paid during the year amounted to £60,939. Moreover, the discount in India unadjusted at the beginning of the year exceeded the unadjusted premium in England by £53,956: thus the whole amount adjusted during the year will be £114,895.* The sum of £8,300 has been paid during the year as interest on loans raised for a temporary purpose, to which reference will again be made.

The following Table contains the usual statistics of the Funded Debt of India:— STATISTICS OF PUBLIC DEBT.

* This assumes the current rate of interest to be four per cent.

Thus the average rate of yearly interest upon the registered debt of India would appear to be 4.29 per cent., whereas the interest to be obtained upon an investment in four per cent. securities of the Government of India is 4.06 or 3.88 per cent., according as the interest is payable in silver in India or in gold in London.

The capital of the Railway Companies and Madras Irrigation Company is £97,298,508, the interest upon which amounting to £4,706,000, is guaran-

Estimated in gold in London from Indian Revenues. The total debt of India therefore of all kinds is as follows:—

Total Debt of India classified according to the standard (gold or silver) by which it is paid and brought to the common standard of silver at the average exchange of the year 1877-78.

According to this table, the average interest per cent. paid upon the whole debt of India is 4.53.

The percentage of the Rupee debt held by Natives of India on the 31st December is estimated from the distribution of the actual payments of interest to have been as follows:—

1869	... 22.50	1874	... 25.24
1870	... 20.25	1875	... 24.77
1871	... 21.74	1876	... 25.30
1872	... 22.62	1877	... 25.68
1873	... 25.31

Investments by Native States have increased this percentage of late years.

3, Refunds and Drawbacks.—The saving of £18,000 is casual, and may not, after all, be realised. The refunds and drawbacks recorded during the last five years average £318,488, so that the latest estimate this year is unusually low.

4, Land Revenue.—Excess expenditure £32,400 due to the Famine.

14 and XII, Post Office.—Expenditure more £6,700; Revenue more £14,700; Net expenditure less £8,000; Net expenditure £60,000.

This is the smallest net expenditure recorded against the Post Office since the introduction of the system by which official correspondence is carried at specially favorable rates. The net charge is only £5,458 less than in 1876-77; but, then, the extra departmental expenditure in 1877-78 on account of the Famine is estimated at £12,000. Any one forming a judgment upon the finances of the Post Office should bear in mind that the expenditure recorded in 1877-78 includes subsidies paid to the British India Steam Navigation Company (£71,600), and the Euphrates and Tigris Company (£3,300), as well as India's share (£75,000) of the subsidy to the P. and O. Company; altogether £149,600. In a great part of the work done for these payments the Indian Post Office has comparatively little interest: the whole revenue received by India as its share of the postage realised from overland correspondence scarcely covers the cost of territorial conveyance in India. It should also be remembered that official correspondence is now carried at rates which are calculated to yield little or no departmental profit: of the revenue recorded, £ 131,000 is derived from official correspondence. On the other hand, the Post Office enjoys certain privileges, in that the mails are conveyed by the Guaranteed Railways at nominal rates, and that the State Railways are to carry the mails at cost price only.

The progress of the Post Office since 1856, when the uniform $\frac{1}{2}$ anna rate for letters was first introduced, has been remarkable, and at present there is no sign of its ceasing.

		Articles received for delivery.	Revenue from private correspondence.	Post Office	Postage
		No.	£	No.	Miles
1855-56	...	33,286,000	159,052	753	36,313
1876-77	...	122,511,000	518,177	3,852	58,370

15 and AXIII, Telegraphs.—Expenditure less £12,500; Revenue more £22,500; Net Expenditure less £35,000. The Net Grant to the Department was £180,000; the Net Expenditure is now expected to be £145,000,—a satisfactory improvement.

The Indo-European Line is a heavy drag upon the departmental finances, to which it contributes this year an expected deficit of £55,000. The Ceylon Line also imposes a considerable annual net charge upon India, from which relief is now being sought: there is no longer any sufficient reason why India should bear this burden for Ceylon. The net expenditure on the Indian lines alone is expected to be only about £85,000.

16, Administration.—Expenditure more £44,500. The chief excess is for the offices connected with the Government of India £35,400, and is to be attributed, for the most part, to expenses connected with the Famine, as, for example, the journey of His Excellency the Viceroy and Suite to the famine districts; telegraphic correspondence with Her Majesty's Government; and the appointment of special officers, &c. There is also an excess of £15,800 in Bombay, for the cost of a third Commissioner and for the carriage eastwards of coin from the Bombay Mint,—an obligation arising from the concession of convertibility to Currency Notes beyond their own circle. On the other hand, there is a nominal reduction of £6,000 in England owing to the transfer of some of the home expenditure to Stationery and Printing.

18 and XII, Law and Justice and 19 and XI, Police.—Expenditure more £34,600; Revenue less £5,200; Net Expenditure more £39,800. The Famine has obscured the facts about these two Services, part of the expenditure upon which has been transferred to 31 Famine Relief; explanations in detail therefore seem useless.

17 and XVI, Marine.—Expenditure less £1,000; Revenue more £34,200; Net Expenditure less £38,200. The excess Revenue is in Bengal (£39,100), and is due to the great influx of shipping into Calcutta to carry grain to Madras.

21 and XIII, Education.—Expenditure less £16,300; Revenue more £8,100; Net Expenditure less £24,400. The largest decreases of net expenditure are in Bengal £8,900, and the North-Western Provinces and Oudh £6,200.

23, Stationery and Printing.—Expenditure more £26,800. Stores bought in England cost more by £22,700 than was expected, and there is an increase of £8,000 in Madras attributed to the Famine.

24, Political.—Expenditure more £67,200. Of the excess, £10,000 is at the Home Treasury and includes three years' charges against India for the China Embassy and a settlement of the account of the Zanzibar Mission, &c. The rest is in India and is due to various frontier arrangements.

25, Allowances and Assignments.—The saving is nominal, being due to the substitution of direct assignments of revenue for certain Pagoda payments in the Madras Presidency.

27 and XVIII, Superannuations, &c.—Expenditure more £13,300; Revenue more £22,600; Net Expenditure more £20,700; Net Expenditure £1,236,000. The amount credited from the Book Balances of the extinct Military Funds is £297,580, as follows:—

India	20,950
Madras	189,200
Bombay	87,100
TOTAL					297,580

The expenditure for Pensions is increasing, and must continue for some time to increase.

28 & XIX, Loss and Gain by Exchange.—Expenditure more £16,000; Revenue more £6,100; Net Expenditure more £9,900. The Original Estimate was that the Secretary of State would raise £12,250,000 by the sale of bills for Rs. 13,85,00,000, the estimated rate of Exchange being Re. 1=1s. 9 23/4d. It is now estimated that £10,432,000 will be obtained by the sale of bills for Rs. 12,04,20,000, the average rate being Re. 1=1s. 8 7/9d. Thus, although the amount entered under Loss by Exchange is very nearly what was estimated, this result has been obtained only because the sum remitted has been considerably less than was estimated. The value of Re. 1 measured in gold has proved to be less than was estimated by 44d., or about 2 per cent. Doubtless the estimate made in March last year was rather sanguine.

ti- 78. The strain upon the Indian Treasury, owing to the prolongation of the Famine, compelled the Government of India to ask the Secretary of State, first, to reduce his drafts, and then, for eleven weeks (from the 19th September to the 12th December) to suspend them altogether.

31, Famine Relief.—Expenditure more £3,809,000. The cause of this excess has been already prominently explained. The entry here provides for the adjustments required to place the Governments of Madras and Bombay in a condition of equilibrium at the end of the year 1877-78: the additions necessary to provide them with moderate opening balances appear only under the Head 37, Provincial Surpluses. The Famine has caused large excess expenditure throughout the Civil Administration in the Madras and Bombay Presidencies; and the Government of India will take over as much of this excess charge as was beyond the resources of the Local Governments: this will be effected by the transfer of sufficient expenditure to the Imperial Head Famine Relief from the Provincial Headings Jails, Police, and, chiefly, Public Works. Thus, as already remarked, the entries opposite Famine Relief show almost the whole of the expenditure on the Famine in the Civil Departments including Public Works Ordinary.

32 and XXII, The Army.—Expenditure more £197,400; Revenue more £20,000; Net Expenditure more £177,400. The excess charges on account of the Famine (£200,000) are more than the Estimate (£103,700) by £96,300, and the expenditure from the Home Treasury is expected to exceed the estimate by £117,700, owing to the postponement into 1877-78 of certain payments which, as already explained, the Secretary of State intended to have made in 1876-77.

33 and XXIII, Public Works Ordinary.—Expenditure less £91,500; Revenue more £6,500; Net Expenditure less £98,000. This is nominal, owing to the transfer from this Head to 31, Famine Relief, of expenditure which exceeded the Public Works expenditure due to the Famine: it was not thought expedient to distribute the adjustment finely over the several Heads affected.

35 and XVI, Guaranteed Railways.—Expenditure more £418,800; Revenue more £1,893,800; Net Revenue more £1,445,000. According to the Finance Accounts these undertakings are now expected to yield a Net Revenue of £715,000.

This result is exclusive of the share of the entry under the adjusting Head 29, Loss by Exchange, which belongs to the Guaranteed Railways. The guaranteed interest to be paid to the Companies in gold in England is estimated at £4,685,000, which sum enters into the total £5,645,000 shown in the Abstract Statements as the estimated expenditure upon the Guaranteed Railways in 1877-78. Converted at the average rate obtained for the Secretary of State's Bills during the year (1s. 8-79d.), this sum of £4,685,000 becomes Rs. 5,40,80,493, and including £2,200 interest on the Revenue balances of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Company, the true total expenditure on the lines becomes Rs. 6,37,10,000, or, in the conventional notation of the Accounts, £6,371,000. The true financial result to India in 1877-78 of the Guaranteed Railways is thus expected to be a net charge of £9,000, being an improvement upon the result similarly calculated from the Budget Estimates of no less than £1,333,000.

Some portion of this improvement is doubtless due to the prolongation of the Famine: the Government of India has repeatedly taken occasion to acknow-
the operations for the relief of the great population suffering from that calamity. Calculations have been made which indicate that the Famine does not account for more altogether than £600,000 of the excess net earnings of the guaranteed railways during the two years 1876-77 and 1877-78. Regular Estimates, 1877-78.

It is not too much to say that the enormous increase in the gross earnings of these Railways has taken every one by surprise. In his Financial Statement made on the 15th March last, the Hon'ble Sir John Strachey drew attention prominently to the fact that, for the first time, the gross earnings were expected in 1876-77 to exceed £10,000,000: the sum of £10,885,098 was actually earned in that year. It was estimated that £9,279,400 would be similarly earned in 1877-78: the estimate has now grown to no less than £13,147,000, being an excess in the year of £3,867,600. If this estimate be realised (and there is no reason to doubt that it will be realised), the earnings of these lines in 1877-78 will have increased by 72 per cent. in five years. Meanwhile the percentage of working expenses has not increased but diminished steadily from 61·86 in 1872-73 to 51·98 in 1877-78, which is creditable to the administration of the Companies.

Now that the East Indian and Great Indian Peninsula Companies are earning surplus profits each half-year, the growth of the traffic benefits the State proportionately less than it did. Of the gross earnings this year the unprecedented sum of £871,400, being more than double the estimated amount, will be surrendered to the Companies as surplus profits. But, altogether, the recent history of the Railways constructed by the Guaranteed Indian Companies is exceedingly satisfactory.

The several Railways have contributed to the net increase over the Original Estimates this year as follows :—

East Indian Railway ...	859,900	Bombay and Baroda ...	136,500
Great Indian Peninsula ...	348,000*	Eastern Bengal ...	102,500
Sindh, Punjab and Delhi ...	180,000	Oudh and Rohilkhand ...	62,000
Madras Railway ...	161,200	South Indian ...	40,300

ar Esti- This great growth of the traffic upon the Guaranteed Railways has been 1877-78. closely bound up with the simultaneous growth of the trade of India, which, without their assistance, could not have attained its remarkable development.

ON The Madras Irrigation Company causes a charge of £50,000 a year for
I. interest on the £1,000,000 spent by the Company, and the result of its operations has, till now, been that the working expenses annually exceed the revenue by a considerable sum.

RAILWAYS. XXXVI and 26, State Railways.—Expenditure less £77,000; Revenue less £137,800:
Net Revenue less £60,800. The progress of these lines is as yet slow, and it is observed with regret that the facts usually fall short of the estimates. The failure this year is attributed to delay in the opening of the Northern Bengal State Railway, and, elsewhere, to over-sanguine estimates: sufficient experience has not yet been accumulated to enable the administrators of these Railways to estimate future results with accuracy.

The gross earnings and working expenses and net traffic receipts of these Railways are as follows:—

STATE RAILWAYS.

	Miles open.	Receipts.	Expenditure.	Net Revenue.	Loss on Working.

1878-79—Budget Estimate	2,150	967,000	704,000	263,000

It must be borne in mind that the Guaranteed Lines have occupied the main trade arteries of the country, and that it can hardly be expected that the progress of the State Railways should in these the first years of their existence compare favourably with the Guaranteed Lines, many of which have been in operation for a long series of years.

57 and XXXVII, Provincial Surpluses and Deficits.—Expenditure more £230,000; Revenue less £9,200. The Net Surplus accruing to the Provincial Governments upon the transactions of the year is thus estimated at £220,800. Of this, £102,900 is a grant from the General Revenues to the Governments of Madras and Bombay, to constitute moderate opening balances available for Provincial Services in 1878-79. The Government of Bengal had a surplus of £122,300; the Government of the North-Western Provinces a deficit of £25,000, caused entirely by the Relief operations in those Provinces, the whole charge for which has been accepted by the Local Government.

Productive Public Works.—Expenditure more £1,249,000, of which £863,000 is in India, and £386,000 in England.

The Excess is in the main due to the Famine. Heavy Expenditure was necessary to increase the Rolling Stock of the Railways, in order that they might be properly equipped for their work: and extensive operations were undertaken in order to provide useful labour for the people dependent upon the State for their daily food.

Of the total expenditure of £4,877,000, £869,000 was spent on Irrigation and Navigation works, and £4,008,000 on Railways. The principal Irrigation Works and Railways under construction were as follows:—

The deficit of Revenue compared with the Whole Expenditure of the year is expected to exceed the estimated deficit by £4,058,300. It has been shown that the opening balance was larger than the Estimate by £2,776,865, of which £1,000,000 was borrowed just before instead of just after the beginning of the year. The amount to be added to the balances £535,335 falls short of the estimated amount £823,400 by £288,065, which sum with £3,770,235 obtained by increasing the remaining net obligations of the State will supply the deficit of Revenue. Regular Estimates, 1877-78
WAYS AND MEANS

According to the original arrangement, a net sum of £6,500,000 was to be borrowed in the year. This sum has been raised to £7,254,000, so that all the additional financial difficulties of the year have been apparently met with an addition of less than three-quarters of a million to the Funded Debt in excess of what was originally contemplated. This, however, is not a complete view of the case: not only was an unestimated million borrowed, as has been seen, immediately before the year opened, but the capital transactions with the Railway Companies leave the Public Debt to them just one million larger than it was expected to be. On the other hand, the net Loans to Native States, &c., have exceeded the Estimate by £416,000, which excess is much more than explained by the loans to Mysore and Gwalior, already described, some portion of which, indeed, still remains to be taken. The net sum to be added to the Public Debt during the year (including in this category the capital transactions with the Guaranteed Railway Companies and the loan transactions with Native States, &c.) is in excess of Estimate by £1,344,900, to which, if the £1,000,000 borrowed in March 1877 be added, the sum of £2,344,900 results as the real addition to the Debt on account of the prolongation of the Famine. So far, however, as the Estimates of the current year are concerned, the excess deficit of £4,058,300 has been thus supplied:—

Borrowed	1,344,900
From the Public Balances	288,065
From other Debt Heads	2,425,335

Of this last item (£2,425,335) the Local Funds supplied an excess surplus of £425,000, and the remaining £2,000,335 is spread over the various deposit and remittance transactions. The closing balances in the Home and Indian Treasuries are now estimated at £16,000,000, viz., £14,734,600 in India, and £1,265,400 in the Home Treasury.

In October 1877 the pressure upon the resources of the Government of India was so great, that it became necessary to obtain some temporary assistance for the Treasury; £565,145 was, accordingly, borrowed for short terms at rates of interest varying from 5 to 7 per cent. All these loans have now been repaid; the sum of £8,300 represents the interest upon them. TEMPORARY LO.

BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1878-79.

In the following Table, the Budget Estimates, 1878-79, are compared with the Regular Estimates, 1877-78:—

Addition to the Public Balances	535,335

The Regular Estimates for 1877-78 show a gross Revenue of £58,682,000; the Budget Estimates for 1878-79 produce a gross Revenue of £63,250,000, being an improvement of £4,568,000, of which £2,654,000 is due to the incorporation of Local Funds, the transactions of which have hitherto been recorded separately; £929,000* (net) to new taxation and the temporary incidental increase of the duties upon Salt, and £985,000 to other causes. As the Land Revenue for collection in 1878-79 is estimated to exceed the amount collected in 1877-78 by £1,968,000, the Estimates of Revenue as a whole are, prima facie, moderate.

The Regular Estimates of 1877-78 point to a gross expenditure of £66,990,000 and to an Ordinary Expenditure of £62,113,000. The Grants for the service of 1878-79 aggregate £65,649,000, those for the ordinary services amounting to £61,094,000. For comparative purposes, however, it is more convenient to eliminate the Famine Expenditure altogether. The Famine Expenditure in 1877-78 is £5,234,000 upon the Civil Estimates, and £200,000 upon those of the Army, total £5,434,000; the Grants for Famine Expenditure in 1878-79 are £500,000 upon the Civil Estimates and £55,000 upon the Army Estimates, total £555,000. Thus, excluding all plainly distinguishable recorded expenditure on Famine, the Regular Estimates point to a Grand Total Ordinary Expenditure in 1877-78 of £56,679,000, whilst the Grants for 1878-79 aggregate £60,544,400, showing an increase of £3,865,000, of which £2,832,100 is explained by the incorporation of the expenditure from Local Funds, and £54,000 is for the cost of collecting the License Tax. The great estimate of £3,000,000 for Loss by Exchange would alone account for an excess of £1,384,000 over the Regular Estimate. Compared with the present year, therefore, the Grants for the ordinary service of next year are, prima facie, reasonable and moderate.

The following are the detailed explanations of the differences between the Budget Estimates and the Regular Estimates of 1877-78:—

REVENUE.

I, Land Revenue.—Increase £1,968,000. The Land Revenue of 1877-78 was depressed by the famine.

An ordinary year's land revenue being now about £21,400,000, the estimate for 1878-79 (£22,071,000) includes nearly £700,000 arrears: and this is not perhaps too sanguine an estimate. It cannot indeed be predicted confidently that, even if the season proves favourable, the Madras Presidency will not only resume its usual productiveness, but be able to make good much of its recoverable arrears; but in Upper India there will probably be no difficulty in collecting the arrears.

II, Tributes.—More £10,000. Owing to the Drought, the State of Búndí will probably not be able to pay till next year its tribute due in 1877-78.

III and 5, Forest.—Revenue more £53,000; Expenditure more £29,000; Net Revenue more £24,000; Net Revenue £203,000; a large recovery is expected in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh for sleepers supplied to State Railways. The estimate seems moderate.

IV and 6, Excise.—Revenue more £218,000; Expenditure less £4,000; Net Revenue more £252,000; Net Revenue £2,654,000; being by far the largest Net Excise Revenue yet obtained.

Of the increase, £142,900 is due to the anticipated return of prosperity in the Minor Presidencies; the estimates of Revenue there are moderate. There is, moreover, a special item of £50,000 at Bombay—the expected result of the enforcement of the treaty obligations of the Baroda State in respect to opium. At present opium is so freely smuggled through or from Baroda into the neighbouring British territory, that the Revenue obtained upon the consumption of opium there is nominal, although the drug is more freely used in Kattywar and Cutch than in any other part of India excepting Assam. As compared with previous years, the bulk of the improvement is in Bengal, Burma, the Central Provinces, and Assam. The growing prosperity of the country, and the firm ground of results attained this year, justify these estimates: the improvement manifested in them illustrates the advantage of provincial responsibility for such revenues.

I and 7, Assessed Taxes.—Revenue more £675,000; Expenditure more £48,000; Net Revenue more £627,000: Net Revenue £711,000.

This is the estimated produce of the License Tax imposed by Act II of 1878 (Imperial Council), Act I of 1878 (Bengal Council), and the corresponding legislation, accomplished or expected, in the Bombay and Madras Councils.

I and 8, Provincial Rates.—Revenue more £3,031,000; Expenditure more £48,000; Net Revenue more £2,983,000.

This comprises the proceeds of the new taxation imposed by the Bengal Public Works Cess Act, 1877 (maximum half anna in the rupee— $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.—rental), and the several Local Rates Acts III, IV, and V, 1878 (two per cent. on Land Revenue), as well as the rates hitherto accounted for separately as Local Funds. These last-mentioned rates are balanced by the following expenditure hitherto recorded under Local Funds and now, for the first time, incorporated in the General Accounts:—

3.—Refunds and Drawbacks	17,400
4.—Land Revenue	443,700
6.—Excise	800
7.—Provincial Rates	43,400
12.—Post Office...	33,200
15.—Minor Departments	211,600
16.—Law and Justice	100
17.—Police	244,600
19.—Education	276,500
21.—Medical	66,100
22.—Stationery and Printing	200
23.—Political	100
26.—Superannuation, &c.	100
28.—Miscellaneous	98,300
Public Works, Ordinary	1,401,100
TOTAL	£2,832,100

The New Rates are expected to yield, in 1878-79, as follows:—

Bengal (Public Works Cess Act II of 1877)	345,000
North-Western Provinces and Oudh (Acts III and IV of 1877)	55,000
Punjab (Act V of 1877)	49,000
TOTAL	£ 449,000

The New Rates will not be levied in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh till the new agricultural year, which begins in September. In 1879-80, and thereafter, these rates will yield, in those Provinces, £55,000 more.

Thus the expected License Tax and the New Rates together are expected to yield this year gross £1,214,000 and net, say, £1,150,000. Both taxes have been surrendered to the Provincial Governments, and the Abstract Statement

Esti- No. III shows that these Governments are to pay to the Imperial Treasury in 1878-79. 1878-79 in respect thereof as follows:—

Famine Insurance	776,500
Interest on Capital invested in Provincial Canals and Railways	611,300
Total ...	1,387,800
Less net profits on Canals and Railways:—
Bengal	£ 78,400
North-Western Provinces and Oudh	„ 181,400
	259,800

Remaining Net new burden to be borne by the Provincial Governments in 1878-79 with the assistance of the New Taxes	1,128,000
---	-----------

If to this be added the sum of the new retrenchments exacted (£189,800), it would appear that the total relief obtained by this means is £1,317,000.

VII and 9, Customs.—Revenue less £150,000; Expenditure less £1,000; Net Revenue less £146,000; Net Revenue £2,284,000.

As first prepared, these Estimates showed a gross improvement of £82,000; but, as explained in the prefixed Resolution, the Government has resolved to abolish the long-condemned sugar duties levied upon the Inland Customs Line, and to remit the duties upon the coarser qualities of Cotton Yarns and Piece-goods, Railway Materials, and a number of articles, each producing only a small amount of revenue.

The estimated reduction is as follows:—

Sugar duties	155,000
Coarse cotton yarns and piece-goods	26,000
Railway materials	11,000
Miscellaneous items	40,000
	<hr/> 232,000

The remaining Net Customs Duty (£2,284,000) is only £5,000 less than the Net Customs Revenue of 1876-77.

The Net Customs Revenue of late years has been—

1872-73	2,473,515
1873-74	2,444,632
1874-75	2,491,067
1875-76	2,535,776
1876-77	2,289,115
1877-78	2,430,000

The depression in 1876-77 is mainly due to the reforms of the 5th August 1875 (Indian Tariff Act VIII of 1875). Apparently, the Revenue has already completely recovered from the effects of the sacrifices then made, though they were estimated at £308,000.

VIII and 10, Salt.—Revenue more £217,000; Expenditure less £11,000; Net Revenue more £258,000; Net Revenue £6,293,000.

It has been explained that the revenue of 1877-78 has been accidentally reduced by £165,500 owing to the correction of an erroneous practice at Madras; otherwise, the revenue during the current year would have been £165,000 more, and the estimated improvement next year £165,000 less, or only £93,000 in all. The readjustment of the Salt Duties by Act XVIII of 1877 was expected to result in a net addition of £300,000 to the revenue, but little of which is believed to have been realised in 1877-78. Nevertheless, only a moderate part of the £300,000 has been added to the estimated revenue of 1877-78, because the amount of that revenue is quite unprecedented, and it does not seem prudent, for the present, to reckon upon it as permanent.

IX and 11, Opium.—Revenue less £948,000; Expenditure less £469,000; Net Revenue less £479,000: Net Revenue £6,000,000. The Estimates and Accounts of late years have been as follows:— Budget Estimates, 1878

			NUMBER OF CHESTS			NET REVENUE.
			* Sold at Calcutta.	Paid duty for export from Bombay.	TOTAL.	Estimated.	Obtained.
1874-75	45,000	49,561	94,561	5,500,000	6,215,083
1875-76	45,510	41,804	87,314	5,750,000	6,252,860
1876-77	47,210	49,786	97,026	6,000,000	6,280,813
1877-78	49,500	44,000	93,500	6,250,000	6,479,000
1878-79	55,500	27,500	83,000	6,000,000	...

It has been already stated that, owing to the drought, the present harvest in Malwa is likely to fail to such an extent that local authorities expect less than half a crop. This explains the low estimate of chests for export from Bombay. Under the circumstances, the Government has advertised 60,000 chests of Bengal Opium for sale in the calendar year 1879, being 6,000 chests more than the provision of 1878. It has seemed prudent to reduce the Estimate of Net Opium Revenue below the standard of 1877-78, which was the highest recent Estimate; but it is hoped that, notwithstanding the failure in Malwa, at least £6,000,000 of net revenue will be obtained. The crop in the Bengal Presidency is reported to be also deficient, while the reduction of the price paid to the cultivators will tell throughout the year, instead of during half the year only as in 1877-78; so that the expenditure is likely to be less than during the last two years.

X and 12, Stamps.—Revenue less £8,000; Expenditure more £21,000: Net Revenue less £29,000: Net Revenue £2,867,000. The excess expenditure is for stores at Home. In view of the exceptional cause for an improvement of £50,000 in Bengal in 1877-78, it has seemed imprudent to estimate for any further growth of the Revenue.

XI and 13, Mint.—Revenue less £260,000; Expenditure less £22,000: Net Revenue less £247,000: Net Revenue £10,000.

The great influx of silver bullion in 1877-78 is doubtless, to a great extent, due to the large sums that it has been necessary to borrow: the same cause will not, it is hoped, be in operation next year, and there is no reason to expect that the imports of silver will be repeated upon their recent scale.

XXVII, Provincial Contributions.—Revenue less £8,000. This Head disappears owing to the incorporation of the Local Funds in the General Accounts.

EXPENDITURE.

1, 2, and XVII, Interest.—Expenditure more £175,000; Revenue more £26,000: Net Expenditure more £149,000; Net Expenditure £5,719,000. Provision is made for a full year's interest on the amounts borrowed and lent during the current year and for the loan operations of the coming year; also for the usual increase of payments to the Civil Service Funds.

3, Refunds.—Expenditure more £36,000. The entry under this Head in 1877-78 is unusually small. The grant for next year (£324,000) is for the normal amount, including £17,400 from the Local Funds now incorporated.

4, Land Revenue.—Increase £392,000; £443,700 is incorporated for payments to village officers, heretofore recorded under Local Funds. The balance of decrease is owing to settlement operations diminishing in the North-Western Provinces, and because some famine expenditure fell upon this Head in Bombay in 1877-78.

14 and XXII, Post Office.—Expenditure more £11,000; Revenue more £31,000; Net Expenditure more £10,000; Net Expenditure £72,000, of which £33,200 is Expenditure for the District Posts, heretofore recorded under Local Funds. If all things be considered, this Estimate is the most favorable ever presented.

15 and XXIII, Telegraph.—Expenditure more £31,000; Revenue less £4,000; Net Revenue less £35,000. The same Grant of Net £180,000, which was made for this year, has been repeated for next year.

17, Minor Departments.—Expenditure more £226,000, of which £215,000 has been hitherto recorded under Local Funds; the rest is for some increase in the cost of Horse-breeding Operations chiefly for military purposes.

Budget Estimates, 1878-79. 18 and XIV, Law and Justice.—Expenditure more £16,000; Revenue more £8,000; Net Expenditure more £8,000; Net Expenditure £2,461,000. The Expenditure this year is affected by the Famine.

19 and XV, Police.—Expenditure more £244,000; Revenue less £7,000; Net Expenditure more £251,000, of which £244,600 is imported from Local Funds.

20 and XVI, Marine.—Expenditure more £30,000; Revenue less £35,000; Net Expenditure more £65,000; Net Expenditure £373,000. As has already been explained, the Revenue collected at Calcutta this year was exceptional; the increase next year is for the construction of a Steam-vessel for the Marine Surveys.

21 and XVII, Education.—Expenditure more £290,000; Revenue more £1,000; Net Expenditure more £289,000; imported from Local Funds £276,500.

23, Medical.—Expenditure more £42,000; imported from Local Funds £66,100. The saving is in Bengal, where the Local Government is taking vigorous measures to enforce economy.

24, Stationery and Printing.—Expenditure less £11,000; the Expenditure in 1877-78 was swollen by the Famine.

25, Political.—Expenditure less £31,000. The reduction is in England, where several exceptional items caused an abnormal expenditure this year.

26 and XIX, Superannuations.—Expenditure less £14,000; Revenue less £22,000; Net Expenditure more £8,000; a normal increase to the grant, which may, perhaps, prove too small. The gross figures this year are swollen by the retirement of the junior subscribers to the Bombay Medical Retiring Fund.

29 and XX, Exchange.—Expenditure more £1,384,000. Revenue less £1,000. Net Expenditure more £1,383,000.

The sum of £17,000,000 must be remitted in 1878-79 for the supply of the Home Treasury; it is estimated that this will cost Rs. 20,00,00,000, being at the rate of 1s. 8½d. The rate for the adjustment of transactions between the Indian and Imperial Governments has been fixed by the Secretary of State at 1s. 9d.

30 and XXI, Miscellaneous.—Expenditure more £76,000; Revenue less £77,000. Imported from Local Funds £93,300. *The decrease of Revenue is chiefly at the Home Treasury, where there have been exceptional receipts in 1877-78.

31, Famine Relief.—The Government of Madras estimates that £500,000 may be spent in 1878-79 on famine operations.

32, The Army.—Expenditure less £636,000; Revenue less £17,000; Net Expenditure less £619,000. Net Grant £14,905,000. Of this considerable saving, £225,100 (net) is in India and the rest is in England. The extra cost of the Army attributed to the Famine this year is £200,000; for next year it is only £55,000; this accounts for £145,000 of the saving in India; the rest is due to the expenditure having been swollen this year by other exceptional causes. The saving at the Home Treasury is entirely in Stores, the Grant for expenditure on Stores being much lower than has been usual lately.

34 and XXIII, Public Works, Ordinary.—Expenditure more £1,839,000; Revenue less £10,000; Net Expenditure more £1,849,000; transferred from Local Funds £1,401,000. Of the remaining £448,000, a considerable sum is nominal, owing to the adjustment of the Expenditure in 1877-78 in connection with the Famine as already described. £189,900 is in Bengal, the Lieutenant-Governor having determined to spend some of the balances at credit of his Government; this amount is balanced by a corresponding entry on the Revenue side under Provincial Deficits: £70,800 is in the Imperial Expenditure, including provision for a costly dredger for the harbour at Kurrachee.

35 and XXV, Guaranteed Railways.—Expenditure less £154,000; Revenue less £965,000; Net Expenditure more £811,000; Net Expenditure by the Accounts £94,000. True Net Expenditure, as shewn in the Table in the Review of the Regular Estimates, £935,000, or £926,000 more than this year.

It does not seem safe to count upon a repetition next year of the signal prosperity of the current year. The estimate is for a less favourable result than that obtained even in 1876-77, when the net cost to the State was £714,384; but, in that year, only £296,000 was surrendered to the Companies as Surplus Profits, whereas in 1878-79 the Government expect to pay £641,900 as such profits.

36 and XXVI, State Railways.—Revenue more £430,000; Expenditure more £298,000; Net Revenue better £132,000, which seems moderate, considering the large capital expenditure that is being incurred.

38, Productive Public Works.—Net loss £322,000, the expenditure this year having been accidentally swollen by the Famine; indeed, the Government of India can hardly undertake with confidence to provide yearly even 4½ millions for expenditure on Productive

Public Works. Of the whole grant, £4,555,000, £3,555,000 will be spent upon Railways and £1,000,000 on Canals, as follows:—

Thus, again, the comparatively unproductive expenditure mounts up to the large sum of £1,169,000. The Public Works Department estimate that there still remains to be spent on these works as follows:—

Western Jumna Re-alignment ...	286,000
Indus Valley Railway ...	700,000
Punjab Northern ...	680,000
Total ...	1,666,000

When this is spent, the cost of these works will have been as follows:—

	£
Western Jumna Re-alignment ...	955,000
Indus Valley Railway ...	6,310,000
Punjab Northern Railway ...	2,900,000
Total ...	11,175,000

XXIV and 34, Irrigation.—Revenue more £13,000; Expenditure more £14,000; Net Revenue more £29,000; Net Revenue £80,000. The improvement is in Bengal, where the Soane Canals are expected to yield increased revenue.

XXVIII and 37, Provincial Deficits and Surpluses.—The Provincial Governments are expected to incur a net deficit of £238,000; that is to say, they will expend that sum out of their balances; this amount will appear in the General Account under the appropriate Heads of Services, and must be made good by the Provincial Governments, whose payment to the Imperial Treasury will appear under this Head.

It remains now only to speak of the Estimates of Ways and Means for WAYS AND MEANS the service of 1878-79. The little abstract in the right hand corner of Statement No. IV shows that, besides the deficit of Revenue which, as has been seen, is estimated at £2,399,000, the Government is called upon to provide for the repayment to the extinct Military Funds of the sum of £281,000 for which credit is taken as Revenue; to find £600,000 net for advances to Native States, Municipalities, Port Trusts, &c.; and, lastly, to repay £1,000,000 Railway Capital to the Guaranteed Companies. Thus the net requirements of the year in excess of the Revenue amount to £4,280,000. Towards meeting this demand the Government is prepared to submit to a reduction by £1,500,000 of the Public Balance, and to content itself with an estimated balance on the 31st March 1879 of only £14,500,000, viz., £13,069,200 in India and £1,430,800 in the Home Treasury. The amount is rather small, but if the year is prosperous it may turn out to be larger. Some anticipated petty receipts raise the expected assets of the Government, including the £1,500,000 taken from the balances, to £1,780,000; there remains still wanting £2,500,000; and for this sum resort must probably be had to the money market during the year. The Government is not at present prepared to announce how, or when, or where it will invite subscriptions for this sum.

The Estimates of 1878-79 thus show a surplus on the ordinary account of £2,156,000, or omitting the credit of £281,000, from the Military Funds, which, as has just been said, must first be borrowed before it is credited as Revenue, a surplus of £1,875,000. The expected arrears of land revenue, £671,000, exceed by £116,000 the £555,000 which is provided on account of the Famine. Deducting this sum, the net surplus becomes £1,759,000. There is, happily, no deduction to be made in respect of the loan operations of the year; for provision is made upon the estimates for the remittance in full of all the requirements of the Home Treasury. So far, it would seem that, besides supplying the whole £1,500,000 wanted for Famine insurance, a surplus of £259,000 remains. But it must be once more remarked that of the £4,555,000 set down for Productive Public Works, £1,169,000 is allotted for works which do not in fact comply with the condition of being truly productive. These dead-weight obligations are now, however, approaching liquidation. Of the whole estimated cost of the Frontier Line, of Railway and the re-alignment of the Western Jumna Canal (£11,175,000) there will remain, it is hoped, after the end of 1878-79, only £1,666,000 to spend. Meanwhile, it is clear that, favorable in many respects as the present Estimates appear, the country has not been required by the measures of taxation recently adopted to make any unnecessary sacrifices for the Public Weal.

In an appendix will be found some interesting Financial and Commercial Statistics illustrating the economical history and condition of India during the period covered by this Statement.

By order of His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General in Council.

R. B. CHAPMAN,

Secretary to the Government of India.

FORT WILLIAM,
The 13th March 1878.

APPENDIX A.

Extract from speech by the HON'BLE SIR JOHN STRACHEY, in the Legislative Council of the Governor General of India, on the 9th February 1878.

A desire has been expressed that I would explain more fully, than has hitherto been done, the manner in which the Government proposes to apply the proceeds of these new taxes. I shall, I feel certain, be very readily able to do this to the satisfaction of the Council, for nothing can be clearer than the principles on which the Government proposes to act.

I can hardly do better, in the first place, than ask the Council to look at the brief official Statement of Objects and Reasons, which was published with the new Taxation Bills when they were first introduced. That Statement explained, in a few words, the reasons for these measures. It was said that the necessity was imposed upon the Government of India of bringing the public revenues and expenditure into a state of proper equilibrium; that famines could no longer be treated as exceptional calamities; and that the obligations entailed by them must be provided for among the ordinary charges of the State. The periodical occurrence of famine must, therefore, enter into the calculation of the Government in making provision for its ordinary yearly wants, and such a surplus of ordinary income over expenditure must be provided in each year of prosperity, as would make a sensible impression on the debt which it might be necessary to incur in times of famine. To enable the Government, it was said, to meet these obligations, additional taxation was necessary.

The object which I thus stated is a perfectly simple one. These new taxes are required for the sole purpose of giving us, year by year, a sufficient surplus of income over expenditure to meet these famine charges, which had not hitherto been taken into consideration in our yearly accounts. It seems to have been supposed by some that the primary object of the Government of India was to give to the Local Governments the proceeds of these new taxes, and to transfer to them, in some mysterious manner, certain indefinite obligations in relation to the future charges arising from famine. There could be no greater mistake, and I am sure that I have never said anything to justify it. These great calamities can only be met by aid of the resources of the Government of India, and it is these resources that must be strengthened to meet the obligations they impose. Although then, as I shall presently explain, we shall use the Local Governments as our agents in levying these taxes, their proceeds will mainly go into the Imperial Treasury. With their help we hope to secure that surplus revenue, which will enable us in the future to discharge the heavy obligations which the periodical occurrence of famine entails upon the country, without being driven into the fatal course of constantly increasing the public debt, and the burden it involves.

As I previously explained, we start with the hypothesis, that in every ten years the Government of India will have to spend £15,000,000 on the relief of famine. The case will be put into its simplest form, if we assume that the whole of the £15,000,000 will have to be spent at once at the end of this period, and the arguments I am about to use will not be in any way invalidated by this assumption, though it be not strictly true. Now, as the very foundation of our policy is the resolution not to permit this expenditure to create a constantly increasing charge for interest, the expedient of simply borrowing when the occasion occurs, and thus increasing the annual charges on account of debt, say, by £600,000 in each period of ten years must, of course, be set aside; and it follows that we can only obtain the £15,000,000 which we require by saving up an equivalent sum in years of prosperity. If we provide for this purpose a bona fide surplus of £1,500,000 a year for ten years, we shall have obtained our £15,000,000.

As we cannot keep our annual savings locked up in a separate box, it is inevitable that when the actual necessity for spending the £15,000,000 arrives, we shall have to borrow the money, so that what we have practically to do is this—we must reduce our debt by £1,500,000 year by year during the whole period, or by £15,000,000 in the ten years, thereby reducing the yearly charge for interest at the end of that time by £600,000. Then, when the necessity for spending the £15,000,000 arrives, we can borrow that amount and incur a fresh charge for interest of £600,000 a year, and be no worse off than we were ten years before. This process, by which in periods of prosperity the charge for interest on debt is gradually reduced, thus constantly restoring the exhausted power of borrowing without increased taxation, is what the Government virtually proposes to adopt.

In India, however, the policy has been deliberately and wisely accepted of borrowing every year large sums of money for the construction of the railways and canals which it is absolutely necessary that the country should possess if its material advancement is not to be arrested. Even if the financial consequences of this policy had been less satisfactory than they have been, it might still have been our duty to persevere in it, though it should have called for increased sacrifices from the country in the form of taxation. But experience has shown beyond the shadow of a doubt that, looking at the matter even from a purely financial point of view, we could have done nothing wiser and more profitable than go on investing capital in these undertakings; and that so long as these investments are prudently limited, as they have been up to the present time, so that the growing income derived from the works keeps pace with the charge for interest on the borrowed funds, they may be continued with complete financial safety.

It was on considerations such as these that Lord Lawrence in 1869, in his minute on Railway extension, assuming that the revenues could, without objection, bear a yearly charge of about 1½ millions, to meet the interest on Capital outlay on productive works in course of construction, &c., during the period in which their income is become developed, based his proposals for the gradual, but systematic, prosecution of this class of works, and that the Government of India has been since acting with most satisfactory results. The forecasts relating to the extraordinary expenditure on Railways and Irrigation Works that have from time to time been prepared in the Public Works Department have supplied sufficient evidence of the prudence with which this part of our financial policy has been conducted, and it is only necessary to follow the same principles in the future to ensure equally sound results.

The truth of these remarks can readily be established. In the first place, the net charge for the interest on the Guaranteed Railway Capital which was upwards of 1½ millions sterling in 1870-71, was reduced by the growth of the income to less than £300,000 in 1876-77, while in the present financial year, partly no doubt from the increased famine traffic, the interest will be more than covered. And though next year quite so good a result cannot be anticipated, it is certain that in these six years a net improvement of more than 1½ millions has been secured for the public revenues by reason of these works. During the same period the total expenditure on State Railways has reached a sum involving a gross charge for interest now amounting to £700,000, against which we already have a net income of £300,000 yearly, leaving a net charge of £400,000. The Irrigation Works carried out in the same years have led to an increase of interest charge of £400,000 set off by an increased net income of £200,000, leaving a net charge of £200,000. On the whole, setting off the increased charge of £600,000 against the improved income of 1½ millions, the general result is an improved financial position of £600,000 a year, notwithstanding the large investments made in the new works, a considerable part of which is necessarily not yet productive, though it is rapidly becoming so.

The same general result is plainly indicated otherwise by the fact that the total charge for Interest on Debt of all sorts and Guaranteed Railway Capital is in the present year less than the charge in 1870-71 by about 2 millions, to which sum should be added the net increase of income due to Public Works, amounting, say, to £500,000, to show the improvement in the general financial position, which, if not directly due to the prosecution of these works, has, at all events, been consistent with a continued average expenditure upon them of hardly less than 4 millions a year. It must also be remembered that these results have been secured during a period in which very exceptional seasons of scarcity have occurred, involving charges of some 16 millions sterling.

We assume, therefore, that the Government will continue to borrow money on these principles for such productive works.

Now, it would be obviously absurd to pay off every year debt to the amount of £1,500,000, and simultaneously to incur fresh debt to the same extent. What, therefore, we have to do in the actual circumstances of the case, is, by applying to the construction of these works the proceeds of the new taxes, to reduce by £1,500,000 a year, the sum which we might otherwise have borrowed. The ultimate financial result of this, as will readily be seen, will be practically the same as that which would have followed if we had devoted every year £1,500,000 to the actual repayment of debt. For returning to our former hypothesis, we shall, at the end of our ten years, thus have prevented borrowing to the extent of £15,000,000, and our annual charge for interest will then be less by £600,000 a year than it would otherwise have been. We could, therefore, if occasion required, borrow £15,000,000 for the relief of famine, and be in no worse a financial position than we were at the beginning of the period of ten years.

The soundness of this argument depends, of course, on the assumption that the works which are constructed from our annual contribution of £1,500,000 from the public revenues will be really reproductive, that is, that they will at the end of the ten years produce an income at least equal to the interest which we should have to pay if we had then to replace by borrowing a sum equal to that furnished from the new taxes for their construction. This assumption, however, has no special or peculiar significance in connection with these new arrangements; it is (as I have just explained) the justification of our whole policy of borrowing money for works of public improvement. Whether we construct our railways and canals with borrowed capital, or pay for them out of this famine insurance fund, we equally assume that they will eventually give us a return of more than the ordinary charge for interest on the outlay: and to repeat what I had said before, experience has now been sufficiently prolonged to show conclusively that, notwithstanding all the mistakes that have been made, the gradual growth of the income of the productive public works has been sufficient to protect the Imperial Treasury against any increase to the actual charge for interest on debt. This explanation will show the Council how, either by the direct discharge of debt, or by the investment of money in productive works, if the circumstances of the time should render that course most suitable, charges on the revenue may be extinguished, or new income created, which shall enable the Government to borrow in the future to the full extent to which the proceeds of the new taxes are applied, and that a true famine insurance fund will thus have been created.

a return showing, in as great detail as can be given, the amount of revenue received under each article (not merely each group of articles) specified in the Tariff.

2. An examination of the monthly statements of the trade of British India from November 1875 to October 1876, that is for twelve months after the Tariff Act of 1875 came into operation, shows the receipts from the duty on the importation of a large number of articles to have been those given in the margin. In drawing the attention of Your Excellency to this return, I feel it necessary to say that I have observed with some surprise the long list of articles still retained on the Indian Tariff, the duties derived from which are actually not worth collecting. There are, doubtless, special reasons for the maintenance of the duty on opium; and with regard to a few of the minor articles which have been already removed from the Tariff, I presume that the amount received is in payment of duty incurred before the Tariff Act came into force. Without, however, entering into these considerations, and speaking generally, there appears to be no possible room for doubt as to the inexpediency of retaining on the Import Tariff the few articles which individually yield less than Rs. 10, or the 14 articles yielding each less than Rs. 100, or the 17 articles yielding less than Rs. 1,000; and some question may arise even as to the 25 articles, none of which give so much as Rs. 5,000. There is also an unspecified number of "other" unmanufactured articles, together bringing in a receipt of Rs. 452. The whole amount at stake in excluding these 65 or 70 articles would be Rs. 84,592, or less than £8,500.

3. I consequently request that this subject may receive Your Excellency's attention, and that at a convenient time the propriety of excluding from the Tariff items that will not be productive of revenue may be considered.

APPENDIX C.

No. 124 (Statistics and Commerce), dated India Office, London, 23rd August 1877.

From—Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India,

To—The Government of India.

IN continuation of my despatch, dated the 31st of May 1876, No. 9 (Separate Revenue),

* Dated 27th June 1877.

† Dated 6th July 1877.

I forward a copy of a memorial* from the Council of the East India Association, and of a reply† thereto by Mr. Raynsford Jackson on behalf of the Associated Committees of Employers and Workmen in the cotton manufacturing districts, respecting the abolition of the duties on the importation of cotton goods and yarns into India.

2. Your Excellency is well aware of the great importance attached by Her Majesty's Government to the gradual reduction of these duties at the earliest period that is not inconsistent with the financial requirements of your administration.

Dated Westminster, 27th June 1877.

To—The MOST HONOURABLE THE MARQUIS OF SALISBURY, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India in Council.

The Memorial of the Council of the East India Association

MOST RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH.—That great anxiety appears to exist in the minds of a large number of the natives of India in respect to the persistent endeavours which are being made by a very influential body in England to obtain from the Government the abolition, at the earliest possible period, of the 5 per cent. ad valorem duty now levied in India on the importation of cotton goods.

That the only arguments adduced in favour of the abolition are, that the duty in question is, in its nature, a protective duty, and that its abolition would therefore be a boon to the people of India at large in their capacity of consumers of British cotton goods.

That it has recently been shown, however, in a very able letter addressed by Mr. Soorabjee Shapoyee Bengallee, a member of the Legislative Council of Bombay, to the Viceroy, that the cotton goods of India and those of England have so little in common, that it is only to an almost inappreciable extent that they can come at all into competition with each other, the whole of the cotton goods of Manchester, with very trifling exceptions, being above all effective rivalry at the hands of the Indian manufacturer, while the cotton goods turned out by the latter, owing to their comparative coarseness and cheapness, are for the most part outside the range of competition on the part of Manchester. The only real competition that exists appears to be a competition between the mill-owners of India and the hand-loom weavers there.

There being thus no appreciable competition between the cotton goods of Manchester and those of India respectively, the whole argument, based on the allegation that the import duty levied in India is a protective duty, of course falls to the ground, and this has been clearly admitted by the Tariff Committee appointed by the Government of India. It would, indeed, be difficult so to characterise, under any circumstances, so small a duty as a 5 per cent. ad valorem duty—an amount not very greatly in excess of that retained on the importation of corn into Great Britain when the corn laws were abolished.

That with the argument based on the charge that the duty is a protective duty, there also falls to the ground the argument based on the assumption that the remission of the duty would be a boon to the people of India at large in their capacity of consumers of Manchester cotton goods. For nothing can be clearer than that, Manchester having the command of the Indian market so far as its own products are concerned, the greater part of the duty so remitted would find its way into the pockets of the Manchester mill-owners in the shape of additional profits, and not, in the shape of lower prices, into the pockets of the consumers in India.

That this will probably not be denied by the Manchester advocates of the abolition of the duty, the proposition being self-evident. Indeed, it would be but a poor compliment to their well known intelligence to suppose that they would take all the trouble they are taking, and have taken, for the purpose of forcing on the people of India a measure which the latter do not want, and wholly fail to appreciate, unless they were themselves to reap some substantial benefit from it.

That the case being as stated, it appears to your memorialists that, even if the finances of India were in so flourishing a condition that a sacrifice could be made of the £800,000 sterling per annum which this duty amounts to, there could still be no valid reason for selecting for abolition a duty than which none, in their opinion, could be more legitimate.

That, in support of this assertion, they would beg to remind Your Lordship that the state of things which enables Manchester to find a market for its goods in India to so vast an extent as is indicated by the duty, viz., £16,000,000 sterling worth annually, has not been brought about without an immense expenditure by the Government and the people of India, expenditure in the shape of harbours and roads, police, and well-ordered legal tribunals, protection from external attack, and the maintenance of internal order, the development, to a high degree of the country's resources, and the numberless other items which it were needless to go on enumerating. Of all this expenditure, the Manchester mill-owner who sends his goods to India reaps his full share of the benefit in the shape of the secure and extensive market thus provided for him there, while, if it were not for this trifling duty levied on his fabrics, he would absolutely contribute nothing whatever towards it.

That your memorialists think it very natural that the natives of India should, under these circumstances, be so strongly opposed to the abolition of this duty, even if the finances of India were in such a condition as to enable the Government to dispense with the money it produces, but the finances of India being as they are, they have double reason to protest against a measure which would obviously necessitate the laying on them of new burthens.

That the burthens they have to bear, as it is, are very heavy, and in some instances, as, for example, the salt tax, may, without exaggeration, be called oppressive—a tax which not only presses very severely on the working classes of India generally, but is also very destructive to the cattle, which are the mainstay of the Indian cultivator, so much so, indeed, that it has been estimated by Europeans who have had practical experience as planters in India that the virtual prohibition of the use of salt as a cattle condiment, owing to its dearthness, occasioned by the enormous duty on it, has had much to do with the frequent murrains there that carry off the cattle by thousands, and give a blow to the agriculture of the districts affected which it requires years for them to recover from.

That besides this there are other imposts, though not of so objectionable a nature, the only valid excuse for the retention of which is the impossibility of doing without them; and your memorialists cannot therefore be surprised if the natives who have called their attention to this matter should oppose so strongly the selection of a duty for abolition which is in itself so fair a one, which represents all that is contributed to the Indian Exchequer by the English exporters thither of goods to the value of £16,000,000 sterling per annum, and which, if abolished, would necessitate the simultaneous imposition of new taxes of equal amount upon the already heavily-taxed people of India. To strip the matter of all confusing phraseology, it would be simply to take from the people of India £800,000 sterling per annum, in addition to what they already pay, in order to increase the profits on their Indian trade of the cotton manufacturer of Manchester.

That if the natives of India had any representation in Parliament, and more especially if they had any representation at all commensurate with their numbers, their importance, or the £50,000,000 sterling they pay into the Indian Treasury annually, they might safely be left to fight their own battles with Manchester in that assembly; but as it is, excluded as they are from all voice in the management of their own affairs, the case seems to be peculiarly one in which the greatest care and deliberation are requisite before coming to any final decision upon it; for nothing could be more deplorable than that a feeling should arise among them that their interests were sacrificed to the interests of Manchester, and the more powerful, politically and commercially, those interests are, the more important it seems to your memorialists that all ground should be taken away for the possible creation of any such impression.

That your memorialists venture to think that nothing could be more conducive to the avoidance of such a danger, than for the Government to institute a full and searching inquiry into the whole subject before coming to any final decision in regard to the policy to be pursued in respect of it. This might be done by means of a Commission impartially selected and sitting with open doors at Bombay—the chief seat of the British cotton trade with India, as well as of the Indian cotton manufacturing industry. Before it might be examined all the Natives who had any evidence to offer, as well as the European representatives of the great Manchester houses in India, and the result would be, doubtless, a mass of information which would effectually set the matter in its true light, and enable Your Lordship to arrive at a conclusion beyond the reach of cavil or question on either side.

Your memorialists, therefore, most respectfully pray that this, or some other equally satisfactory method, may be adopted, with a view of finally terminating an agitation which at any time would be most undesirable, but which is particularly so at a moment when it is of the utmost importance that England and India should be cordially, as well as politically, united.

And your memorialists will ever pray.

Dated Blackburn, 6th July 1877.

To—THE MOST HONOURABLE THE MARQUIS OF SALISBURY, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India in Council.

The Associated Committees of Employers and Workmen representing the Public Meetings held in the Cotton Manufacturing Districts, to secure the Abolition of the Indian Import Duties on Cotton Goods and Yarns.

MY LORD MARQUIS,—On behalf of the above Associations, I have the honour to ask your attention to the following answer to the memorial addressed to Your Lordship by the Council of the East India Association.

The argument of the memorial is based upon three assumptions. I shall endeavour to shew that all three are incorrect, and that consequently the memorial itself is a superstructure without solid foundation:—

The 1st is, that there is no appreciable competition between the cotton goods of Manchester and those of India respectively, and that “the only real competition that exists appears to be a competition between the mill-owners of India and the hand-loom weavers there.”

The 2nd, that a 5 per cent. duty is so small that it would be difficult to characterise it as a protective duty.

The 3rd, that a Commission sitting in India and taking the evidence of “Natives” and “European representatives of the great Manchester houses in India,” would be able to acquire such information as would “enable Your Lordship to arrive at a conclusion beyond the reach of cavil or question on either side.”

1st.—“That there is no appreciable competition between the cotton “goods of Manchester and those of India respectively,” &c., &c.

It seems probable that the India Association is ignorant of the existence of Your Lordship's Despatch to the Viceroy of India, dated the 31st May 1876, as it has made no attempt to answer the arguments advanced therein, but has repeated in almost synonymous terms the fallacies so effectually exposed. I cannot, therefore, do better than ask Your Lordship's re-perusal of paragraphs 23 to 36 of that Despatch. Paragraphs 23 and 24 shew, on the authority of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, that, comparing the three years 1858, 1859, and 1860 with the three years 1872, 1873, and 1874, a most serious decline had taken place in the British export to Bombay of the class of goods made in the Bombay mills concurrently with a very large increase in that of the finer goods not made in the Native mills.

These facts may be accepted as proving that there is a real competition between the productions of the English and Indian mills for the supply of coarse goods to India.

As regards the medium class of goods, which compose nearly two-thirds of our Indian exports, I admit that the Indian mills are not at present making them extensively, the reason being that they are fully employed in manufacturing the coarser fabrics, on which the transit charges and the duty tell the most heavily in favour of the Native manufacturer and against the importer. Their power to make these goods out of indigenous cotton has, however, been proved, and samples so made have been exhibited in England.

The English manufacturers, moreover, produced the medium, or shirting, class of goods out of Indian cotton without admixture with other growths, during the American war; and I have no hesitation in saying that when the factory industry of India has so extended as to over-supply the demand for coarse fabrics, the Native manufacturer will supplant the British in the supply of the Indian markets with the finer goods.

It is not unimportant that the same opinion has recently been given by an Indian manufacturer interested in more than one Indian mill.

2nd.—The statement that a 5 per cent. duty is so small that it would be difficult to characterise it as a protective duty is best met by shewing how it would affect an average-sized Bombay mill in competition with an English mill of the same size, presuming that British goods can be laid down in India minus the duty, and Native goods manufactured in India at the same price.

For this purpose I may take a mill of 30,000 spindles and 500 looms. The annual turnover will be about £70,000, which, at 5 per cent., is £3,500. Let the English mill-owner work for 30 years without profit, his Indian rival will have made out of the aid given by the duty £105,000, besides interest and compound interest.

I think, then, it will hardly be denied that 5 per cent. may be characterised as a protective duty.

3rd.—Of what nature is the evidence which the India Association would obtain by means of a committee from the "Natives" and "European representatives of the great Manchester houses in India?" Is it as to whether the duty is consistent with free trade principles? whether it has a protective operation? whether it is important enough in its pressure to merit the appellation of "protective?" whether the Indian Treasury can spare its amount? or whether the said Natives and European representatives will be dissatisfied and irritated if they cannot retain the bonus it confers in favour of their special investments?

I cannot think that we are without adequate light on all these points, and do not believe that anything stated by the gentlemen in question,—however disinterestedly solicitous they may be, exclusive of all considerations of personal advantage, to guard the Indian revenue, and to satisfy Indian sentiment,—would be regarded in the cotton textile districts as safe ground work for "a conclusion to be accepted as beyond the reach of cavil."

As for the assumption that we are to submit to this duty in order to pay our share of the expenses of Indian administration, I ask how such a claim is consistent with our own practice and conclusion derived from adhesion to the principles of free trade, that taxes are not to be imposed upon any article which enters into competition with any home production without being balanced by countervailing internal duties, the result being that many countries from which we import the most largely, as the United States, contribute very much less towards our customs revenue than others which, like China, avail themselves of our markets to a relatively small extent?

For the reasons above given, I respectfully solicit Your Lordship not to accede to the request of the India Association to appoint such a Commission as that suggested, the only and the evident consequence of which would be needless waste of time.

APPENDIX D.

No. 136 (Statistics and Commerce), dated India Office, London, 30th August 1877.

From—Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India,

To—The Government of India.

I TRANSMIT herewith a Resolution which was adopted by the House of Commons on the 11th July last, without a division, to the following effect:—

"That, in the opinion of this House, the duties now levied upon cotton manufactures imported into India, being protective in their nature, are contrary to sound commercial policy, and ought to be repealed without delay so soon as the financial condition of India will permit."

APPENDIX E.

No. 4192, dated Calcutta, the 14th December 1877.

From—A. MACKENZIE, Esq., Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal, Financial Dept.,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Financial Department.

I AM directed to acknowledge receipt of Financial Resolution No. 2506, dated the 8th instant, asking for an immediate report on the working of the orders of March last, extending the Financial powers and responsibilities of local Governments. The Government of India admit that it is not possible for any local Government as yet to express a mature or final judgment on the effects and tendencies of such important changes. All that is asked for is a general opinion on the working of the scheme, based upon the experience already gained, and an estimate of the probability or otherwise of the local Government being able to fulfil its engagements in the current year. Special information is also requested with reference to recent measures of provincial taxation and any other similar measures now in contemplation.

2. Dealing first with the question of Provincial Services, I am to say that the Lieutenant-Governor has only at present before him accounts showing the actual expenditure of 1876-77, and Accountant-General's consolidated abstract of receipts and disbursements for the first six months of the current year. In the regular estimate for 1876-77 it was assumed that the closing balances of that year would probably stand thus—

					Rs.
Under Provincial Services	17,692
Ditto	Reserve	1,03,027
Total					1,50,719

Owing partly to the fact that the outlay was less and the receipts greater than had been anticipated, and partly to faulty preparation of the regular estimate itself, the actual closing balance has turned out to be better than the estimated by seven lakhs of rupees, and stands thus—

					Rs.
Under Provincial Services	2,88,146
Ditto	Reserve	5,62,130
Total					8,50,576

3. The following statement shows the receipts of the first six months of the current year under all the main heads of Service, as compared with the receipts during the corresponding period of last year :—

Provincial Services.	Six months' Receipts.
	1877-78.	1876-77
	Rs.	Rs.
Land Revenue	50,876	34,505
Excise	36,06,910	31,91,609
Customs	32,542	26,998
Salt	1,15,355	1,19,797
Stamps	62,14,967	51,11,681
Law and Justice	3,74,259	4,03,231
Jails	3,15,779	2,69,305
Registration	3,53,284	3,04,854
Police	38,905	29,283
Marine	6,31,576	4,44,049
Education	2,78,715	2,43,532
Medical	76,313	53,117
Printing	30,592	31,650
Miscellaneous	1,34,241	1,76,069
Public Works	40,025	19,117
Cash recoveries	9,963	6,633
Total Provincial Service Receipts	1,23,04,300	1,04,65,490

This shows an improvement in Receipts of Rs. 18,38,810. (In the above Statement the Imperial allotment is for obvious reasons not treated as a receipt for purposes of comparison.)

4. The Excise revenue has shown remarkable improvement, attributable no doubt to the general prosperity of the country, and to increased attention paid to this branch of the revenue on the part of district officers. If the receipts in the last six months of the year bear the same ratio to the receipts of the first half as has been usual in former years, the revenue under this head may very probably be close upon 70 lakhs of rupees. Steps are being taken to secure this, and even a higher revenue, by the reorganization of the excise arrangements throughout the country, by more energetic efforts to suppress illicit distillation, by reforms in the matter of gauja, by raising the prices of excise opium, and by more careful local inspection by selected officers, and more vigorous administration in every branch of the department.

5. The Stamp revenue has also so far shown an abnormal development, attributable in the early months of the year to the operations under the Land Registration Act. But as nearly 4 lakhs out of the gross improvement of 11 lakhs shown in the table were realized in the month of September, and that mainly under Court Fee stamps, there is good ground for supposing that the revenue of the first half of the year has been unduly swelled by a rush of suits filed in anticipation of the expiry of the old Civil Procedure Code on the 30th September. The gross stamp revenue of the year cannot be expected to be 22 lakhs better than that of 1876-77. It will be satisfactory if, in the remaining months of the year, it even maintains the same figure as in the corresponding months of last year. Certain changes have, however, been introduced by the new Civil Procedure Code, which are likely to cause serious loss to the revenue until the new Stamp Bill becomes law, e. g., the exemption from stamp of certificates of sale hitherto stamped as conveyances.

6. Under the head of 'Miscellaneous,' the receipts of the first six months are no criterion of the year's income, inasmuch as the large balances of unclaimed deposits are not credited to Government in the accounts until the close of the year. There is no reason to believe that the receipts under this head will eventually fall short of the estimate (Rs. 8,91,600), though only Rs. 1,34,241 were credited in the first six months.

7. The remaining heads do not call for special remark. Jail manufactures are doing well; registration receipts show a considerable improvement; and the great development of the rice trade during the past year has sent up pilotage receipts. There are, of course, in all these departments corresponding increases of charge; but the balance on the whole is largely in favour of Government.

8. Turning now to the Expenditure side of the account, I am to say that it is impossible to give a complete return of expenditure during the six months owing to the necessary delay in the adjustment of public works charges. The Accountant-General's figures are, however, shown for all the main heads in the following table:—

Provincial Services.				Six months' Disbursements.
				1877-78. Rs.	1876-77. Rs.
Refunds	3,16,520	2,92,444
Land Revenue	12,25,869	12,26,015
Excise	1,55,677	1,73,535
Customs	3,55,302	3,55,908
Salt	19,167	23,459
Stamps	1,34,648	1,26,863
Administration	6,89,727	6,84,586
Minor Departments	1,28,483	1,28,550
Law and Justice	30,87,324	33,27,967
Jails	7,85,968	7,97,689
Registration	2,43,894	2,36,142
Police	20,38,863	19,42,170
Marine	4,87,753	4,26,345
Education	11,95,423	12,38,120
Ecclesiastical	4,037	3,888
Medical	5,89,662	6,80,654
Stationery and Printing	1,70,940	1,41,776
Office Rent, Rates, and Taxes	83,908	75,897
Miscellaneous	93,014	1,07,334
Public Works (Ordinary)	7,66,487	4,80,219
Cash Recoveries	9,963	6,633
Total				1,25,32,624	1,24,76,125

9. It will be seen that in the majority of headings the expenditure, so far from showing any tendency to grow, is actually somewhat less than in the corresponding period of last year; and although the public works expenditure is relatively more, this is in fact merely an accident of account. The outlay on public works will almost certainly be well within budget limits. In the uncertainty felt as to the effect of the revised financial arrangements, the Lieutenant-Governor has enforced a very general and strict economy.

10. The receipts under Provincial Reserve also show satisfactory progress. Excluding the income from Provincial Public Works Cess, they stand at a total of Rs. 6,80,277 against Rs. 5,83,988 in the corresponding six months of last year; while the expenditure was only Rs. 2,75,337, against Rs. 4,17,728.

11. In the arrangements made by your letter of the 29th March last for the transfer of additional services to this Government, the receipts and the disbursements were generally calculated on the basis of the regular estimates of 1876-77. The chief exceptions to this procedure were that in Excise 64 lakhs of rupees were taken as the receipts against 63 lakhs estimated for 1876-77, the normal rate of increase being assumed to be one lakh annually; while in "Stamps" and "Law and Justice" the normal rate of increase was assumed to be 2½ lakhs per annum, and the revenue for 1877-78 was taken at 105½ lakhs. From the consolidated assignment thus ascertained a lump deduction of Rs. 5,90,000 was made. Thus, apart from minor items of profit or loss, the Local Government has to find in 1877-78 a sum of Rs. 9,65,000 over and above the receipts of 1876-77.

12. On the whole, the Lieutenant-Governor believes that, if there be no unforeseen and serious falling off in the remaining months of the year, he will have no difficulty in meeting the liabilities of this Government in the matter of Provincial Services. The opening balance has proved to be so much better than was expected, and the growth of the Stamp and Excise revenue has been so much larger than was hoped, while the expenditure has been kept so fairly within budget limits, that Mr. Eden has no doubt about this Government being able to discharge its ordinary obligations in the current year.

13. In addition to these, however, this Government was made responsible for meeting the charges on account of Extraordinary Public Works (Railways and Irrigation Canals). The charges so transferred were estimated to amount to about 27½ lakhs of rupees. To meet this demand the Provincial Public Works Cess was imposed under Act II (B.C.) of 1877. This Act did not come into force until the 13th June last, and the Government of India, recognizing the fact that only three quarters' tax at most could be collected under it during the current financial year, reduced the contribution payable by the Government of Bengal for Irrigation Works and State Railways to 20 lakhs of rupees. The first instalment of the cess fell due on the 28th September, and it appears from the Accountant-General's returns that only Rs. 4,66,560 were paid into the treasuries during the quarter ending on that day. This normal demand for the quarter is about 7½ lakhs, so that the collections are far below the proper standard. There were, no doubt, difficulties in getting all the notices required by the Act, on its first introduction, duly served; and as failure to pay these cesses is not attended with the same penalties as attach to default under the Revenue Sale Law, their realization is always likely to be in arrear of quarter day. The Board have been directed to urge upon district officers the importance of prompt collection, and if it is found eventually that the financial position is at all endangered by these difficulties in collection, the law must be amended so as to make the payment of the cesses with the land revenue absolutely compulsory. In the meanwhile the Lieutenant-Governor cannot guarantee that he will be able to provide 20 lakhs of rupees for the purpose of meeting the interest charges for State Railways and Canals out of the proceeds of the cess in the current year. But he may be able to discharge his obligations otherwise, if the improvement in the ordinary Service receipts continues to the end of the year. It is, however, very important that this Government should have a reasonably large working balance in hand. It is impossible to carry on the Government with efficiency and a due regard to improvement in administration if there is not a reasonably large surplus available after satisfying the demands of the Imperial Government. The Lieutenant-Governor has before him many necessary and useful projects which ought to be undertaken, and would be undertaken, were funds available; but for the present he is compelled to proceed with great caution in the matter of expenditure, and has not been able to make that use of his improved revenue that he would have liked.

14. In paragraph 4 of Mr. Reynolds' letter No. 875, dated 24th March, the sanction of the Government of India was asked to the introduction of a Bill for imposing a compulsory water-rate upon all lands protected or irrigated by the canals which have been constructed in Behar, Orissa, and Midnapore. Such a Bill was subsequently laid before the Bengal Legislative Council, its chief features being that it made all irrigable lands liable to the payment of a rate not exceeding Rs. 2 per acre, and all lands protected from flood by flood-embankments (if not irrigable) liable to a rate not exceeding 8 annas per acre. These rates were as a general principle to be payable by the cultivator, the zemindar being made responsible for collecting them and handing them over to Government. The duty of constructing and maintaining village channels was thrown upon the occupiers of land, under the supervision of the owner thereof. Remission of rates was to be allowed in cases where Government might fail to supply sufficient water or to maintain adequate embankments.

15. The Bill as published evoked much hostile criticism, and numerous petitions from landholders and others taking exception both to its principles and details were referred to the Select Committee of Council which sat upon the measure. The Committee found that they had not before them sufficient information to enable them to deal satisfactorily with these representations; and it was eventually determined to postpone further consideration of it until local enquiry should have been made both in Behar and Orissa with reference to various matters of fundamental importance. The duty of directing these enquiries was undertaken by Mr. T. E. Ravenshaw, Member of the Board of Revenue, who had charge of the Bill, assisted by Mr. G. Toynee, Officiating Collector of Cuttack. Eventually it was proposed by these officers to abandon the attempt to impose a rate upon protected lands not being irrigable, to eliminate all questions of embankments from the Bill altogether, and to introduce the compulsory rate upon irrigable lands only when it could be shown (1) that all such lands in the villages affected had been surveyed, and that field maps and schedules of holdings existed in respect of such lands; (2) that canal water had been brought to some points within the boundary of each village whence all the irrigable lands could be commanded; (3) that a full supply of canal water would be available for some part of the year for at least one crop grown on all the lands within the village; and (4) that adequate means of drainage existed for such lands.

16. The Bill in this shape would be merely supplementary to Act VII (B.C.) of 1876, and would be brought into play gradually as the cadastral surveys extend and irrigation works are completed. The Lieutenant-Governor has just returned from visiting the Sone works. During the past season all the water which the canals could supply was freely taken at optional rates. Where the people can be relied upon to do this, it is fairer to them, and more advantageous to Government, that the optional system should continue. It remains to be seen whether they will repeat their application next year; but the result of the Lieutenant-Governor's observation is to induce him to believe that the agriculturists of Behar are really beginning to appreciate thoroughly the advantages of an assured supply of water, and under these circumstances he does not consider it expedient to press the compulsory system for the present. Orissa is not yet ready for its introduction, as the field survey there has not been completed.

17. I am to add that the Lieutenant-Governor has found that the general effect of the extension of the decentralization system in respect to the facilities which it has given to provincial administration has been even more satisfactory than he anticipated. In making the Local Government responsible for expenditure, and giving them a direct interest in the development of various branches of the revenue, it has secured a careful scrutiny over the expenditure of all departments, and a deep interest in all improvable heads of revenue which has extended to all grades of the services. District officers understand that the Provincial Government can sanction no new schemes and few new works unless it has a constantly improving revenue, and they have shewn an earnest desire to assist the Government by the adoption of every measure which their local experience suggests as likely to have a beneficial effect upon the revenues. At the same time the Local Government has, since the inauguration of the system of provincial finance in 1870-71, been in a position to carry out many works and many measures of improvement on its own responsibility, which would, under the old system, have possibly been delayed for an indefinite period. All friction with the Imperial Government has been obviated, and much useless and unsatisfactory correspondence avoided.

APPENDIX F.

MINUTE BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY.

1. In the observations I addressed to the Legislative Council on the introduction of the measures of taxation that have lately become law, I dwelt on the altered position in which the Local Governments would be placed in relation to the prosecution of Public Works, under the enlarged responsibilities with which it was proposed to entrust them.

2. Speaking of the fundamental principle of this policy, which has been fully accepted by Her Majesty's Government, I said that it—

“involves the enlargement, with adequate precautions, of the financial, and consequently also of the administrative, powers and responsibilities of the Local Governments. In the next place, we believe that, if this principle be fairly carried into effect, the new imposts, which the Council is now asked to sanction, will, when added to the resources already created, provide the State with sufficient means for the permanent maintenance of a national insurance against famine, without heavily increasing the pecuniary burdens of its subjects. For the attainment of this object, the material appliances we intend to promote, by means of additional revenue, are cheap railroads and extended irrigation works. We are conscious of the reproach we should justly incur if, after such a declaration as I have now made, the prosecution of these necessary works were commenced, suspended, or relinquished, according to the increased or relaxed pressure of annual circumstance, or the intermittent activity of spasmodic effort. We, therefore, propose to entrust, in the first instance, to the Local Governments the duty of framing a sufficient and carefully considered scheme of local railroad and irrigation works. We are prepared to provide them with the means whereby they may from year to year work systematically forwards and upwards to the completion of such a scheme. The funds locally raised for this purpose will be locally applied. But Provincial Governments will have to meet the cost of provincial famines out of provincial funds to the fullest extent those funds can bear. They will find that thriftless expenditure in one year may involve the risk of diminished allotments in subsequent years; and I cannot doubt that the unavoidable recognition of this fact will make them wisely eager to spend the requisite proportion of their annual income upon well-planned and carefully estimated railway and irrigation works, which will be their best insurance against the losses of famine, and the postponement of all administrative progress which famine generally entails. It will be the special duty of the Public Works Department of this Government to keep those objects constantly in view of the Local Governments, and to assist them, no less constantly, in their endeavours to give a rational preference to really useful and remunerative works, over those more captivating, but less compensating, subjects of expenditure which, in all comparatively small communities, so powerfully appeal to provincial pride, professional proclivities, or popular pleasure.”

3. It now becomes my duty to invite my colleagues in charge of the two Departments on which will mainly devolve the task of giving effect to the policy thus sketched out, (that is to say, the Public Works and Financial Departments,) to consider, and propose, the further measures requisite for accomplishing the object of it. Considerable progress has indeed been already made in this direction. The orders that will shortly issue on the report of the Committee assembled last autumn at Simla, and the supplementary report more recently received, will do much to facilitate the operations of the Local Governments; and to place their relations with the Government of India on the footing that is now requisite.

4. But, while requesting the co-operation of my colleagues in this important task, I feel that I should be imperfectly performing my own duty if I did not endeavour, to the best of my ability, to lay down the lines on which the action of our Government should proceed in the prosecution of the great object which, for many months past, has been one of the chief causes of our solicitude.

5. The sole justification for the increased taxation which has just been imposed upon the people of India for the purpose of ensuring this Empire against the worst calamities of future famine, so far as such an insurance can now be practically provided, is the pledge we have given that a sum not less than a million and a half sterling, which exceeds the amount of the additional contributions obtained from the people for this purpose, shall be annually applied to it. We have explained to the people of this country that the additional revenue raised by the new taxes is required, not for the luxuries, but the necessities, of the State; not for general purposes, but for the construction of a particular class of Public Works; and we have pledged ourselves not to spend one rupee of the special resources, thus created, upon works of a different character; while we exercise the most strict economy in all other branches of our expenditure, so that no greater burdens shall be thrown on the country than are absolutely required by the necessities of the case.

6. The pledges which my Financial Colleague was authorised to give, on behalf of the Government, were explicit and emphatic as regards these points. It was, however, impossible to explain in detail to the public the precise character of those administrative guarantees which the Government of India then bound itself to provide for the faithful redemption of the above-mentioned pledges.

7. Owing to this impossibility, the manner in which the proceeds of the new taxation are to be applied to the reduction of debt is the only part of our financial programme as to which any mistrust of our sincerity has been indicated on the part of the community. For this reason, it is all the more binding on the honor of the Government to redeem to the uttermost, without evasion or delay, those pledges, for the adequate redemption of which the people of India have, and can have, no other guarantee than the good faith of their rulers.

8. Now, the engagements which the Government of India has bound itself to fulfil, are the following :—

1st.—To apply funds from the surplus revenues at the rate of 1½ million sterling per annum, in such a manner as to create what shall, in fact, be an insurance fund, by which future expenditure for famine relief can be provided for without adding to the permanent burdens on the revenues.

2nd.—To bring about this result, either by the direct discharge of debt in times of prosperity, or by investments of surplus revenue in Productive Public Works, under conditions that shall ensure their being really remunerative, and that they shall at the same time supply to the country the best material protection against famine.

3rd.—To comply with these conditions by carrying out in all the provinces of India, as speedily as our financial position and other economical considerations will admit, all approved extensions of irrigation, and a complete system of cheap railroads, primarily and specially adapted to a slow goods traffic.

4th.—To secure to the utmost the financial basis of this undertaking, by assigning to, and concentrating upon, the Local Governments the financial responsibility and administrative powers necessary for the designing, commencement, completion, and maintenance, within their respective provinces, of such a system of works as shall fulfil the requirements of the case for each of them.

5th.—To arrive at this result by giving to these Local Governments the maximum of pecuniary interest and profit in the cheap construction and successful management of all provincial public works; by reducing, to a minimum interference on the part of the Government of India in the administration of such works; and by not permitting such interference to extend beyond what is necessary to ensure regularity and harmony of action, or protection to the general financial interests of the State.

9. To carry out adequately the engagements thus publicly contracted, immediate, consistent, and persistent adherence to certain lines of conduct, on the part of the Central Government, is absolutely necessary.

10. In the first place, the great and dominant condition which must necessarily govern our action, determine every direction, and influence every detail, in the prosecution of a policy on the success of which the character and efficiency of our government will henceforth be properly held to depend, is decentralisation of the administration, and consequent reduction of the central establishments. These conditions apply more or less to all departments of the Supreme Government; but, from the nature of the case, it is in the Public Works Department that they will chiefly operate, and that the loyal and intelligent recognition of them will have the amplest and most beneficent results. I need not, however, now dwell further on the paramount importance of the efficient application of these conditions to all departments of the Supreme Government, because it has already been decided in Council to constitute and appoint a Committee for the purpose of working out in detail recommendations to be submitted to the Governor General in Council for the reduction of all the central establishments in just proportion to the diminution in the administrative work of each department, relatively one to the other, which may be reasonably anticipated from the practical operation of the decentralisation policy now adopted and proclaimed.

11. In the next place, inasmuch as it is upon the Local Governments that the responsibility has been placed for the provision, maintenance, and management of local protective works, it is with the Local Governments, and not with the Government of India, that the initiative must now rest, as regards the recommendation and elaboration of schemes for giving effect to this policy.

12. Further, it must be distinctly understood, and constantly borne in mind, that as the improvement of the means of communication throughout the country is without doubt one of the most certain means of giving protection from famine, the rapid and cheap construction of provincial railroads, specially constructed for a slow goods traffic, is an object to which all the financial resources of the Government of India, available for this class of works, aided by those of the Local Governments, must now, and for many years to come, be primarily, if not almost exclusively, directed. The desired economy should be sought for by rigorously excluding from our present consideration all proposals that will sensibly add to the first cost of construction, whether for works or carriages, anything not essential for meeting the main end in view,—a local goods traffic. It will certainly be better to pay somewhat more, after the lines become remunerative, for additions then found desirable, than to delay the early general extension of railways, in order to supply what, in some sense at least, are luxuries.

13. It is also now essential that the Government of India in the Public Works Department should seriously re-consider its action in respect to lines passing through Native States; and that it should, without loss of time, take such steps as may be possible to secure its financial position in regard to those lines; so that while the provision of such improved means of communication in the territories of our Native feudatories is encouraged as far as possible, they shall not become causes of delay in the extension of railways through British provinces, the revenues of which have till now almost exclusively supplied the means of carrying out the lines which pass through Native States.

14. In every case of a line passing through Native territory, vigilant foresight and re-doubled care will be required from the Public Works Department to provide financial guarantees sufficient to replace that responsibility for results which is guarded, in the case of provincial lines, by the liability of provincial revenues to make good all deficiencies in the estimated profits on expenditure. If this condition of our present and future action be not carefully observed in the Public Works Department, the Government of India may be exposed to a great scandal.

15. Caution is also needed on the part of the Public Works Department in respect to outlay, both as regards capital outlay and working expenditure, on Guaranteed Railways, more especially on those of which the receipts do not cover the guaranteed rate of interest.

16. In amplification of these general principles, there are some observations on the manner of applying them which I desire to add.

It will henceforth be necessary to exercise great caution when devising railroad projects, or ordering surveys on behalf of railroad projects, which are not essential to the purpose I have indicated; and which would, therefore, involve the diversion of necessarily limited funds to objects other than those to which all the available financial resources of the Government of India must, for many years to come, be devoted. Any preliminary expenditure that will not lead to the eventual execution of some useful work, or tend to reduce the risk of error in the preparation of projects for actual execution, will be wasteful, and should not be permitted.

17. Next, to ensure the rapid and general extension of railways, it is essential that they should be cheap, and designed as simply and economically as may be consistent with the practical demands of a slow goods traffic, while proper attention is given to permanence in the construction of the principal works. From this point of view some re-consideration of existing rules (relating to the preparation and sanction of projects) may be requisite, so as to give reasonable facilities for the gradual execution of railway works. It is certainly not expedient to force prematurely the provision of conveniences, though in themselves desirable, which will operate as causes of expense, and which might be postponed without sacrifice of substantial efficiency. The early opening of the lines in a manner that will admit of a properly economical slow traffic of goods is the object to be aimed at, rather than the complete provision of all those appliances which the profuse expenditure on our Guaranteed Railways has in their case supplied; and which, through them, have come to be looked upon as necessities. Those who find in the absence of such luxuries a just cause of complaint should be reminded that all Indian Railways are provided at the cost of the Indian tax-payer, and that the well-being of the country at large must receive attention before merely personal comfort.

18. Speaking of the lines of railway we now have to provide, as a whole, it may certainly be said that the traffic upon them will be light, and that the financial obligations to construct them at the smallest possible cost are paramount. In respect to these lines I regard the question of gauge as no longer open. Our experience is already sufficient to prove that narrow-gauge lines admit of considerable economy in first construction; and that they are fully capable of carrying any traffic likely to be brought upon them, as cheaply at least as a similar traffic could be carried on any railway. The Government of India having some years ago decided that the narrow gauge should be adopted for such lines as those to which I am now referring, much progress having been already made in their prosecution, and no reason existing for going back from the original decision, I hold it to be finally settled that this system of construction shall be exclusively adopted in future, so far as regards the class of railways here under consideration.

19. That there may be lines of communication on which the construction of railways will hereafter be desirable on strategic and military grounds, I am ready to recognise. Were they commenced, however, to-morrow and carried out, under high pressure, regardless of expenditure, they could not be completed in time to render them available for military purposes for the next three or four years. It is not upon the commencement of long and costly strategic lines of rail, that the resources available for increasing the strength and efficiency of our military power at India, can, at the present time, be most advantageously laid out. Nor, so far as I am able to judge, is the Government of India pledged by public engagements, or required on behalf of any urgent interests, to commence and carry out any such lines with all possible expedition. Still less, is there any reason, which I can recognise, for giving to the construction of such lines precedence in the present distribution of our annual expenditure upon Public Works. On the other hand, the Government of India is most distinctly, publicly, and emphatically bound to lose no time in commencing, and completing, within the limits of its actual means, the construction of provincial lines of railroad for slow goods traffic on the cheapest possible system. Until the projects necessary for the fulfilment of this engagement have been completely and satisfactorily carried out, no other new projects can be entertained, or discussed, unless the plea of superior urgency is first established.

20. Of course, due provision must be made for the early completion of lines of this character which are now in progress; though the present expenditure upon them should be limited as closely as possible. While all is done that is really necessary to meet the objects for which they were primarily undertaken, it should be borne in mind that they were not designed as lines of commercial traffic; and that the supply of the conveniences required for such a traffic should rather follow, than precede, its development.

21. Whenever we are called upon to consider, as a practical and pressing question, the immediate construction of strategic lines of railroad not yet commenced, I shall be ready to receive and discuss, without prejudice, all arguments in favor of adopting for such lines, upon military grounds, the broad-gauge system. But no such projects are now before us; nor does it seem probable that they can be brought before us in any practical shape for some years to come.

22. For these reasons, I am satisfied that the Government of India, in the prosecution of the objects it is pledged to carry out, should conform its action to the strictest conditions of promptitude, combined with economy; and should watch carefully against the misdirection, either of the ingenuity of its officers, or the resources of the State, to the survey of lines of railroad which have no connection with the attainment of these objects, and are likely to lead to no present useful results.

23. With reference to the Guaranteed Railways, which serve as the great arteries of commerce through the country, it should be our object to see that all really needful supplementary works or rolling-stock are provided to meet the growth of the traffic. Beyond this, however, any expenditure that cannot be justified on the general principles laid down in the earlier part of this Minute, for the extension of railways, should be jealously challenged. The mere fact that such expenditure may probably be sufficiently covered by the expected return, will not justify the construction of costly lines, if thereby the completion of a greater length of cheaper lines is prevented. It is not possible to lay down any positive rule on such a subject; but the fact should not be lost sight of, that expenditure on Guaranteed Railways is, in truth, hardly different, in its financial effect on the ways and means of the Government, from expenditure on lines directly carried out by the State; and that the expansion of the former will necessarily cause the contraction of the latter.

24. In the presence of the vast area to which no sort of provision of railway transport has yet been given, it will further be extremely doubtful whether any countenance should be given to carrying out supplementary through lines of communication, as distinguished from those cheap local lines, the immediate provision of which I regard as so important. Without going so far as to reject the idea of some such lines being hereafter expedient, I consider that they should be closely examined if proposed; and that enquiry should be made whether the desired relief of the traffic may not be better provided by means of judiciously designed local lines.

25. The principle that justifies such a course of action is obvious. It is that, by closely limiting the first outlay, the largest possible extension of railways will be obtained in the shortest possible time. By doubling the lines, should the traffic anywhere ultimately require it, or by re-laying them on the broad gauge, should such a course be ever proved essential to carry the trade of the country, all needful relief can be given in the future; with this very great advantage, that the increased outlay will, in all cases, follow the growth of the Revenue, and not precede it. The minimum of financial risk will be incurred, while the maximum of practical advantage is secured.

26. To give full effect to the conclusions thus indicated, the early attention of the Financial and Public Works Departments should, as I have already suggested, be given to the matters that properly fall within their respective branches of business; acting however in concert, so far as may be necessary for the purpose of framing instructions to all authorities concerned.

27. The Financial Department may usefully call the attention of all the other departments of the Government of India, and of all the Local Governments, to the paramount importance of giving effect to the policy recently adopted in relation to the protection of the country from the effects of famine. It should reiterate, in clear and emphatic terms, to the authorities concerned, both imperial and local, the cautions already generally stated in the declarations of the Government of India, as regards their several responsibilities; whether in co-operating for the suggestion and practical application of the requisite measures to be taken, or in guarding the many important financial interests directly or indirectly involved in all proposals for expenditure, or sanction.

28. Increased attention is also required in the Financial Department to the financial results of all Productive Public Works; and that Department should now, in communication with the Public Works Department, consider what steps ought to be taken to secure a full review of the results of all such works, year by year, in a complete and comprehensive shape, such as would be suitable for presentation to Parliament.

29. The consideration of all administrative details in relation to their cost, and a comparison of such cost on various works of like general character, would properly fall within the province of the Public Works Department. On the other hand, a general review of the financial results as a whole, whether in relation to the original cost of the works, the liabilities they involve in the shape of interest charges or otherwise, their aggregate effects in increasing the public revenues or expenditure, or other analogous considerations, would be dealt with in the Financial Department.

30. The extreme importance of constantly keeping in view the actual results of the great financial operations involved in the prosecution of Public Works in India, whether under guarantee of interest or by the direct expenditure of money by the State, cannot be overrated. It is only by the consideration and comparison of such results that proper economy can be secured, and financial trouble avoided. It will almost invariably be found that it is to the want of attention to this point that embarrassments arise from excess of expenditure over estimates, or from the unthrifty management of works in operation.

31. In such returns promptitude and regularity are more to be sought for, than over-refinement in calculation, which is often of no real value for practical purposes.

32. My attention has been drawn, in relation to this matter, to a despatch from the Secretary of State (Railway No. 119, dated 25th November 1875), in which he gives instructions for the revision of the railway traffic returns, for the purpose to which I have referred. The subject is one which should be reconsidered in connection with the steps now to be taken; and a joint responsibility should be held to attach to the Financial and Public Works Departments for securing the regular and punctual preparation of whatever returns of this class are eventually held to be requisite.

33. It would fall to the Public Works Department, in dealing with its share of the duties now placed upon it, to point out to the Local Governments the increased necessity which now exists for greater attention on their part, than has heretofore been given, to the requirements of their provinces as a whole; and to remind them of the fresh responsibilities now thrown upon them; at the same time requiring them, in sending up proposals on behalf of Productive Public Works which require the sanction of the Supreme Government or the provision of funds outside of the ordinary grants from the Revenues of the year, to regard such proposals as parts of a general and connected scheme for satisfying as expeditiously, and as economically, as may be practically possible, the pressing wants of their provinces within the limits of their financial powers.

34. It will further be apparent that the obligations now publicly undertaken by the Government of India as regards, on the one hand, expedition, and, on the other hand, economy, in the construction of useful local works, demand from the Public Works Department the severest restraint upon superfluous expenditure in every branch of its administration; and the most careful, intelligent, and well-considered selection of the works recommended to the sanction of the Governor General in Council for the purpose of supplying to the country at large the best means that can be devised for giving it protection from the destructive effects of Famine.

statistics, 376-77. The Value of the Trade of 1876-77 is the largest ever yet recorded, if the years of the American war 1863 to 1866 are excluded. The total Imports amounted to £48,864,086, and the total Exports to £65,043,789, both including treasure and Government stores.

STATISTICS.

The increase of the Import of treasure was very large, the amount having been more than double the average of the preceding 4 years.

NT OF INDIA
THE WORLD.

The value of the Imports of merchandise, though somewhat less than in 1875-76, shows a fair increase over the average of the last 4 years, which, in combination with the continued increase of the Exports, is a satisfactory indication of the growing prosperity of the country.

The rapid change in the relative values of gold and silver which culminated in July 1876 is illustrated by many entries in the Table in the preceding page.

IPAL
TS.

In the following table the statistics of the exports of the principal Indian staples are arranged in order of their value in 1876-77. Opium has continued in steady demand, and now stands first in the list, closely followed by Cotton, which, however, it is observed with regret, has declined in value and quantity. Rice has changed places again with Seeds. Jute, Hides and Skins and Indigo form the next group, each member of which retains its relative place. The growing proportion of manufactured Cotton, Jute and Hides is interesting and encouraging. Tea made a stride forward; and Wheat more than doubled in value. Silk and Sugar also sprang up again under the stimulus of higher prices:—

REMONETISATION
UNITED STATES.

The most important event of the year bearing upon the value of silver is the remonetisation of that metal by the Legislature of the United States of America by an Act which was passed on the 28th February 1878, in spite of the President's veto, by a majority of two-thirds of the House of Representatives and the Senate respectively.

The text of the Act cannot reach India for some time; but the following is the Bill which, it is understood, was accepted by the Senate: it has been ascertained that the Act does not differ from it in essential particulars:—

An Act to authorise the free coinage of the standard silver dollar and to restore its legal-tender character.

Be it enacted, &c.—That there shall be coined, at the several mints of the United States, silver dollars of the weight of four hundred-and-twelve-and-a-half grains troy of standard silver, as provided in the Act of January 18th, 1837, on which shall be the devices and superscriptions provided by said Act, which coins, together with all silver dollars heretofore coined by the United States, of like weight and fineness, shall be a legal tender, at their nominal value, for all debts and dues, public and private, except when otherwise provided by contract; (and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorised and directed, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to purchase from time to time silver bullion, at the market price thereof, not less than $2,000,000 per month, nor more than $4,000,000 per month, and cause the same to be coined into such dollars, and any gain or seigniorage arising from this coinage shall be accounted for and paid into the Treasury as provided under existing laws relative to the subsidiary coinage; provided that the amount of money at any one time invested in such silver bullion, exclusive of such resulting coin, shall not exceed $5,000,000).

* The values measured in silver in London have been calculated from the values in gold on the basis of the price of standard silver in London.

Section 2.—All Acts and parts of Acts inconsistent with the provisions of this Act are hereby repealed.

The proceedings of the Latin Union also may conveniently be recounted here. In 1873 the Belgian Government obtained from their Legislature authority to suspend or limit the coinage of 5-franc pieces. From 1874 the same principle was adopted by the States of the Latin Union, and, at the yearly meetings of their respective delegates, the limitation of the silver coinage was fixed as follows:—

LATIN UNION.

† Inclusive of £144,000 ordinary and £336,000 special.

At the meeting of the Conference which it was intended to hold in January 1877, the question of adopting a gold standard was to have been discussed; but the Conference was postponed to the end of the year, the several Powers forming the Union agreeing, meanwhile, to restrict the coinage of silver in 1877 to half the amounts authorised for 1876. The Conference was again deferred till February 1878, to fix the contingents of silver to be coined this year; but as a Conference will be necessary in October to consider whether the Union should be maintained in its present form, the delegates might decide on not meeting till then. Negotiations on the subject were going on at the end of January 1878. If the Latin Union be not denounced before the 1st January 1879, it can only be terminated at the end of another period of fifteen years. In 1875, the coinage of 5-franc pieces was, in Belgium, France and Italy, to the full extent permitted, while Switzerland refrained from issuing any. In 1877, France, Belgium and Switzerland did not coin any silver, but Italy coined to the full amount of her contingent. On 5th August 1876 a law was passed in France, authorising the President to keep the mints of France closed against the coinage of silver until January 1878; and in August 1876 he suspended entirely the coinage of silver, except for subsidiary purposes. In January 1878 M. Léon Say introduced into the French Senate a Bill to prolong the power of the Government to suspend the coinage of silver until the end of March 1879. After explanation, the Bill was carried without opposition. In December 1876 Belgium suspended the coinage of silver.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL STATISTICS, 1877-78.

Statistics,
1877-78.

Both imports and exports have increased largely, which indicates on the whole a prosperity which appears extraordinary when it is remembered that the Famine which has during this period afflicted the whole of Southern India is estimated to cost 9½ million sterling in all and 6½ million in 1877-78, and that Upper India lost almost the whole of its autumn harvest.

In the following table the statistics of the principal staples exported to Foreign Countries during the first ten months of the year are compared with the corresponding statistics of the two previous years. The cause of the decreased quantity of Opium exported, and of its increased average value, is the drought in Malwa. Cotton, Raw, shows again a large decrease, partly compensated by a small increase of Cotton Manufactures, as more mills come into work. The astonishing growth of the exports of Seeds, Rice, Jute, and Wheat, notwithstanding the pressure of the famine in Southern India, with consequent high prices, may perhaps be, to a great extent, attributed to the Turco-Russian War: Russian supplies having been interrupted, India has replaced them. The movement of these staples has doubtless produced the great traffic on the East Indian and Great Indian Peninsula Railways which has been already reviewed. Tea has done well, the average declared value being but little lower than last year. Coffee, too, has prospered. The only article besides Cotton, Raw, which shows a serious decrease is Lac, but this article is comparatively unimportant.

	Minimum ditto ditto	£11,130,528 (30th Apl.)

The value of silver and the sterling exchanges have been remarkably steady throughout the year and have even manifested some recovery. The recent unprecedented inflation of the Government Paper Currency is connected no doubt with the great importations of silver during the year, and to the reaction upon the rather sudden cessation of the grain traffic with Madras in November last.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

NOTIFICATIONS.—ACCOUNTS.

Fort William, the 18th March 1878.

No. 1911.—The following Resolution is re-published for general information :—

RESOLUTION—By the Government of India, FINANCIAL DEPT.

1. Such full explanations of the general financial situation of the Government of India have lately been given in the Legislative Council of the Governor General, in connection with the new measures of taxation which have been adopted, that the necessity for entering into much detail at present has been obviated. As no legislation is required to carry out any measures which the Government of India now proposes to adopt, the Financial Statement necessarily takes the form of a Resolution of the Government, for no Statement could be made in the Legislative Council without disregarding the provisions of the Act of Parliament by which the Council is constituted. It will, however, be convenient to recapitulate the main facts which have lately been laid before the Council and the public, and to refer to the more important measures, whether of taxation or of financial administration, which have been taken during the past year.

2. A Statement in explanation of the Accounts of the year 1876-77, of the Regular Estimates of the current year 1877-78, and of the Budget Estimates of the coming year 1878-79, accompanies this Resolution. The main results will now be summarized.

3. The Accounts of 1876-77 show a deficit on the ordinary account of £2,182,778, of which a sum of £3,450,000 is due to Famine Expenditure and Loss of Revenue.

4. The Expenditure on Productive Public Works (under which designation the class of works will be henceforth spoken of hitherto termed Extraordinary) was £3,809,284.

5. The Regular Estimate for 1877-78 shows a deficit on the Ordinary Account of £3,431,000. This result is worse than the Budget Estimate by £2,809,300, due to the prolongation of the Famine in Southern India, which is now expected to cost, in loss of revenue and direct expenditure during the current year, £6,500,000.

6. The Expenditure on Productive Works for 1877-78 is now estimated at £4,877,000.

7. The effects of the Famine have so entirely disturbed the whole of the Financial arrangements of these two years that no useful comparison can be instituted between the Budget Estimates and the later results. Full details, however, will be found in the Statement appended to this Resolution.

8. The Budget Estimates for 1878-79 show the Ordinary Revenue at £63,250,000, and the Ordinary Expenditure at £61,094,000, with a surplus of £2,156,000.

9. The increase of the Revenues compared with the Regular Estimates for 1877-78 is due, to the extent of £2,654,000, to the incorporation of Provincial rates which have hitherto been excluded; £929,000 arises from new taxation.

The land revenue of 1877-78 having been about £1,300,000 in deficit of the normal receipts, and that of 1878-79 being about £700,000 in excess, accounts for an apparent improvement in the Budget Estimate of nearly £2,000,000.

The improvement in the Excise, £248,000, is partly real and the result of improved administration, and partly due to depression in 1877-78.

Under Assessed Taxes is shown the proceeds of the New License Tax amounting to £765,000.

The decrease under Customs and increase under Salt will be explained subsequently.

The net revenue under Opium is taken at 6 millions, being less by about £500,000 than the Regular Estimate. This decrease is mainly due, as explained in the Statement, to a failure in the opium crop in Malwa.

The decrease under Mints is due to the very large coining operations of 1877-78.

The head Guaranteed Railways shows a decrease of £965,000, the revenue having been swollen by famine and other exceptional causes during the current year.

State Railways show an estimated increase of £430,000, with a gross income of £967,000.

10. The ordinary expenditure excluding £555,000 for Famine amounts to £60,539,000, showing an increase over the corresponding estimated expenditure for 1877-78 (also excluding Famine) of £3,860,000, of which £2,832,100 is due to the incorporation of the Provincial Expenditure now for the first time brought into the general accounts.

Under Expenditure, the increase under Interest is £161,000, the total charge being £5,909,000. The apparent increases under Land Revenue, Minor Departments, Police, Education and some other less important heads are due to the transfers from Provincial Funds.

The reduction under Opium, £469,000, arises from reduced payments to cultivators.

The largely increased remittances in the coming year lead to an increase of £1,384,000 under the head Loss by Exchange.

Famine Relief shows a reduction of £1,734,000. The estimate provides for £500,000 for relief, to which £55,000 has to be added under Army. The corresponding charge last year under Army was £200,000.

The Expenditure under Army shows a satisfactory diminution of £636,000, due to the extent of £230,100 to expenditure in India, the rest being under Stores in England.

The increase under Public Works Ordinary is due to the Provincial Expenditure.

State Railways show an increase of £298,000 with a total of £704,000, leaving a net increase of £263,000.

11. The Expenditure under Productive Public Works, hitherto classed as Public Works Extraordinary, is estimated for 1878-79 at £4,555,000. This grant is less by £322,000 than the Regular Estimate for 1878-79, but exceeds the Budget Grant of that year by £927,000. The excess expenditure under this head in the current year was due partly to the desire to complete the Indus Valley Railway, and partly to works undertaken for Famine relief.

12. Taking into account the capital transactions with the Guaranteed Railway Companies and the loans to Native States, &c., the net sum borrowed in 1876-77 was £3,306,595, exceeding by £1,409,795 the sum (£1,896,800) entered in the Regular Estimates. This, and some other circumstances, explain the excess of £2,776,865 in the Opening Balances of 1877-78 as compared with the Regular Estimates. In 1877-78 the net sum borrowed similarly calculated amounts to £6,726,000, exceeding by £1,344,900 the sum £5,381,100 shown in the Budget Estimates. The Closing Balances of the year are now expected to be £16,000,000, being more than the Opening Balances by £535,335, and than the estimated Closing Balances by £2,488,800. The great extra expenditure imposed upon the State by the prolongation of the Famine was practically almost entirely met by the excess sum borrowed in the two years compared with the Estimates of the 15th March last, viz., £2,754,695.

Next year it is proposed to borrow in all only £2,500,000, of which £800,000 is wanted for loans to Native States and the like, and £1,000,000 for repayment to the Guaranteed Railway Companies; the net sums therefore added to the Debt will, if the Estimates are realised, be only £900,000. But, on the other hand, the balances will be reduced by £1,500,000. The Government of India cannot at present give any information about the time or manner in which it will borrow the £2,500,000 set down in the Estimates, or any other sum which it may actually want. The Closing Balance of 1878-79 is estimated at £14,500,000. Of the Closing Balances, £14,734,600 in 1877-78 and £13,069,200 in 1878-79 are expected to be in the Indian Treasuries.

13. The total net cost of the Famine in Southern India is now estimated to be—

In 1876-77 ...	3,450,000
In 1877-78 ...	6,500,000
TOTAL ...	9,950,000

In 1878-79 it is, at present, expected that arrears of land revenue lying over from the famine years will be recovered in excess of the famine expenditure occurring in the year by about £116,000. Upon the whole, it seems probable that the whole net cost of the Famine will be about nine-and-three-quarters millions sterling, viz. :—

	£
In the Bombay Presidency ...	1,300,000
In the Madras Presidency ...	8,450,000

14. In the Financial Statement for 1877-78 made by the Hon'ble Sir John Strachey on the 15th March 1877 it was shown as the result of a careful examination of the actual Accounts of the Revenues and Expenditure of the Empire during the preceding seven years that, excluding the cost of famine relief, the Government had just managed to pay its way. Before the commencement of the great famine from which the country has lately been suffering, and the effects of which have even now not entirely passed away the finances of India might be considered to be in a condition of equilibrium. But for one reason the financial position would have been satisfactory. The ordinary public expenditure, with the exception of that incurred in England for the Army, not only showed no tendency to increase, but, excluding famine relief, it was less in 1875-76 by more than £1,000,000 than it had been seven years before. Excluding Loss by Exchange, an element altogether beyond our control, the net expenditure during the same period had decreased by £2,254,000. It was shown also that the net revenue of the Empire had increased in seven years by more than £2,000,000, or at the average rate of nearly £300,000 a year. Thus, but for one cause, we might have hoped that no addition to the burdens of the country would be necessary, and that the normal growth of the revenues would have enabled the Government to go on gradually carrying out those measures of fiscal and administrative reform which it felt to be essential to the prosperity and progress of the Empire. The cause which rendered nugatory all such anticipations and beliefs was the recognition of the fact that the obligations entailed on the Government by the periodical and inevitable recurrence of famine must be provided for among the ordinary charges of the State.

15. When it was thus admitted that famines must be looked on not as abnormal or exceptional calamities, but as certain from time to time to recur, it became obvious that sound financial policy obliged the Government to reject altogether the expedient of trusting to borrowing to meet the charges which they entailed, and that it was essential to make such an improvement in the financial position of the Government as would enable it to meet these charges from its ordinary revenue. This could only be done satisfactorily by securing in years of prosperity a substantial surplus of revenue over expenditure by means of which the Government could meet the charges thrown upon it in years of famine.

16. It was not possible to estimate with any confidence the amount of financial relief which was necessary before the Government could undertake these new burdens, but for reasons which were explained by the Hon'ble Sir John Strachey in his speech in the Legislative Council on the 27th December 1877, the Government decided that the yearly average cost of famines, in loss of revenue and actual expenditure, could not safely be estimated at less than £1,500,000.

17. It was necessary therefore (on account of famine alone) to improve the financial position by that amount. Besides this it was necessary to provide a margin on the annual estimates of at least £500,000, to meet those contingencies which cannot be foreseen but to which we must always be liable, and to assist the Government in providing the means of proceeding steadily with the administrative and fiscal improvements which from time to time become necessary.

Thus, the conclusion was arrived at, that when the late famine commenced, or we may say at the beginning of the current year 1877-78, the revenues were deficient to the amount of about £2,000,000 a year.

18. In considering how these additional resources could be supplied, the Government of India anxiously directed its attention in the first instance to the possibility of reducing expenditure. In regard to the civil expenditure, although there are still some branches of the Administration for which the charges ought undoubtedly to be diminished, the Government was satisfied that no very great reduction could be hoped for. In the seven years to which reference has been made the net civil expenditure was reduced by £1,500,000 a year. This fact justifies the Government of India in declaring that the administration of the finances has been conducted with care and economy in the past, and entitles it to claim confidence when it asserts its resolution to exercise similar care and economy in the future.

19. No reduction could be looked for in the charges for Productive Public Works, for, although the receipts from the Railways and Irrigation Works have rapidly increased and the financial results that have been obtained from these great undertakings are as a whole satisfactory and encouraging, the Government hopes to push on these useful works even more vigorously in the future than it has done in the past. Thus only can it discharge the responsibility which it has accepted, of sparing no efforts which it is possible to make for the purpose of protecting the country against the consequences of drought and famine. Past experience has proved that even from a merely financial point of view it is wise strenuously to persevere in this policy. The burden on the revenues on account of these great works goes on steadily diminishing. During the last twenty-five years more than £130,000,000 has been spent in India, either directly by the Government, or through the Guaranteed Companies, on Railways and Works of Irrigation. In 1876-77 the total net charge for interest on this account was about £1,000,000, or about sixteen shillings per cent. on the capital outlay, an insignificant price to pay for works of such incalculable usefulness. In 1877-78, under circumstances no doubt exceptional, this charge has virtually disappeared. That the policy which the Government has been pursuing in regard to the construction of productive works may, if it be wisely applied, be followed without financial risk, is further illustrated by the fact that the total charge for interest on debt of all sorts and Guaranteed Railway Capital, is in the present year less than the charge in 1870-71 by about £2,000,000.

20. Up to the year 1875-76, the efforts of the Government to reduce the Military charges had been as successful as those made to reduce the charges for the Civil Services. The net cost of the army in 1875-76 was less by £1,000,000 than it had been seven years before. Unfortunately its cost during the last two years was again increased by upwards of £1,000,000, chiefly on account of increase to the Home charges. It is satisfactory that the Estimates for the coming year 1878-79 show a reduction under this head of more than £600,000 compared with the Regular Estimate of the present year. The Government of India has been in communication with Her Majesty's Secretary of State on this important subject, and trusts that some arrangement may be found practicable which shall prevent further demands on account of the Home military charges, over which this Government has no power of control, being thrown on the Revenues of India.

21. The measures taken during the past year for increasing the powers and responsibilities of the Local Governments, the nature of which was described in the Financial Statement for 1877-78, will, it is believed, when they are complete, improve the financial position of the Government of India by an annual sum of nearly £400,000. No part of this improvement is due to fresh taxation. It is the result of the administrative changes and improvements to which the policy of decentralization has led. The original measures taken in 1870 by the Government of Lord Mayo had previously led to a saving of £330,000, and this policy, which has given increased efficiency to almost every branch of the Administration, has thus added to the Imperial Revenues a sum of about £700,000 a year, without the imposition of any fresh burdens on the people. These measures of decentralization have now been more or less completely carried out in Bengal, in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, in the Punjab, the Central Provinces, and in Bombay, and in all cases with the complete approval of the Local Governments. The only great province in regard to which no satisfactory arrangement has hitherto been found practicable is Madras.

22. After taking credit for the gain of £100,000 just referred to, there remained to be provided a sum of £1,100,000 to complete the amount of £1,500,000 declared necessary to enable the Revenues to meet the estimated charges on account of famine. It appeared to the Government that this sum could only be provided by fresh taxation.

23. It is not necessary to repeat here the reasons which led the Government of India to the conclusion that the new taxes necessary for providing an insurance against famine should fall partly on the trading and partly on the agricultural classes. Nor is it necessary to describe again in detail the measures of taxation which have recently been passed into law. It is sufficient to refer to those measures in general terms.

24. The new taxation imposed on the trading classes has taken the form of a License Tax on trades and dealings. The Acts passed for the various provinces differ in some of their details, but in all matters of importance they are similar. In those which apply to the provinces of Northern India, the maximum fee chargeable in any case is Rs. 500. The minimum fee is Re. 1. The tax will be imposed on no person whose net earnings are less than Rs. 100 a year, and no person will be called on to pay an amount exceeding 2 per cent. on his annual income. In Bombay the maximum fee has been fixed at Rs. 200. The License Tax will be levied throughout India. It is estimated to yield to the Imperial Government about £700,000 after meeting charges of collection, and allowing a margin to Local Governments.

25. The tax on the agricultural classes has been imposed in the provinces of Northern India and Bengal alone. It has taken in each province the form of an addition to the existing Local Rates on land. It is expected to yield about £500,000 a year.

26. Similar additional rates have not been imposed in Madras or Bombay. In order to carry out the long-declared policy of the Government in regard to the equalisation of the salt duties throughout India, an increase to the Salt Tax in those presidencies became unavoidable. Although, before any thought of imposing new taxation on account of famine had arisen, this increase had been virtually decided upon, and had therefore no connection with the new measures of famine taxation, the Government of India did not think that it would be right to impose additional direct taxation on the agricultural classes in Madras and Bombay at the same time that it was increasing the salt duties. No fresh taxation has therefore been imposed in those presidencies on the land.

27. The total amount which the new taxes on the trading and agricultural classes will yield is thus estimated at £1,200,000. The full amount, however, will not be collected in the coming year, because it will not be right to levy the additional rates on land in the North-Western Provinces, until the country has recovered from the serious loss which it suffered in the almost total failure of the last summer crops.

28. The proceeds of these taxes, together with the sum of £400,000 which will be gained by the extension of Provincial responsibility, make up a little more than the £1,500,000 which is annually required for the insurance of the country against famine. The manner in which the Government proposes actually to apply this sum was fully explained by the Hon'ble Sir John Strachey in his speech in the Legislative Council on the 9th February 1878.

This explanation will be found in an Appendix* to this Resolution. By following the course which is proposed, the Government of India will virtually reduce the Public Debt by £1,500,000 a year; and resources will be stored up in years of prosperity, by means of which, when famine actually occurs, it will be possible to discharge the heavy obligations which then fall upon the State. By investing in Productive Public Works from the resources thus specially created a sum of 1½ millions yearly, instead of from borrowed money, the charge for interest which would otherwise arise will be saved, while an additional income will be created from the works, which will supply in the future a source from which to meet without increased strain on the finances a corresponding interest payment on any debt which may then be incurred to meet Famine charges.

29. When introducing the new measures of taxation, it was explained by Sir John Strachey that, in the opinion of the Government of India, it was necessary that a surplus should be shown on the Accounts of each year amounting at least to £2,000,000. Of this, £1,500,000 was for insurance against Famine; the remaining £500,000 was said to be required as the smallest sum which would enable the Government to meet contingencies, and to furnish, in combination with the natural growth of the Revenues, the means of carrying out necessary administrative and fiscal reforms.

30. To provide a portion of this surplus, new taxation was necessary. The new taxes were expected to improve the Imperial Revenues by £1,100,000 a year. The steps taken towards the equalisation of the Salt duties, to be further referred to hereafter, gave temporary relief to the extent of £300,000. The £600,000 required to make up the full amount of £2,000,000 would, it was expected, be provided partly by the new measures of decentralisation, which involved no fresh taxation, and partly by the normal increase of the General Revenues.

31. It is important to ascertain how far the estimates for the coming year, which are now published, support the anticipations made by the Government a few months ago.

32. To obtain a true conception of the present financial position, it is, first, necessary to eliminate certain disturbing causes. In this view, it must be remembered that a sum of £281,000 is shown among the receipts on account of the extinct Military Funds. This is a merely nominal credit, and it must be deducted in estimating the real amount of our Revenues. It must further be remembered that the Accounts of the past, of the present, and of the coming year are all much disturbed by the effects of the Famine. It is from this cause that in the coming year 1878-79, £671,000 is expected to be received on account of the arrears of the land-revenue of past years. Hence, if we look only to the normal facts of the Revenue, allowance must be made for these disturbing causes, and the estimated receipts for 1878-79 must be reduced by the aggregate of these two amounts, namely, £952,000.

33. If after making these allowances, no fiscal changes were now made; if all existing taxes were to remain unaltered; and no provision had to be made for the relief of famine for which £555,000 has actually been granted, the surplus of £2,156,000 as shown in the Estimates of the ensuing year would be reduced to £1,991,000. Hence after providing for the estimated Famine Expenditure of £555,000, and allowing £945,000 as expenditure for Famine Insurance, making together the $1\frac{1}{2}$ millions required, there would still be left a margin of £491,000. Thus there appears to be a deficiency of only £9,000 to be provided, if the ultimate surplus of £500,000 is to be made good from the normal revenues of the year. As regards the Ways and Means of the coming year, the additional exceptional receipts of arrears of Land Revenue, amounting to £671,000, will far more than make good this small deficiency.

34. Thus the Government trusts that it will be able in the ensuing year to fulfil satisfactorily the engagements which it has undertaken and the pledges which it has given. It will be able to provide from its ordinary revenues a sum of £555,000 for the relief of famine, and to devote at least £1,000,000 towards Famine Insurance, thus the pledge that £1,500,000 shall be set aside from the ordinary Revenues for the relief and prevention of famine, will be fulfilled. It will indeed be more than fulfilled, for the actual pledge given was not that this amount should always be provided in the Estimates of the year, but that it should always be shown to have been applied when the actual accounts of the year were closed.

35. After thus assigning from the Revenues of the coming year £1,500,000 on account of famine, there will still be at the disposal of the Government an available surplus of £656,000 for meeting those contingencies, and carrying out those fiscal and other reforms to which reference has been made.

36. Although it is thus confidently expected that the new taxation will enable the Government to fulfil, in the coming year, its pledge to devote £1,500,000 to the relief and prevention of Famine, it is clear that the financial position is not such as to justify at the present time new measures which would involve considerable reductions in any great branch of the existing revenue. It is true that all those branches of revenues are prosperous, but there are several causes which render caution obligatory on the part of the Government.

37. The extreme pressure of the famine has passed away, but relief operations still continue in a large tract of Southern India, and much suffering still exists among the poorer classes in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh. Thus the prospects of the future are not free from anxiety. The state of political affairs in Europe cannot wisely be ignored. Further, although the position of the silver market seems far more hopeful than it was, it is impossible to contemplate without some anxiety an operation of such unexampled magnitude as the remittance from India to England in the ensuing year of £17,000,000.

38. With every desire to press on the accomplishment of the fiscal reforms which it has bound itself to undertake, or which have been prescribed for its adoption by Parliament and the Secretary of State, the Government of India feels that it cannot, with due regard to the condition of the finances, do very much at the present time. It would be in opposition to the pledges given by the Government, and to the instructions of the Secretary of State, to undertake any such measures of reform if they would involve fresh taxation, and this prohibition must be applied to the future as well as to the present. No risk therefore must now be incurred of doing that which might render it necessary hereafter to impose fresh burdens.

39. There are two great measures to which the Government is pledged: the first is the equalization of the salt duties, the abolition of the Inland Customs line, and, with it, of the inland duties on sugar; the second is the improvement of the Customs tariff and the removal of the import duties on cotton manufactures.

40. Towards the accomplishment of the first of these measures great steps have been taken during the present year. Throughout the Presidencies of Madras and Bombay, including Sindh, the duty on salt, whether foreign salt imported by sea or home manufactured salt, has been raised to Rs. 2-8 per maund. At the same time the mileage duty which was levied on salt brought by Railway from Bombay into the Central Provinces, has been abolished, so that the duty of Rs. 2-8 per maund is the rate for those Provinces also, since they derive their supply of salt from Bombay and Madras. The duties in Lower Bengal, both import and excise, have been reduced to Rs. 3-2 per maund, and the duty on salt imported across the Inland Customs Line for consumption in the Upper Provinces, as well as the excise duty on salt manufactured in those Provinces, has been reduced to Rs. 2-12 per maund. At the same time the price of Punjab mines salt, the property of Government, has been diminished by 4 annas per maund. More recently, that is on the 1st of this month, the price of Sambhar salt, purchased for importation into British Territory, has been reduced by 2 annas a maund, but a great part of this reduction has been counteracted by the simultaneous raising of the Railway freight on this salt, when brought to Agra, by $1\frac{1}{2}$ anna per maund. The freight had been kept abnormally low under an arrangement by which the Inland Customs Department made up to the Railway any deficiency from a fixed standard of profit. This arrangement, which was inconvenient and anomalous, has now ceased.

41. The object of these measures has been recently fully explained. That object is not to increase the burden of the salt taxes on the people of India or to derive therefrom a larger revenue, but to make as large a step as the finances will permit toward the equalisation of those duties, a condition of taxation desirable in itself and an essential preliminary to the abolition of that great opprobrium to British administration, the Inland Customs Line. The Government of India regrets, that on a general review of its position no further steps in this direction can at the present moment be taken, but it confidently hopes that the time is not distant when this great reform, the object of which is to give the people of India "the means of obtaining, with the least possible inconvenience, and at the cheapest rate consistent with financial necessities, a supply of salt only limited by the people's capacity for consumption, will be completely carried out."

42. After making due allowance for these changes and for the normal development of the salt revenue, as well as other circumstances affecting it, the Budget Estimate of 1878-79 shews a net increase of £247,000 over the Regular Estimate of 1877-78.

43. In Sir John Strachey's Financial Statement made a year ago, he referred to the duties levied on sugar exported across the Inland Customs Line in the following terms:—

"These are one rupee per maund on refined sugar, and six annas per maund on unrefined sugar, or saccharine produce. Except where the line runs along the left bank of the Indus, exports across it are taken to Native States; but, when it passes the Indus, the sugar is nearly taken from one part of British territory to another. This sugar is all the produce of our own people in the North-Western Provinces, Oudh, and the Punjab: it is one of the most important agricultural staples of those provinces; and it is important not only to the agriculturists and manufacturers and consumers, but directly to the Government, which looks greatly to sugar cultivation for its irrigation revenue.

"While we are taxing heavily our own sugar grown on the east of the Customs Line, for the supply of the country beyond it, we admit into the same country the Mauritius sugar, which is imported largely to Bombay, taxed at a much lower rate. It is calculated that the Inland Customs duty is equivalent to 10 per cent. on the value; but the incidence of the duty varies considerably, particularly on refined sugar: on the cheaper kinds the duty is equivalent to more than 20 per cent. on its value: the sea import duty on Mauritius sugar is 5 per cent. ad valorem. I do not assert that there is, at present, any great competition between the sugar of the Upper Provinces of this Presidency and foreign sugar; but, so far as competition exists, the Inland Customs duty acts as a protective duty in favor of foreign and against our own sugar: to this extent, the duty must fall on the producer within the Customs Line. The competition will be more apparent and severe when the connection of the Rajputana State Railway with the Bombay and Baroda Line is completed.

"Little or no sugar is grown in Rajputana or Central India; and the increase of price caused by the Inland Customs Line must tend to diminish consumption, and so, still further, to injure the producer. It is impossible to estimate the injury to the people and the Government caused by placing artificial obstructions on the export of one of the great agricultural staples of the country. Such obstructions obviously affect not only the export but the import trade as well. The Government of India has repeatedly urged upon Native States the policy of abolishing their transit duties, but it is difficult to see with what consistency we can do this, so long as we retain our sugar duties. They yield about £165,000 a year : this is my only excuse for not proposing their instant abolition : they will, at any rate, disappear with the abolition of the Inland Customs Line."

44. The negotiations relating to salt, with the Native States of Rajputana and Central India, which have for their object the abolition of the Customs Line, are rapidly approaching successful completion. The maintenance of the sugar duties after the arrangements connected with salt in the Native States are put into effect, will not be consistent with the engagements made with those States, and after the Customs Line, along which they are levied, has been removed their retention will be impossible. The Government of India will therefore be compelled under any circumstances to relinquish these duties very shortly, and as no practical financial advantage would be obtained by postponing the measure for a few months, it has been decided that the duties shall be at once abolished. The country will thus be relieved of these sugar duties, which have been more than once characterized as "the most discreditable relic of the dark ages of taxation that exists in India."

45. It is estimated that these Inland sugar duties would have produced in the coming year £155,000. They appear under the head of "Customs" and their abolition has led to a corresponding reduction.

46. The second of the measures of fiscal reform before mentioned, the improvement of the Customs Tariff, next calls for notice.

47. Her Majesty's Secretary of State has called the attention of the Government of India to the Customs Tariff generally, and to the duties levied on cotton goods in particular, in several despatches received during the past year.

First, in a despatch, No. 81, dated the 7th June 1877,* His Lordship pointed out that there were numerous articles in the Tariff on which the duty levied was quite insignificant, and he requested that at a convenient time the propriety of excluding from the Tariff items that will not be productive of revenue might be considered.

Next, a despatch, No. 124, dated the 23rd August 1877,† forwarded a copy of a memorial from the Council of the East India Association, and a reply thereto by Mr. Raynsford Jackson on behalf of the Associated Committees of Employers and Workmen in the cotton manufacturing districts, respecting the abolition of the duties on the importation of cotton goods and yarns into India. Lord Salisbury observed with reference to these papers :—

"Your Excellency is well aware of the great importance attached by Her Majesty's Government to the gradual reduction of these duties at the earliest period that is not inconsistent with the financial requirements of your administration."

Finally, the Secretary of State transmitted with his despatch No. 136, dated the 30th August 1877,‡ a Resolution which was adopted by the House of Commons on the 11th July 1877 without a division in the following terms :—

"That, in the opinion of this House, the duties now levied upon cotton manufactures imported into India, being protective in their nature, are contrary to sound commercial policy, and ought to be repealed without delay so soon as the financial condition of India will permit."

His Lordship expressed his concurrence with the views of this Government, as reported in the speeches of His Excellency the Viceroy and of Sir John Strachey in the Proceedings of the Legislative Council on the occasion of the Budget Statement in March last.

The despatch concluded in the following words :—

"I can only, in conclusion, express my hope that the financial prospects of your Government in the approaching year may not preclude the possibility of commencing the reform of this branch of the Indian Tariff, but if, as now seems too probable, it shall unfortunately be such as to render you unable to incur the risk of any material loss of revenue from remission of duties, there are still two measures in connexion with this reform which should not, in my opinion, be delayed beyond the present year. I mean the repeal of the duty of 5 per cent. on foreign raw cotton imported into India, and the exemption from import duty of the lower qualities of cotton manufactures, upon which the present tax is incontestibly protective, not only in principle but in fact, and the value of which for revenue purposes is wholly insignificant."

48. The questions thus brought before the Government of India by Her Majesty's Secretary of State have received careful consideration. It is evident that, in the present state of the finances of India, any large measure of reduction of the Customs duties would be not only impossible, but would not be in accordance with the views of the House of Commons or of Her Majesty's Secretary of State. The Government of India is, however, of opinion that there is no reason for delaying compliance with the instructions of the Secretary of State, that something should be done towards removing from the Tariff the coarser qualities of cotton goods which are subject to competition from the Indian mills and looms and some other articles which are productive of but a small amount of revenue.

49. Although as just stated it is not at present possible to sacrifice any important part of our existing revenue, for the purposes of reforming the commercial taxation of India, the Government deems it right to place on record the principles on which its action is at the present time guided; and by which it desires to be guided in the future.

50. It is not necessary now to discuss the advantages to a country of free trade and the disadvantages of protective duties. It is sufficient to say that these have been admitted for many years by the Statesmen who, of whatever party, have guided the policy of the United Kingdom. In pursuance of the principles thus accepted, the Tariff of the United Kingdom, which, less than thirty years ago, subjected to duty more than one thousand different articles, has been brought down by various stages to some half dozen, of which the only important ones are wine and spirits, tea and tobacco. At the same time all export duties have been abolished.

51. The principles on which the Customs legislation of the United Kingdom has been based are now admitted axioms by all who recognise the theoretic advantages of free trade. They must be regarded as a part of the national policy which Great Britain has finally adopted, and which the Secretary of State for India, with the deliberate approval of the House of Commons, has required the Government of India in this country to carry out.

These principles are, as regards imports;—

(1) that no duty should exist which affords protection to native industry, and, as a corollary, that no duty should be applied to any article which can be produced at home, without an equivalent duty of excise on the home production, also, that no duty should be levied except for purely fiscal purposes;

(2) that, as far as possible, the raw materials of industry and articles contributing to production should be exempt from customs taxation;

(3) that duties should be applied only to articles which yield a revenue of sufficient importance to justify the interference with trade involved by the machinery of collection.

As regards exports;—that duties should be levied on those commodities only in which the exporting country has practically a monopoly of production.

52. These principles are of general application, but in the case of India, they possess a peculiar significance. India is a country of unbounded material resources, but her people are a poor people. Its characteristics are great power of production, but almost total absence of accumulated capital. On this account alone the prosperity of the country essentially depends on its being able to secure a large and favourable outlet for its surplus produce. But there is a special feature in the economic conditions of India which renders this a matter of yet more pressing, and even of vital importance,—this is the fact that her connection with England and the financial results of that connection, compel her to send to Europe every year about 20 millions sterling worth of her products without receiving in return any direct commercial equivalent. It is this excess of exports over imports which, in the language of the economists, is described as tribute. It is, really, the return for the foreign capital, in its broadest sense, which is invested in India, including under capital not only money, but all advantages which have to be paid for, such as the intelligence, strength, and energy, on which good administration and commercial prosperity depend. From these causes the trade of India is in an abnormal position, preventing her receiving, in the shape of imported merchandise and treasure, the full commercial benefit which otherwise would spring from her vast material resources.

53. The comparatively undeveloped condition of the trade of India may be illustrated by the following figures. The value of the imports and exports

54. Here then is a country which, both from its poverty, the primitive and monotonous condition of its industrial life, and the peculiar character of its political condition, seems to require from its Government, before all things, the most economical treatment of its resources, and, therefore, the greatest possible freedom in its foreign exchanges.

55. In answering these questions, it will be found that India, by the extent and favourable conditions of its territory, is capable of producing almost every article required for the use of man. If, therefore, the Import Customs Tariff be maintained, it will involve the evils of protection, unless an excise duty to counter-vail the customs duty be imposed upon almost every item which the tariff now includes. Now, as excise duties are generally costly, vexatious, and inconvenient forms of taxation, and would be in most cases impracticable in India, this of itself is a reason against the permanent retention of the existing Customs Tariff, and one which interposes a very serious difficulty in the way of constructing one that shall be free from objection. Since almost every article that is now on the Tariff, or that could be named, is either produced or is capable of being produced in India, it follows that import duties must in every case be actually or potentially protective, while, with the exception of liquors and salt, none of them are subject to an excise.

56. The total amount of import duties was, in 1876-77, £4,170,947, or, deducting erroneous collections, refunds, and drawbacks on re-exportation, £4,098,296; of this latter sum there was realised—

From Salt	£ 2,491,010
From Liquors	381,761
Total	2,822,771

Deducting the duty on these two articles, there remains £1,275,525. Deducting again from this the revenue realised from cotton goods, or £811,340, there remains £464,185, which is thus distributed:—

Copper	65,824	} 112,740
Iron	17,096
Other metals	30,020
Silk, raw and manufactured	...	43,727
Woollen manufactures	...	38,068
Provisions	32,901
Apparel	25,058
Hardware and cutlery	...	21,049
Spices	...	18,724
Sugar	...	13,886
Glass	...	13,544
Railway materials	...	11,335
Articles, each group of which gave less than £10,000	...	182,853
Total	...	464,185

Many of the numerous articles in the last class yield each an insignificant revenue, and nearly the whole are, or can be, produced in India. The duties on them are thus indefensible in principle, and cannot consistently be maintained longer than financial exigencies require their retention.

57. To revert to the cotton duties, regarding which the Resolution of the House of Commons has declared that, being contrary to sound commercial principles, they ought to be abolished, the Government of India has been at some pains to ascertain how such of them as are now actually protective can be defined. The real test is the quality or fineness of the yarn of which the goods consist. At present the Indian manufacture is confined to the coarser yarns and goods made of such yarns, and it is evident that the 5 per cent. import duty does protect such yarns and goods against competition from without. It is difficult to determine exactly how far it is effective. The coarser Indian yarns and piece-goods may, by their comparative cheapness, displace, as indeed it is asserted that they have displaced, finer imported goods in the Indian market. So far as this happens, the duties are destructive of the Customs revenue. However this may be, it is generally admitted, and the Customs returns, so far as they supply information, show, that there are certain descriptions of goods regarding which it can safely be asserted that they are of the kinds with which the Indian manufactures can compete successfully. These are unbleached T cloths under 18 reed, jeans, domestics, sheetings, and drills. The duty paid by these descriptions of piece-goods in 1876-77 was only £22,227, of which probably some portion was given back in the shape of drawbacks and refunds, as there is a considerable re-export of grey piece-goods from India. The total value of such goods re-exported in 1876-77 was £302,234. They are taken chiefly to Persia, Arabia, and the east coast of Africa. The total refunds and drawbacks in 1867-68 amounted to £12,563. It is not known how much of this was on account of the coarser goods specified above.

58. The Government of India has determined to commence by exempting these descriptions with the further condition that the goods so exempted shall not contain finer yarn than what is known as 30s, that is, yarn of which 30 hanks of 840 yards each weigh one pound. The loss of duty, calculated on the figures of 1876-77, cannot exceed £22,227, and, for the reasons above stated, will probably be less. For yarns themselves, the limit selected for exemption is for mule twist 32s and for water twist 20s. The former yielded in 1876-77 £3,400, and the latter £39, minus any refunds and drawbacks that may have been granted. The duty on long-stapled raw cotton yielded £15, and it is quite unnecessary to maintain this duty. The maximum remission of duty proposed under these heads, calculated on the figures of 1876-77, amounts to £25,681.

59. It has been urged in some quarters that instead of taking the duties off imported cotton goods or so long as they are retained, it would be right to excise the Indian manufactures. Regarding this proposal, it may be said, first, that it would be impossible to excise the product of all the hand-looms and spinning apparatus in India, and that to confine the excise duty to the large mills and looms worked by European machinery would be not only an unjust and incomplete measure; but would place an obstruction on a most legitimate and desirable development of the industry of India; secondly, that it would be impossible to tax the manufactures produced in India in Native States outside of British territory without maintaining the present Inland Customs lines, which the Government of India are strenuously endeavouring to abolish, and without establishing many more similar lines; and thirdly, that the imposition of an excise duty is inconsistent with the declared future policy of the Government of India, and of Her Majesty's Government, namely, eventually to abolish all import duties on cotton manufactures. The Government of India has, therefore, no hesitation in rejecting the proposal in question. Orders giving effect to the decisions will be found in the Notification issued with this Resolution.

60. Another class of articles is also clearly marked out for exemption. These are materials for railways. Under any circumstances, it must be a short-sighted fiscal policy to add artificially to the cost of railways, on which the development of the wealth of India is so greatly dependent; but when it is considered that, under the guarantee system, the Government of India has to pay five per cent. on the customs duties which it imposes on railway plant not imported by itself, the inexpediency and inconsistency of retaining these duties is beyond question. Locomotives and other machinery for railways, as well as wooden sleepers, have already been freed from duty. On the rest £11,335 net duty was realised in 1876-77, and the Government of India has determined to free this head of the Tariff from duty.

61. It has also decided to relieve the Tariff of 26 other major heads, comprising a larger number of sub-heads and innumerable articles, the details of which will be found in the Notification published with this Resolution. The whole of these Tariff heads produced in 1876-77 £39,610. The most important is the head "Fruits and Vegetables," being chiefly cocoanuts, dates, and the like—articles of food of the poorer classes. These yielded a revenue of £6,126.

62. With respect to the Export Tariff, the only duties now remaining are those on rice, indigo, and shell and button lac. Although India cannot be said to possess a complete monopoly of these articles, still this condition is nearly enough complied with to justify their present retention on the Tariff. As soon as the finances will permit of it, the question of the retention of these duties may be reconsidered. They yielded in 1876-77 the following amounts:—

Rice	529,739
Indigo	41,132
Lac of all sorts	33,952

63. There will now remain out of the 62 tariff numbers of Schedule A of the Indian Tariff Act, 1875, only 35 numbers, and this important reduction including the remissions of duties on the cotton goods and minor articles is effected with a loss of about £77,000.

64. Thus, these measures, designed to be the first steps towards giving effect to the policy that has been enjoined on the Government of India by Parliament and the Secretary of State, strictly comply with the conditions under which that policy was to be carried out. The estimate of the Customs revenue of 1878-79 is, after allowing for all the proposed remissions, taken at £2,480,000 or £150,000 less than the regular estimate of 1877-78. This decrease is less than what will be given up by the relief of sugar from Inland Customs duty, so that the sea customs duty remitted has no part in this decrease. The amount of sea customs duties in the coming year is smaller than in the earlier years of the series given below, by reason of the reductions made in the tariff in the year 1875 by the Government of Lord Northbrook:—

1872-73, Actuals	2,654,000
1873-74 „	2,628,000
1874-75 „	2,618,000
1875-76 „	2,721,000
1876-77 „	2,483,000
1877-78, Regular Estimate	2,630,000
1878-79, Budget „	2,480,000

The Government of India, in pursuing for the future the policy that has guided it in making these remissions, will always give full consideration to the general financial position of the country and will recognise the obligation laid upon it not to attempt to hasten this important fiscal reform by additional taxation. It confidently expects that the normal growth of the revenues will place at its disposal the necessary means.

65. After the explanation that has now been given of the actual financial measures taken by the Government in the past year, and those now to be adopted, it is further necessary to refer to the plans by which the Governor General in Council hopes to give effect to the policy of enlarging the responsibilities of the Local Governments, and through them to accomplish the task that devolves upon it, of providing as far as practicable for the protection of the country from the effects of Famine.

66. The keystone of the whole financial policy of the present Government is the enforcement to the utmost of the responsibility of every great Province of the Empire for meeting its own local wants. It has given to the Local Governments largely increased powers; it declares that they, alone, are competent to deal wisely with the details of administration; that they have advantages which the Government of India cannot possess, of seeing what their own provinces require; and that it is only by acting on these principles that the Supreme Government can obtain either good Provincial administration, or exercise that intelligent power of control which is essential to the prosperity of the Empire. A sound financial system and financial safety can only be secured by efficient administration in every great department of the State. It is by the application of these principles that the Government of India hopes to discharge the greatest of the responsibilities which now rests upon it—that of protecting the people against the terrible calamity of periodical famines.

67. During the year 1877-78 the scheme of making Provincial Governments responsible for provincial finances has been much developed, and the Government of India has received interesting reports upon the working of the scheme. Every Local Government that has expressed any opinion has reported favourably upon the result of the provincialization arrangements begun by the late Lord Mayo in 1870. It happens that during the past year nearly all of the larger provinces, except Bengal, have been more or less afflicted by drought. The first financial effect of drought and of famine relief outlay is to reduce the provincial balances and to cause large provincial expenditure. Under the pressure of famine exigencies, therefore, the provincial finance system has been more or less strained in almost every province except Bengal. From that province most favourable accounts of the results of the system have been received. The Local Government of Bengal is now financially responsible for all civil expenditure of every kind within Bengal, except only the Opium Department operations; it has full authority over, and the benefit of, all branches of the public revenue except only land revenue, salt and opium; and it provides locally for any loss that may occur on Productive Public Works such as canals and railways. The Guaranteed Railways in Bengal earn considerably more than the full guaranteed interest. And so the Imperial Treasury is relieved from all burdens on account of future increases in the cost of the civil administration, or the material improvement of Bengal, while it reserves to itself the right to a share in future increments of the provincial revenues entrusted to the Local Government. From the imperial point of view the scheme of financial provincialization is thus eminently advantageous.

68. The Hon'ble the Lieutenant-Governor's report of December last shows that from the Local Government's point of view also the scheme is not less beneficial. That report, of which a copy will be found in Appendix E to this Statement, shows that the revenues made over to Bengal increased 17 per cent. during the first half of the year 1877-78, and that, to use the Lieutenant-Governor's words, "in the majority of headings the expenditure, so far from showing any tendency to grow, is actually somewhat less than during the corresponding period of last year." Some of the increases of revenue are abnormal, and may not recur. But the general result appears to be fairly summed up in the concluding paragraph of the Lieutenant-Governor's report, which runs as follows:—

"The Lieutenant-Governor has found that the general effect of the extension of the decentralization system in respect to the facilities which it has given to provincial administration has been even more satisfactory than he anticipated. In making the Local Government responsible for expenditure, and giving them a direct interest in the development of various branches of the revenue, it has secured a careful scrutiny over the expenditure of all departments, and a deep interest in all improveable heads of revenue, which has extended to all grades of the services. District officers understand that the Provincial Government can sanction no new schemes and few new works unless it has a constantly improving revenue, and they have shewn an earnest desire to assist the Government by the adoption of every measure which their local experience suggests as likely to have a beneficial effect upon the revenues. At the same time the Local Government has, since the inauguration of the system of provincial finance in 1870-71, been in a position to carry out many works and many measures of improvement on its own responsibility, which would, under the old system, have possibly been delayed for an indefinite period. All friction with the Imperial Government has been obviated, and much useless and unsatisfactory correspondence avoided."

69. Though the failure of the autumn crop has caused a severe strain on the provincial finances of the North-Western Provinces, where the localization of the financial responsibility has been introduced as completely as in Bengal, still it is worthy of note that, even in a year of drought and partial famine, the Imperial Treasury has in those provinces benefitted greatly from the provincialization system. The Local Government has already spent nine lakhs of rupees on relief works and in charitable relief, and it expects to spend five lakhs more before the rainy season begins. Under the old system this money would have come out of the Imperial Treasury, but the whole sum has this year been found by the Provincial Government; it has come from the provincial balances and from savings made in previous years. Not only has the Imperial Treasury been benefitted, but the Local Government and its officers have had the strongest possible interest in spending their money with careful economy and on permanently useful works; and it is certain that the North-Western Provinces' relief expenditure of 1877-78 will bequeath to the country a considerable legacy of useful canals, railway works and roads.

70. Although there is hardly any branch of the public administration, improvement in which will not help the Government to fulfil the great task which it has undertaken, it is obvious that the principal means by which the end in view will be attained is the construction of works for increasing the productiveness of the country, and improving its communications. Of all things, therefore, the most essential at the present time is this, that the best and most economical arrangements possible should be made with the least practicable delay, yet with no unwise precipitance, in covering the country with that net-work of railways, and with those works of irrigation, which the country requires.

71. The development that has been recently given to the financial responsibilities of the Local Governments, and the transfer to some of them of the entire charge arising from the larger reproductive public works constructed within their territories, having been approved by Her Majesty's Government, and otherwise being found by experience to be conducive to improved administration and public economy, the Government of India has adopted the conclusion that it should be made generally applicable as soon as circumstances permit, and the needful preliminary arrangements have been completed with the several Local Governments and Administrations.

72. This resolution renders it necessary to review the rules under which funds are supplied for the prosecution of such works, the sanction of expenditure takes place, and the general system of management, financial and administrative, is conducted; and the urgency for this is the greater now that the Government of India has declared its intention of applying the funds at its disposal, for providing protection against famine, to works to be carried out through the agency of the Local Governments.

73. Her Majesty's Government have also recently directed that certain modifications should be made in the method of recording the financial results of all such works, with a view to presenting them to Parliament in a form likely to be more readily understood, and the present time may conveniently be taken for consolidating and revising the rules that have hitherto been in force in relation to this class of works.

74. The policy which has hitherto guided the Government of India in its action has been based on the assumption, which experience has shown to be a sound one, that the gradual improvement of the income derived from the larger reproductive works, including under this head the guaranteed railways, would admit of a certain yearly additional expenditure of borrowed money for extending such undertakings without bringing on the revenues any consequent larger net charge, when the increased income had been set off against the increased interest on the borrowed capital. It was on this principle that Lord Lawrence in 1869, in his minute on railway extension, advocated the gradual but systematic construction of railways, and on it the Government has since been acting with most satisfactory results. By regulating its operations within these prudent limits, the Government has been able to apply a sum of not less than 25½ millions to reproductive works during the last eight years, without thereby adding to the total charge of interest on account of the public debt, including under that name the guaranteed railway capital.

75. It is the intention of the Governor General in Council to follow the same general course in the future, subject to such modifications of detail as will be required by the somewhat changed system that will henceforth be adopted on making use of the agency of the Local Governments in carrying out the works. Heretofore the aggregate interest charge on the capital invested in the works had to be met from the general revenues, under the condition that the net burden should not exceed a certain sum which experience had shown could be borne without inconvenience; so in future, a similar liability will be held to attach to the provincial outlay of capital applied to these objects, otherwise than from the revenues of year. The provincial revenues will be made to bear the net charge for all interest on such capital, after deducting the net receipts from the works; and the net burden of interest thus thrown on the provincial resources year by year will not be allowed to exceed the sum which in each case experience shows that they can bear without inconvenience or undue interference with other administrative demands.

76. It will manifestly be a necessary condition of success in carrying out such a policy that the works undertaken shall in fact produce the growing income from which to meet the gradual increase of interest charge, and it therefore becomes essential to examine very strictly the character of all projects brought forward for execution, so that borrowed capital shall not, under any circumstances, be supplied for any work of which it cannot reasonably be anticipated that it will in a definite period of time produce a net income at least as great as the interest on the capital outlay upon it.

77. Further, the same limitation that it is thus necessary to apply to the grant of borrowed money to these works, must also be applied to the grant of all funds the expenditure of which does not appear as a direct charge against the revenues of the year, under which will be included the new resources lately specially created to provide a surplus from which to meet charges on account of the relief or prevention of famine.

78. The sum that is likely to be available for capital outlay on works of this class from the ordinary revenues would, under any circumstances, be small, and the inconvenience of distinguishing in the accounts between outlay from ordinary revenue, and that met from other sources, would be great. The justification for granting, for productive works, funds from the surplus revenues which might otherwise be applied to the extinction of debt, is, that so far as it prevents an increase of debt, it will virtually be equivalent to a corresponding discharge of debt; a condition however that cannot be fulfilled unless the works are properly remunerative. In all cases then the interest on the whole capital, from whatever sources it is obtained, must be secured generally by the provincial revenues, and specially in each case by the ascertained profitable character of the work, so far as a careful examination can serve to test it.

79. It will be seen that the general policy thus explained necessarily starts with the acceptance, for a limited period, of a dead weight of interest charge during the time when the income of the works is not fully developed. This charge may properly be met from the provincial revenues at the disposal of the Local Governments for carrying out works of internal improvement; and Her Majesty's Government has recognized the propriety of thus applying the local resources, subject to the general obligation that rests on Local Governments to see that the essential wants of the provinces under their administration are provided for in the manner that shall on the whole be most conducive to their well-being.

80. The reasons that support this view will likewise justify the Government of India in accepting, in proof of the financial sufficiency of the estimated income of any proposed work, during what may be termed the unremunerative period of its operation, a calculation which should include any well established saving of outlay that would follow upon the execution of the work, such as the reduction of the cost of maintenance of a road which would be diminished in consequence of the opening of a line of railway.

81. So also in the case of any work undertaken avowedly with the intention of its being wholly or in part paid for by any special rate or cess imposed, outside of all general rates or taxes, on those likely to benefit by the work, the proceeds of any such special rate would be properly included with any ordinary receipts due to specific payments for the actual use of the work as income in the estimate of financial return.

82. In these cases, and possibly in others, special considerations will present themselves, on which the Government of India will have to form a judgment as they arise, but the general principles that have now been laid down will indicate the spirit in which any such proposals will hereafter be dealt with.

83. Within the limits thus marked out, the Government of India will endeavour to meet the reasonable requirements of the Local Governments for funds, in addition to those available for expenditure from the ordinary revenues, to carry out works of material improvement, especially such as will have for their more immediate effect the protection of the country against the effects of famine, whether by supplying improved means of communication, or of irrigation, or otherwise. The power of the Government of India to do this, however, will be necessarily restricted by the amount that it can spare from the surplus revenues, or raise by loan without unduly forcing the money market, or coming under inconvenient liabilities. Neither can it consistently with the instructions of Her Majesty's Government enlarge the borrowed grants beyond the sums that can be raised in India.

84. It will be the wish of the Governor General in Council to comply as far as possible with the wishes of the Local Governments in carrying out the policy thus explained, subject of course to any instructions of a general or special character that may be given by the Secretary of State, or that may be found otherwise necessary to secure financial regularity or administrative convenience.

85. Under orders of the Secretary of State, works of the class now under consideration will henceforth be designated as Productive Public Works, and the expressions Extraordinary Works and Grants will cease to be employed. The whole of the rules now in force as to the preparation of designs and estimates, and the sanction of works hitherto called Extraordinary, and as to the grants of funds to carry out such works and the manner of rendering the accounts, will however continue to be applicable to all Productive Public Works already constructed or hereafter undertaken.

86. As a rule, all Productive Works, which will for the most part consist of Works of Irrigation or Navigation and Railways (excluding however the Guaranteed Railways, which will continue to be managed as heretofore), within the territories of the several Local Governments and Administrations, will be carried out under their direct orders and financial management, subject only to a general control by the Government of India, and in the manner described in the detailed rules that will be issued hereafter. The earliest possible effect will be given to this arrangement.

87. His Excellency the Viceroy, when addressing the Legislative Council on the introduction of the new measures of taxation, thus stated the intentions of the Government in relation to the execution of Protective Public Works :—

“For the attainment of this object, the material appliances we intend to promote, by means of additional revenue, are cheap railroads and extended irrigation works. We are conscious of the reproach we should justly incur if, after such a declaration as I have now made, the prosecution of these necessary works were commenced, suspended, or relinquished, according to the increased or relaxed pressure of annual circumstance, or the intermittent activity of spasmodic effort. We, therefore, propose to entrust, in the first instance, to the Local Governments the duty of framing a sufficient and carefully considered scheme of local railroad and irrigation works. We are prepared to provide them with the means whereby they may from year to year work systematically forwards and upwards to the completion of such a scheme. The funds locally raised for this purpose will be locally applied. But Provincial Governments will have to meet the cost of provincial famines out of provincial funds to the fullest extent those funds can bear. They will find that thriftless expenditure in one year may involve the risk of diminished allotments in subsequent years; and I cannot doubt that the unavoidable recognition of this fact will make them wisely eager to spend the requisite proportion of their annual income upon well-planned and carefully estimated railway and irrigation works which will be their best insurance against the losses of famine, and the postponement of all administrative progress which famine generally entails. It will be the special duty of the Public Works Department of this Government to keep those objects constantly in view of the Local Governments, and to assist them, no less constantly, in their endeavours to give a rational preference to really useful and remunerative works, over those more captivating, but less compensating, subjects of expenditure which, in all comparatively small communities, so powerfully appeal to provincial pride, professional proclivities, or popular pleasure."

88. In amplification of these views, His Excellency has subsequently recorded a Minute, in which are laid down the principles that will henceforth guide the Financial and Public Works Departments in dealing with projects for Public Works designed to improve the internal communications of the country or to increase the means of irrigation, by which works protection from the consequences of famine can best be secured. The Minute of His Excellency is appended to this Resolution (Appendix F).

ORDERED, that this Resolution, with the annexed Statement and Appendices A to G, be published in a Gazette of India Extraordinary, and that copy thereof be forwarded to Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India; and also for information and guidance to each Department of the Government of India;

to each Local Government and Administration;

to the Comptroller General; and to each Accountant General and Deputy Accountant General in independent charge.

STATEMENT IN EXPLANATION OF THE ACCOUNTS OF BRITISH
INDIA FOR THE YEAR 1876-77, THE LATEST ESTI-
MATES FOR THE YEAR 1877-78, AND THE FIRST
ESTIMATES FOR THE YEAR 1878-79.

THE Accounts of the Public Revenue and Expenditure and Receipts Preliminary and Disbursements of British India, in 1876-77, are herewith presented, together with the Regular Estimates based upon the latest information in the possession of the Government, of the Revenue and Expenditure and Receipts and Disbursements of the current year 1877-78, and the Budget Estimates of the Revenue and Expenditure and Receipts and Disbursements of 1878-79.

FORMS OF THE ACCOUNTS AND ESTIMATES.

For reasons given by the Hon'ble Sir John Strachey in the Financial Statement dated 15th March 1877, the Abstracts then published were compiled in rupees. In accordance with instructions received from Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, some important changes have been introduced into the forms now adopted, and other modifications have been made which call for explanation.

The system of exhibiting the amounts in conventional pounds sterling of ten Rupees has been reverted to and, except where the context, or some specific assertion indicates the contrary, the same conventional notation is employed throughout this Statement and its Appendix.

Two new adjusting Heads of Account, Balances of the Local Governments decreased and Balances of the Local Governments increased, were introduced last year, in order to provide for the consolidation of the Accounts of the Provincial Governments with those of the Imperial Government without disturbance of the independence of the Provincial Finances. The revenues actually collected, and the expenditure actually incurred, are recorded in the Public Accounts, just as they would be recorded if there were no internal or domestic contracts between the Supreme Government and the Local Governments; but, if the revenue of a Local Government exceeds its expenditure, the excess is paid to it from the Imperial Treasury; if, on the contrary, its expenditure exceeds its revenue, the Local Government must make good the deficiency to the Imperial Treasury. By the particular terminology originally used for the new adjusting Heads, it was intended to emphasise and stereotype the fundamental rule that the Local Governments shall so administer their affairs as never to exhaust the balances at their credit with the Imperial Government. Now, however, it is thought better to adopt the fuller titles Adjusting receipts from Provincial Governments (Provincial Deficits) and Adjusting payments to Provincial Governments (Provincial Surpluses).

Summary.
 Division of Revenues by Classification Local and Whole

Besides the resources provided from the General or Imperial Revenues, the Local Governments have, more or less absolutely at their disposal for provincial uses, considerable sums of money provided otherwise—as, for example, the revenues from Ferries, Tolls, Cattle Pounds, the Nuddea and Calcutta Canals, Local Rates and Cesses, and, in the Central Provinces, the Pandhary tax inherited from the Mahratta Government. When the system of Provincial Service contracts was initiated in 1871-72, it was thought that it would be convenient to include this separate Revenue and Expenditure in the Provincial Accounts and Estimates; but, as this amalgamation was found to obscure comparisons between the new and the old systems, it was postponed. The existence of the two Accounts side by side has, however, produced difficulty and confusion, for it has never been found possible to separate them perfectly; and, meanwhile, an important part of the public Revenue and Expenditure has been excluded from the General Accounts of the Empire. The Provincial Service system has now passed from the experimental stage, and, owing to its successive developments and to the progress of other events, it would now be as difficult as it would be useless to institute detailed comparisons between it and the system which it has superseded. Altogether, the Government of India consider that the best solution of present difficulties will be to adopt now the policy of the complete unification of the Public Accounts: there seems in short no sufficient reason why the Revenue and Expenditure of the country, and the transactions of the Local Governments, should be divided into two categories differing from each other in no essential characteristics. The Government of India has, therefore, determined that, from the beginning of 1878-79, the separate Revenue and Expenditure of the Provincial Governments shall be incorporated in the General Estimates and Accounts of the Revenue and Expenditure of the country, which will, thenceforth, show the Whole Public Revenue and Expenditure of British India. It must be clearly understood that the Government of India does not intend, by thus incorporating these transactions in the General Accounts, to prescribe, or authorise, any change of practice in respect to them; and, in particular, that, to whatever extent the application of any of these funds is governed by law, such law will continue to be exactly as binding as at present.

Change in Situation of Funds.

Being Local Funds.

The receipts and disbursements of those Local Funds which are appropriated to specially defined purposes, or are quasi-private property, and are not, at any stage, under the direct control of the Local Governments, and do not affect whole Provinces, will still be excluded from the General Estimates and Accounts, and shown in subsidiary Statements; but, excepting the Port Funds, their amount will be unimportant.

Provincial
 Contributions
 Funds.

Heads of Provincial Rates.

One effect of this change will be the disappearance of the Head of Provincial Contributions, which was required only for the adjustment of transactions between the two separate purses of the Local Governments. On the other hand, two new Heads of Provincial Rates must be opened, one on each side of the Account, to show, on the Revenue side, the whole of the Provincial Rates now incorporated and, on the Expenditure side, the cost of their collection. The rest of the expenditure of the Local Governments, whether met from the Provincial Rates, or from assignments of the general or Imperial Revenues, will be distributed under the existing Heads of Account.

Provincial
 Guaranteed
 Loans to be in Gross.

Hitherto the guaranteed interest paid to Railway and other Companies has been shown net, after deduction of the net traffic receipts: henceforth, the whole Net Traffic Receipts received from the Companies, including all the gain by exchange whether upon capital or revenue account, will be shown, in one line, as revenue, and the gross payments of interest and surplus profits to the Companies, together with the cost of land and of Government supervision, will appear, in another line, as expenditure.

Public Works
 Expenses.

A new Head has been introduced to show separately the working expenses and maintenance charges of Irrigation Works, which charges have hitherto been incorporated under Public Works Ordinary. The growing importance of these works demands this separation. From this Head and, henceforth, from the Head of State Railway Expenditure will be excluded all capital expenditure: the object being to afford the means of a comparison between the Revenue and the Working Expenses of these Works. Such capital expenditure as may not, under Rule, be transferred to the Head Productive Public Works will be recorded under Public Works Ordinary. Preliminary.

Under instructions from the Secretary of State, the Heading Productive Public Works has been substituted for Public Works Extraordinary. The change is significant of a more rigid adherence to the sound policy of excluding nothing from the Total Expenditure upon a comparison of which with the Revenue the surplus or deficit of each year is ascertained, excepting expenditure which may confidently be expected to produce a direct net return at least equal to interest upon it at the current rate. NEW HEADING PRODUCTIVE
PUBLIC WORKS.

A fresh Abstract Statement No. II is appended in the form in which the Secretary of State has resolved, for the future, to present the Accounts of the Revenue and Expenditure of British India to Parliament. The design of this change of form is that the transactions relating to the investment of capital by the State in works of material improvement, and the financial consequences of such investments, may, as far as possible, be distinguished, upon the face of the balance-sheet of the country, from the rest of the transactions of the State. NEW PARLIAMEN-
TARY FORM OF ABSTRACT.

The chief differences between the Abstracts Nos. I and II will be that, in Abstract No. II, (1) the interest on that part of the public debt which may be regarded as having been incurred for the construction of Productive Public Works and, as soon as the necessary enquiries are completed, that portion of the Land-Revenue which is believed to be due to the Irrigation Works of which the cost is included in the Capital Expenditure thus distinguished, will be shown separately; and (2) the Account will be broken up into two subdivisions, the first intended to show the results of all the transactions that are not connected with State investments in Productive Public Works, and the second those that are dependent on such investments. The Total Revenue and Expenditure and the Surplus or Deficit will be the same in both Abstracts; but the division, in the new Abstract, of the Revenue and Expenditure into two categories will, when it is completely effected, enable a judgment to be formed of the general financial results of the State investments in Public Works, a subject on which much doubt has been expressed, and on which the older form of Abstract did not throw full light. The new form cannot, however, be prepared with sufficient completeness to answer its purpose fully until the Government of India is in a position, which it is not at present, to distinguish the Land Revenue due to the Capital Expenditure of the State on Irrigation. For this reason, the present Statement does not contain detailed remarks upon the results shown in the new Abstract No. II. OLD AND NEW VERSIONS COMPARED.

The importance and interest of the separate Provincial Finances call now for their separate exhibition and illustration. A new Abstract Statement No. III is, accordingly, annexed to show the Accounts and Estimates of the whole Revenue and Expenditure for which the Provincial Governments have accepted separate responsibilities, with the resulting surplus or deficit accruing to these Governments. The entries in this Abstract correspond generally with the entries in the General Abstracts Nos. I and II; but there are some important distinctions. On the Revenue side is shown the Allotment placed at the credit of the Local Governments for Provincial Services in addition to the revenues specifically assigned to them: no corresponding entry is required, or would be admissible, in the General Accounts. On the Expenditure side are shown, first, the portion of the Interest on the Funded and Unfunded Debt which is made good by Provincial Governments for the capital invested in Provincial Productive Public Works; secondly, the value of the stationery and stamps supplied to the several Provinces from the Central Stores; and thirdly, the amount contributed to the Imperial Treasury from the Provincial Rates and Taxes by way of insurance against Pandemics. In the general Imperial Accounts all these charges are either deducted from the Provincial surplus which would otherwise be payable to the Provincial Governments, or, as the case may be, added to the deficit which must be made good by the Provincial Governments. ABSTRACT OF
PROVINCIAL ACCOUNTS.

ACCOUNTS, 1876-77.

The Public Revenue and Expenditure and Receipts and Disbursements actually recorded in the Accounts of 1876-77 may be thus compared with the Regular Estimates:

	Regular Estimates.	Accounts.	Better.	Worse.
Opening Balances ...	17,872,400	17,872,398		7

£95,522.

It thus appears that the whole Expenditure recorded in the Accounts of 1876-77, including Famine and Productive Public Works, exceeded the recorded Revenue by £5,992,062, being £86,238 less than was expected in March last; the expenditure on Productive Public Works was more by £9,284 than was then estimated; so that the net result of the rest of the Accounts was better than the Regular Estimates by £95,522. This result was attained notwithstanding that the loss of revenue and the expenditure attributed to the Famine brought to account in 1876-77 exceeded the estimates by a net amount which cannot be calculated at less than £350,000. This excess is nominal, and requires no explanation, because the distribution of the financial effects of the Famine in Southern India between the Accounts of that year and those of this year is a detail of no importance. The excess net charge for the Famine was counterbalanced by the postponement to 1877-78 of some heavy payments due at Home to Her Majesty's Government on account of Her Majesty's British Forces serving, or having served in India. There are many other variations in the Accounts from the Regular Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure: but none of them are of sufficient interest to require further notice.

THE DEBT LIFTS AND SINK BALANCE.

The principal cause of the improvement (£2,690,634) in the Surplus of "Other Receipts," that is to say, in the Debt Account, which contributed most of the increase of £2,776,865 in the Closing Balance in the Public Treasuries, is that £1,000,000 was borrowed in England in the month of March 1877 instead of, as had been intended, later in the calendar year 1877. The other variations, though aggregating a large sum, are none of them of prominent importance; but the following may be mentioned:—

The Maharaja Sindhiá paid in advance, on account of His Highness's Railway Loan, £56,000; certain loans amounting to £140,000 (chiefly in the Bombay Presidency) were not taken so soon as was expected; the Guaranteed Railway Companies supplied themselves to the amount of £244,000 with stores from their Capital reserve instead of, as had been estimated, by new disbursements of cash; bills and assay certificates remained over for discharge in 1877-78 to the amount of £392,000; the deficit of Local Revenues was smaller than the Estimate by £154,000.

In the following Table the Accounts of 1876-77 are similarly with the Budget Estimates for that year:

	Budget Estimates.	Accounts.	Better.	Worse.
	£	£	£	£
Opening Balance	16,990,800	17,872,393	881,593	...

Expenditure	58,778,200	62,014,339	...	3,236,139
Other Disbursements	57,202,700	60,417,015	...	3,214,315
Closing Balance	15,228,500	15,484,665	256,165	...
Deficit of Revenue compared with Expenditure	3,615,000	5,992,062	...	2,377,062
Less invested in Productive Public Works ...	3,759,000	3,809,284	...	50,284
Remaining Deficit	(Surplus) 144,000	2,182,778	...	2,326,778
Deficit of Revenue compared with Expenditure	3,615,000	5,992,062	...	2,377,062
Excess of Other Receipts compared with Other Disbursements	1,852,700	3,584,334	1,731,634	...
Reduction of Balances in the Public Treasuries	1,762,300	2,407,728	...	645,428

The outturn of the Revenue compared with the Expenditure was worse than the Budget Estimates, altogether, by £2,326,778, and, if the expenditure on Productive Public Works be included, then by £2,377,062.

The cause of this failure was the Famine, which was not foreseen when the Estimates were prepared: the Accounts show a worse result by, probably, £3,450,000 than they would have shown if there had been no Famine: thus, apart from that calamity, there was an improvement in the whole Account of £1,072,938, which is more than accounted for by the improved earnings of the Guaranteed Railways (£1,149,000), of which some part no doubt was due to the increase of traffic arising from the Famine relief operations.

The Expenditure having thus, owing to the Famine, exceeded the Revenue, it was necessary to supply ways and means for the service of the year otherwise. Fortunately, the opening balance in the Public Treasuries was larger than was estimated by £881,593, of which £645,428 was absorbed in supplying the deficit of Revenue. The remaining £1,731,634 was obtained under the Debt Heads. The excess amount raised by Public Loans was £1,772,145, so that, but for the Famine and the consequent necessity for increased Loans, the net result of the transactions on the Debt Account would have differed from the Budget Estimates by only £40,511. If, therefore, the effects of the unforeseen Famine be eliminated, it will be found that the Accounts correspond satisfactorily with the Estimates made two years ago; the only exception being the great improvement in the Guaranteed Railway Earnings, which was not anticipated.

The transactions for which the Local Governments had accepted defined separate responsibilities resulted, in 1876-77, in a small surplus, to them, of £5,842.

The expenditure on the realignment of the Western Jumna Canal (£51,000) is necessary for sanitary reasons and to remove serious defects of original construction, but will not add materially to the Revenue; and, as explained by Sir John Strachey last year, it cannot be predicated concerning the Indus Valley and Punjab Northern Lines that they will yield a direct revenue sufficient to cover the interest on their cost. Strictly speaking, therefore, £1,308,000, the outlay on these works, should rather have been added to the deficit on the ordinary account, than included in the Productive Expenditure of the year.

The Accounts of the three last years 1874-77 record an expenditure of £12,329,484 on Productive Public Works, being only £798,162 less than the net sum borrowed (£13,127,646), and only £194,636 less than the aggregate net deficit (£12,524,120) of revenue during the three years as recorded in the Accounts. It must, however, be remembered that, of the expenditure thus recorded under the Head of Productive Public Works, £3,873,000 spent on the Indus Valley and Punjab Northern State Railways and on the realignment of the Western Jumna Canal cannot be expected to be fully reproductive.

Thus, if only the expenditure on truly Productive Public Works during the three years be deducted from the rest, there would remain a deficit of £4,068,285. As explained by the Hon'ble Sir John Strachey last year, it is necessary to make other adjustments before the true financial indications of the Public Accounts can be appreciated. If these adjustments were made and no expenditure were excluded excepting such as may be expected, with some confidence, to be reproductive, the true deficit of the three years would amount to about £5,878,000.* On the other hand, an expenditure of £4,891,845 is recorded in the Accounts of this period for Famine Relief, and, if count be taken of loss of revenue and of expenditure due to the Famine but recorded under other Service Heads, the Accounts of the three years must be the worse for the Famine by perhaps net 6 millions sterling. Upon the whole, considering the financial inconvenience of the unprecedentedly rapid divergence of the values of gold and silver during this period, the general result does not appear to be unfavourable. The true deficit of the three years does not, probably, exceed the cost of Famine recorded in the Accounts of this period; and, though there may be good reasons for excluding from the Head Productive Public Works the £3,873,000 spent on the realignment of the Western Jumna Canal and on the Frontier State Railways, yet that large expenditure need hardly be accepted, without reserve, as an ordinary incident of the administration.

The improvement of the opening balance has been already explained in the review of the Accounts of 1876-77.

When the Estimates of the current year were prepared a year ago, the Gross Deficit of Revenue, as compared with the whole recorded expenditure, was expected to be £4,249,700, which would be reduced to £621,700 if the expenditure on Productive Public Works were excluded. The Gross Deficit is now estimated at £8,308,000 and the Deficit on the Ordinary Account at £3,431,000, being in excess of the Original Estimates by £4,058,300 and £2,809,300 respectively.

As last year, so, again, this year, this disappointment is to be attributed entirely to the Famine. In March last year, the Government of India ventured to hope that the Famine in Southern India was drawing to a close; and the Estimates were framed in the expectation of the return of prosperity as soon as the South-West Monsoon should come: but the Monsoon did not come till after much delay, and indeed, in some parts of India, it scarcely came at all. Consequently, the sufferings of the people and the drain upon the public treasuries not only continued, but assumed proportions which were, at one time, gravely alarming. In the Bombay Presidency, although the rain fell irregularly, much loss of crop occurred, and men's minds remained for a long time in uncertainty and apprehension, yet the relief expenditure was kept within bounds, so that the present estimate of the cost of the Famine in that Presidency is less than the estimate of last year: the Government of Bombay and its officers are to be congratulated upon the efficiency and economy with which the disaster was met there. In Madras, the gross cost of the Famine, after setting off only the price recovered for the grain provided by the Government of Madras, is now estimated at £8,687,000 in all, being much more than double the amount estimated a year ago. The Government cannot hope now that operations will altogether cease in the Madras Presidency until the next South-West Monsoon shall set in favourably. The Famine has been, in like manner, prolonged and intensified in Mysore also.

Moreover, the result of the want of rain in Upper India was that, throughout the North-Western Provinces and Oudh and a great part of the Punjab, as well as in the Native States of Rajputana and Central India, the autumn (kharif) crops upon which multitudes depend for food, almost wholly failed, and there ensued great distress which is not yet, by any means, at an end. At one time there was imminent apprehension that the spring (rabi) crops must also be wanting throughout vast regions, in which case an appalling calamity must have followed. Happily, timely and abundant rain removed these gloomy forebodings. an unusually large breadth of land was sown with spring crops, and there is now good reason to hope for a fairly abundant spring harvest in Northern India. The Lower Provinces of Bengal, the Central Provinces, and Burmah have, throughout, been prosperous, obtaining from the necessities of their neighbours great prices for abundant crops.

EFFECT OF FAMINE ON ARMY.

ARMY.

LOSS AND OTHER REVENUES.

The general effect of the Famine upon the finances of 1877-78 may be traced in the Abstract Statements, in the entries opposite to I Land Revenue and Famine Relief. An average year's land revenue is now about £21,400,000; the land revenue of the current year is expected to be only £20,103,000: a loss of not less than £1,300,000 may be set down to the Famine here. The estimated expenditure on Famine Relief is £5,234,000: this includes, as will be presently explained, the greater part of the excess outlay upon the Public Establishments generally: it does not include £200,000, the estimated addition to the cost of the Army in 1877-78 on account of the Famine; or £102,900 granted to the Governments of Madras and Bombay as opening balances at their credit on Provincial Account. There are also losses of Excise and Customs and of some other Revenues: but these are, perhaps, more than balanced by the excess net traffic earnings of the Guaranteed Railways. Upon the whole, the financial results of the Famine which will be recorded in the Accounts of 1877-78 may now be set down at net 6½ millions sterling, being upwards of 4¼ millions more than the estimate of March 1877.

NET ESTIMATED COST OF FAMINE.

The total net cost of the Famine then estimated was—

	£
In 1876-77	3,100,000
In 1877-78	2,150,000
TOTAL	5,250,000

The present Estimates are—

In 1876-77	3,450,000
In 1877-78	6,500,000
TOTAL	9,950,000

NET OUTLAY

Besides the actual cost of the Famine to British India, it has been necessary for the Government of India to lend £500,000 to Mysore and £500,000 to His Highness the Mahārājā Sindhia, making £1,000,000 in all. A large sum has also been expended on additions to the rolling-stock of the State Railways and on the construction of Railways which would not otherwise have been constructed: for instance, the Dhond and Manmar Line alone is estimated to cost £758,000 in the two years 1877-78 and 1878-79. Perhaps two-thirds of the £1,249,000 spent on Productive Public Works in excess of the Grant for the year is due to the Famine.

REASON OF DEFICIT WITH THE REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1877-78.

To revert, now, to the comparison of the Regular Estimates with the Budget Estimates of the year 1877-78, it will be observed that the excess deficit on the ordinary account (£2,809,300) is less than the excess cost of the Famine (net £4,350,000) by £1,540,700; in other words, that, if the Famine had not cost more than was expected a year ago, instead of a deficit of £3,431,000, the result of the year would have been a surplus on the ordinary account of £919,000. If the whole £6,500,000 net estimated cost of the Famine recorded in the Regular Estimates of 1877-78, be eliminated, then the surplus upon the ordinary account would be £3,069,000; and, assuming that £800,000 of the excess expenditure on Productive Public Works is due to the Famine, the Whole Expenditure, including Productive Works, would exceed the Regular revenue recorded during the year by only £1,008,000. The adjustments necessary to bring out the true financial condition of the year would have reduced the surplus on the ordinary account by £1,113,000; and once again it is necessary to remember that, of the total entry against Productive Public Works, £89,000 spent upon the Western Jumna realignment, and £1,659,000 on the Frontier Railways should rather be recorded as ordinary than extraordinary expenditure.* Nor must it be forgotten that some of the first-fruits of the recent financial measures are being reaped this year. The Governments of Bengal and the North-Western Provinces are contributing to the Imperial Exchequer, as the result of those measures, £279,200, as follows:—

Punjab	22,400
Central Provinces	9,000
Bombay	56,700
	189,800

The following are the detailed explanations of the differences between the Original and Present Estimates:—

REVENUE.

I, Land Revenue.—Less £837,800.

The chief defaulter is Madras, which is responsible for £656,600; Bombay, on the other hand, hopes to yield £129,200 more than estimated: thus the two Southern Presidencies together are expected to give £527,400 less than estimated. As a consequence of the drought in Northern India, the Punjab falls short by £25,700, and the North-Western Provinces and Oudh by £347,500. Other differences are unimportant.

III and 5, Forests.—Revenue more £49,800; Expenditure more £31,700; Net Revenue better £18,100; Net Revenue £179,000. The net increase is in Burmah £13,000, including the net price (£8,300) of some teak supplied to the Admiralty in England.

IV and 6, Excise.—Revenue less £59,700; Expenditure less £7,100: Net Revenue less £52,600; Net Revenue £2,402,000. There were net improvements as follows:—

* A more correct estimate of the real financial position in 1877-78 may, perhaps, be formed by making the following adjustments:—

	Compared with Whole Expenditure.	Compared with Expenditure exclusive of investments in Productive Public Works.
	£	£
Deficit of recorded Revenue according to the Accounts	8,308,000	3,431,000
Add credited from extinct Military Funds.	297,000	297,000
Saved by borrowing in England instead of remitting	815,000	815,000
Total	9,420,000	4,543,000
Transfer from Productive Public Works , expenditure not fully reproductive	1,748,000	1,748,000
Total	11,168,000	6,291,000
Deduct net cost of Famine, less the estimated annual average of £1,500,000	5,000,000	5,000,000

Esti- £10,000, Bengal £47,000, Bombay £34,000 (of which £15,000 is nominal, there having been 1877-78. an error of classification in the original Grant), the Central Provinces £10,000, and the Punjab
 £8,000; and deficits as follows:—North-Western Provinces and Oudh £22,000, and Madras £128,000.

Thus, the Famine in Southern India and the Drought in Upper India caused a net loss of Excise revenue compared with the Estimates (which were normal Estimates) of £131,000. This loss was compensated, to the extent of £80,000, by favourable returns in other Provinces; notably in Bengal, where, the Board of Revenue remarks, "the localisation of the Excise Revenue has instilled energy into the administration" of the department.

ASSESSED TAXES.

I and 7, Assessed Taxes.—The entries here (net £84,000) are for the License Tax in the North-Western Provinces, the only Province in which this tax was in operation in 1877-78.

PROVINCIAL RATES AND PROVINCIAL CONTRIBUTIONS.

VI, Provincial Rates, and XXVII, Provincial Contributions.—It was estimated that the Provincial Governments would contribute £415,100 to the Imperial Treasury from their own independent resources, the main tributaries being Bengal (£281,700), almost wholly for interest on the capital invested in the Provincial Canals and Railways, and the North-Western Provinces (£100,000), on the same account. In the Budget Estimates these contributions were placed under the head "XXVII, Provincial Contributions."

LOCAL RATES.

To enable these Governments to bear their new burdens, the Government of Bengal was authorised to impose a Public Works cess (Bengal Provincial Public Works Act (II), 1877), and, by Act VII of 1877, the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces was empowered to apply, at his discretion, in payment of charges incurred on account of Canals and Railways declared to be works of general provincial utility, any sum not exceeding one-tenth of the rates levied under the North-Western Provinces Local Rates Act, 1871: the sum actually so applied is expected to be only £28,000. Further, by the North-Western Provinces License Act (VIII), 1877, the Government of the North-Western Provinces was empowered to levy a license tax on trades and dealings, the results of which in 1877-78 are shown, as has been explained, under the preceding Head, "I Assessed Taxes."

LOCAL TAXES.

The proceeds of the Bengal Public Works Cess Act, 1877, (£185,000) and the North-Western Provinces Amended Local Rates Act, 1877, (£28,000) are shown in the Regular Estimates for 1877-78 under the Head "VI Provincial Rates."

TRANSACTIONS HOW FAR IN THE MONTHS.

The actual contributions to be paid by the Local Governments, whether under the arrangements completed last year, as just described, or under the further arrangements for Famine Insurance, described in the preliminary Resolution, appear in the separate Abstract Statement of Provincial Revenues and Expenditure No. III. The entries in that Statement under 1 Interest, contain the gross amounts payable by the Governments of Bengal and the North-Western Provinces and Oudh as interest (including the imperial share of profits) on the capital cost of the Provincial Works for which those Governments have accepted responsibility; to ascertain the net charge upon the Local Governments on this account, the net revenue which they receive from the Canals and Railways made over to them, must be deducted from the amount shown under 1 Interest. The entry opposite to Famine Insurance is the total amount which will be paid by the Local Governments, in consequence of the recent legislation as explained in the preliminary Resolution. The effect of the entry of those sums in this way in that pro forma Account, is to reduce the Surplus payable to the Provincial Governments by the Imperial Government, or, as the case may be, to increase the Deficit payable by the Provincial Governments to the Imperial Government: the relief to the Imperial Government appears in the General Finance Accounts, Abstracts I and II, only in the shape of less Surplus to pay to the Provincial Governments, or more Deficit to receive from them.

A necessary result of all this is, that the contributions from the Governments of Bengal and the North-Western Provinces shown in the Original Estimates under "Provincial Contributions" disappear in the Regular Estimates.

It may be mentioned here that, as the Government of Bengal found a difficulty in levying the Provincial Public Works Cess during the first quarter of 1877-78, the Government of India consented to reduce the gross amount of interest to be contributed by that Government in 1877-78 from £274,700 to £200,000 only: the net amount that will be actually contributed is now estimated at £5,900 less, viz., £194,100. Regular Estimates, 1877-78

VII and 9.—Customs.—Revenue more £143,100; Expenditure more £6,700; Net Revenue more £136,400; Net Revenue £2,430,000. The net improvements were, in Bengal £194,000 and Bombay £67,000; the failures were in Burmah £21,000, Madras £60,000, and on the Inland Customs Line £44,000. Here, again, the failures in Burmah, Madras, and Upper India, aggregating £125,000, are due entirely to the Famine. The estimate, as a whole, was abnormally low, and the Regular Estimate shows considerable recovery, great prosperity in Bengal having counterbalanced the loss in Madras and Upper India: Bombay has nearly regained its usual condition.

VIII and 10.—Salt.—Revenue more £223,000; Expenditure more £12,300; Net Revenue more £210,700; Net Revenue £6,035,000. The Net Revenue would have been greater by £165,000 but for the rectification of an erroneous procedure in Madras, where it has been the habit to credit as Revenue, Government Securities deposited by Salt Contractors; if it had not been necessary to make this correction, the Net Revenue would have been £6,200,000. The improvements are as follows:—Bombay £154,000, Bengal £128,000, Inland Customs Line £35,000 (would have been £81,000 but for the cost of certain negotiations with the Native States in Rajputana, and indemnity payments already made to some of them). The defaulters are, Madras £102,000 (but for the transfer already described, there would have been an improvement of £63,000), and Burmah £3,000.

By the Salt Act (XVIII), 1877, which became law on the 27th December 1877, the duty on Salt consumed in Bombay and Madras was raised from Rs. 1-13 to Rs. 2-8 a maund; the duty on Salt consumed in Sindh was raised from the special rate of 8 annas to the general rate of Rs. 2-8 a maund; and, simultaneously, the duty in Upper India was reduced from Rs. 3 to Rs. 2-12, and the duty in Bengal from Rs. 3-4 to Rs. 3-2 a maund: some other changes were also made. Although these measures were taken with a view to the eventual equalisation of the Salt Duties throughout India, still they were calculated to produce a temporary net yearly addition to the Revenue of £300,000: it is impossible to say how much of the considerable increase of Revenue this year is due to their operation; the expectation was that little increase would result at first; and it is probable that not much of the excess Revenue is due to the increased rates of duty: but that this Head of Revenue has been exceptionally productive this year. CHANGES IN SALT DUTIES.

IX and 11.—Opium.—Revenue more £558,000; Expenditure more £359,000; Net Revenue more £229,000; Net Revenue £6,479,000. Of the improvement, £10,000 is in Bombay and the rest in Bengal.

On the 16th July 1877, the duty on a chest of opium exported from Bombay was raised by Rs. 50; that is to say, the duty on a chest of opium for export from Bombay was increased, if weighed at Ajunir, from Rs. 625 to Rs. 675, and, if weighed elsewhere, from Rs. 600 to Rs. 650. This measure was adopted in order to prevent the loss of revenue caused by the displacement in China by Malwa opium, of Bengal opium, which, at present prices, yields, on a quantity of opium equal to the contents of a chest of Malwa opium, a net revenue of about Rs. 1,000. INCREASE OF PAPER DUTY.

The drought in Upper India extended to Malwa with such disastrous effects upon the poppy cultivation there, that the Governor General's Agent, after careful personal inspection, does not expect the crop to yield 25,000 chests of opium, which is less than half an average crop. The effect of this anticipated failure has been, for some time past, manifest; the market prices having risen, at Bombay, from Rs. 1,275 for new, and Rs. 1,312 for old opium, to Rs. 1,540 and Rs. 1,590, or by more than 20 per cent.: prices have, indeed, been still higher. In consequence of the stimulus of these high prices, the falling-off in the export of Malwa opium this year has been less than might have been expected; 41,651 chests passed the scales to the end of February, compared with the following corresponding figures:— FAILURE OF MALWA CROP.

Regular Estimates, 1877-78.

BENGAL OPIUM.

Forty-nine thousand five hundred chests of Bengal Opium have been sold during the year, at an average of Rs. 1,266-6-7, yielding £4,268,760, which may be compared with the following figures :—

TREASURY PRODUCE, 1878.

AMPS.

The produce of Bengal Opium in 1876-77 was again abundant the harvest yielding 67,167 chests: thus the stock in hand on the 1st of January 1878 was no less than 102,482 chests. Seeing the large supply thus accumulated, the Government of India, on the 27th April, notified 54,000 chests for sale in the calendar year 1878, leaving for sale in 1879, 48,482 chests of old opium, in addition to the crop of 1877-78 now on the ground. At the same time, the price paid to the cultivators was reduced from Rs. 5 to Rs. 4½ a seer 70° consistence, and the Chutia Nagpur Agency and the Rohini Factory were closed. The cultivators have manifested no unwillingness to accept the reduced price; and, had not the season in Bengal, as in Malwa, been unpropitious, there would probably have been no great contraction of the area under poppy.

X and 12, Stamps.—Revenue more £88,600; Expenditure more £4,800; Net Revenue more £83,800; Net Revenue £2,882,000; being more by £140,000 than the highest net revenue ever before collected. The improvements are as follows: Assam, £6,000; Bengal, £90,000; the Punjab, £25,000; Burmah, £6,000; Central Provinces, £10,000; North-Western Provinces and Oudh, £4,000. On the other hand, Madras has defaulted by £22,000, and Bombay by £30,000. Stores in England, too, have cost £3,000 more than was estimated.

The great increase in Bengal is partly accidental, being due to the effects of the Land Registration Act (VII) of 1876, the operation of which will be for the most part temporary: this Act, though not passed for revenue purposes, was estimated to yield £59,000 of Stamp Revenue. The failure in the Minor Presidencies is probably due to the Famine.

INTS.

XI and 13, Mint.—Revenue more £274,000; Expenditure more £42,800; Net Revenue more £231,200; Net Revenue £317,000,—the largest net revenue ever received, with the single exception of the year 1865-66, when a net revenue of £321,793 was recorded.

NAVY COINAGE OF SILVER.

The net imports of silver in the first ten months of the year amounted to the enormous sum of £13,115,767; and the still larger sum of £13,695,559 has been actually coined during these ten months. It has been necessary to keep both the Calcutta and Bombay Mints working, for months together, to the utmost of their power, and the exertions of the Mint and Assay Masters and their establishments deserve public acknowledgment. The brunt of the work has fallen upon the Bombay Mint, which has coined during the ten months £9,388,134; the Calcutta Mint has coined £4,307,425.

BULLION ADVANCES: CURRENCY DEPARTMENT.

By the Currency Law, as it stands, the Paper Currency Department is bound to issue notes, convertible on demand into coin, in exchange for all silver bullion, after it has been assayed. The Government has statutory power to interpose any interval which it thinks proper between the assay of the bullion and the issue of notes in exchange therefor; but, although the obligation to make these great advances has caused, this year, considerable inconvenience, and even some anxiety, no such usance has been, hitherto, imposed. Since the end of August, the amount of the currency reserve absorbed in advances upon bullion has always largely exceeded £2,000,000; throughout December and January and the first week of February, the sum thus locked up exceeded £3,000,000; and, at one time, it stood at £3,680,560. At that time, however, the circulation and, therefore, the coin reserve, were so inflated that no uneasiness was felt. The pressure upon the resources of the Currency Department was really greatest on the 15th October, when, although only the more moderate sum of £2,629,884 was outstanding as bullion advances, there remained a coin reserve of only £3,864,473 to support outstanding notes for £12,487,608.

MISCELLANEOUS.

XXI and 30, Miscellaneous.—Revenue more £59,700; Expenditure less £2,600; Net Revenue more £62,300. The only item deserving notice in India is a recovery from the Rangoon Port Fund of a loan of £7,700 which had been written off. The main improvement is at home, where the Cinchona produced upon the Government plantations was sold for £27,400 more than was estimated. Regular Estimates, 1877.

Irrigation.—Revenue more £17,400; Expenditure more £4,900; Net Revenue more £12,500; Net Revenue £51,000. The improvement is mostly in the North-Western Provinces, where the drought was favorable to the revenue under this Head.

EXPENDITURE.

I and XVIII.—Interest.—Expenditure more £101,500; Revenue more £23,500; Net Expenditure more £78,000; Net Expenditure £5,212,000.

The Home Treasury spent net £7,500 less than the Grant: the whole excess was in India, and is explained entirely by the discount on the loan raised during the year which has been recorded under this Head. It was not formerly the practice to adjust the premium or discount on Loans as Revenue and Expenditure; but this is always now done. Four per cent. Bonds were sold in England during the year for £4,200,000, the premium thereon amounting to £59,000; in India, Four per cent. Promissory Notes were issued for £3,304,780, at an average rate of Rs. 96-6 per cent., the discount thereon amounting to £119,939: thus the net discount paid during the year amounted to £60,939. Moreover, the discount in India unadjusted at the beginning of the year exceeded the unadjusted premium in England by £53,956: thus the whole amount adjusted during the year will be £114,895.* The sum of £8,300 has been paid during the year as interest on loans raised for a temporary purpose, to which reference will again be made.

The following Table contains the usual statistics of the Funded Debt of India:—

* This assumes the current rate of interest to be four per cent.

Thus the average rate of yearly interest upon the registered debt of India would appear to be 4·29 per cent., whereas the interest to be obtained upon an investment in four per cent. securities of the Government of India is 4·06 or 3·88 per cent., according as the interest is payable in silver in India or in gold in London.

The capital of the Railway Companies and Madras Irrigation Company is £97,298,508, the interest upon which amounting to £4,706,000, is guaran-ar Esti- teed in gold in London from Indian Revenues. The total debt of India there-1877-78. fore of all kinds is as follows :—

According to this table, the average interest per cent. paid upon the whole debt of India is 4.53.

The percentage of the Rupee debt held by Natives of India on the 31st December is estimated from the distribution of the actual payments of interest to have been as follows :—

Investments by Native States have increased this percentage of late years.

INDS.

3, Refunds and Drawbacks.—The saving of £18,000 is casual, and may not, after all, be realised. The refunds and drawbacks recorded during the last five years average £318,488, so that the latest estimate this year is unusually low.

REVENUE.

4, Land Revenue.—Excess expenditure £32,400 due to the Famine.

OFFICE.

14 and XII, Post Office.—Expenditure more £6,700; Revenue more £15,100; Net expenditure less £8,400; Net expenditure £60,000.

This is the smallest net expenditure recorded against the Post Office since the introduction of the system by which official correspondence is carried at specially favorable rates. The net charge is only £5,455 less than in 1876-77; but, then, the extra departmental expenditure in 1877-78 on account of the Famine is estimated at £12,000. Any one forming a judgment upon the finances of the Post Office should bear in mind that the expenditure recorded in 1877-78 includes subsidies paid to the British India Steam Navigation Company (£71,600), and the Euphrates and Tigris Company (£3,600), as well as India's share (£75,000) of the subsidy to the P. and O. Company; altogether £150,200. In a great part of the work done for these payments the Indian Post Office has comparatively little interest: the whole revenue received by India as its share of the postage realised from overland correspondence scarcely covers the cost of territorial conveyance in India. It should also be remembered that official correspondence is now carried at rates which are calculated to yield little or no departmental profit: of the revenue recorded, £131,000 is derived from official correspondence. On the other hand, the Post Office enjoys certain privileges, in that the mails are conveyed by the Guaranteed Railways at nominal rates, and that the State Railways are to carry the mails at cost price only.

The progress of the Post Office since 1856, when the uniform $\frac{1}{2}$ anna rate for letters was first introduced, has been remarkable, and at present there is no sign of its ceasing. Regular Estimates, 1877-78

			Articles received for delivery.	Revenue from private correspondence.	Post offices.	Postal lines.
			No.	£	No.	Mileage.
1855-56	33,286,000	159,052	753	36,313
1876-77	122,541,000	518,177	3,852	58,370

15 and XIII, Telegraphs.—Expenditure less £12,500; Revenue more £22,500; Net Expenditure less £35,000. The Net Grant to the Department was £180,000; the Net Expenditure is now expected to be £145,000,—a satisfactory improvement. TELEGRAPHS.

The Indo-European Line is a heavy drag upon the departmental finances, to which it contributes this year an expected deficit of £55,000. The Ceylon Line also imposes a considerable annual net charge upon India, from which relief is now being sought: there is no longer any sufficient reason why India should bear this burden for Ceylon. The net expenditure on the Indian lines alone is expected to be only about £85,000.

16, Administration.—Expenditure more £44,800. The chief excess is for the offices connected with the Government of India £35,400, and is to be attributed, for the most part, to expenses connected with the Famine, as, for example, the journey of His Excellency the Viceroy and Suite to the famine districts; telegraphic correspondence with Her Majesty's Government; and the appointment of special officers, &c. There is also an excess of £15,800 in Bombay, for the cost of a third Commissioner and for the carriage eastwards of coin from the Bombay Mint,—an obligation arising from the concession of convertibility to Currency Notes beyond their own circle. On the other hand, there is a nominal reduction of £6,000 in England owing to the transfer of some of the home expenditure to Stationery and Printing. ADMINISTRATION.

18 and XIV, Law and Justice and 19 and XV, Police.—Expenditure more £34,600; Revenue less £21,700; Net Expenditure more £56,300. The Famine has obscured the facts about these two Services, part of the expenditure upon which has been transferred to 31 Famine Relief: explanations in detail therefore seem useless. LAW AND JUSTICE AND POLICE.

20 and XVI, Marine.—Expenditure less £700; Revenue more £34,100; Net Expenditure less £34,800. The excess Revenue is in Bengal (£39,100), and is due to the great influx of shipping into Calcutta to carry grain to Madras. MARINE.

21 and XVII, Education.—Expenditure less £16,300; Revenue more £8,100; Net Expenditure less £24,400. The largest decreases of net expenditure are in Bengal £8,900, and the North-Western Provinces and Oudh £6,200. EDUCATION.

23, Stationery and Printing.—Expenditure more £26,800. Stores bought in England cost more by £22,700 than was expected, and there is an increase of £8,000 in Madras attributed to the Famine. STATIONERY AND PRINTING.

24, Political.—Expenditure more £67,000. Of the excess, £10,000 is at the Home Treasury and includes three years' charges against India for the China Embassy and a settlement of the account of the Zanzibar Mission, &c. The rest is in India and is due to various frontier arrangements. POLITICAL AGENCIES.

25, Allowances and Assignments.—The saving is nominal, being due to the substitution of direct assignments of revenue for certain Pagoda payments in the Madras Presidency. ALLOWANCES AND ASSIGNMENTS.

27 and XVIII, Superannuations, &c.—Expenditure more £43,300; Revenue more £22,600; Net Expenditure more £20,700; Net Expenditure £1,236,000. The amount credited from the Book Balances of the extinct Military Funds is £297,380, as follows:—

India	20,980
Madras	189,300
Bombay	87,100
TOTAL	297,380

The expenditure for Pensions is increasing, and must continue for some time to increase.

28 & XIX, Loss and Gain by Exchange.—Expenditure more £16,000; Revenue more £6,100; Net Expenditure more £9,900. The Original Estimate was that the Secretary of State would raise £12,250,000 by the sale of bills for Rs. 13,85,00,000, the estimated rate of Exchange being Re. 1 = 1s. 9.23d. It is now estimated that £10,432,000 will be obtained by the sale of bills for Rs. 12,04,29,000, the average rate being Re. 1 = 1s. 8.90d. Thus, although the amount entered under Loss by Exchange is very nearly what was estimated, this result has been obtained only because the sum remitted has been considerably less than was estimated. The value of Re. 1 measured in gold has proved to be less than was estimated by .44d., or about 2 per cent. Doubtless the estimate made in March last year was rather sanguine. LOSS BY EXCHANGE

Regular Estimates, 1877-78.

SUSPENSION OF BILLS.

VALUE OF SILVER.

The strain upon the Indian Treasury, owing to the prolongation of the Famine, compelled the Government of India to ask the Secretary of State, first, to reduce his drafts, and then, for eleven weeks (from the 19th September to the 12th December) to suspend them altogether.

The following Statistics relate to the value of silver and the course of the Exchanges during the year:—

31, Famine Relief.—Expenditure more £3,809,000. The cause of this excess has been already prominently explained. The entry here provides for the adjustments required to place the Governments of Madras and Bombay in a condition of equilibrium at the end of the year 1877-78; the additions necessary to provide them with moderate opening balances appear only under the Head 37, Provincial Surpluses. The Famine has caused large excess expenditure throughout the Civil Administration in the Madras and Bombay Presidencies; and the Government of India will take over as much of this excess charge as was beyond the resources of the Local Governments; this will be effected by the transfer of sufficient expenditure to the Imperial Head Famine Relief from the Provincial Headings Jails, Police, and, chiefly, Public Works. Thus, as already remarked, the entries opposite Famine Relief show almost the whole of the expenditure on the Famine in the Civil Departments including Public Works Ordinary.

32 and XXII, The Army.—Expenditure more £197,400; Revenue more £20,000; Net Expenditure more £177,400. The excess charges on account of the Famine (£200,000) are more than the Estimate (£103,500) by £96,300, and the expenditure from the Home Treasury is expected to exceed the estimate by £117,700, owing to the postponement into 1877-78 of certain payments which, as already explained, the Secretary of State intended to have made in 1876-77.

33 and XXIII, Public Works Ordinary.—Expenditure less £91,500; Revenue more £6,500; Net Expenditure less £98,000. This is nominal, owing to the transfer from this Head to 31, Famine Relief, of expenditure which exceeded the Public Works expenditure due to the Famine: it was not thought expedient to distribute the adjustment finely over the several Heads affected.

35 and XXV, Guaranteed Railways.—Expenditure more £448,800; Revenue more £1,893,800; Net Revenue more £1,445,000. According to the Finance Accounts these undertakings are now expected to yield a Net Revenue of £715,000.

This result is exclusive of the share of the entry under the adjusting Head 29, Loss by Exchange, which belongs to the Guaranteed Railways. The guaranteed interest to be paid to the Companies in gold in England is estimated at £4,685,000, which sum enters into the total £5,645,000 shown in the Abstract Statements as the estimated expenditure upon the Guaranteed Railways in 1877-78. Converted at the average rate obtained for the Secretary of State's Bills during the year (1s. 8 7/8d.), this sum of £4,685,000 becomes Rs. 5,40,80,493, and including £2,200 interest on the Revenue balances of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Company, the true total expenditure on the lines becomes Rs. 6,37,10,000, or, in the conventional notation of the Accounts, £6,371,000. The true financial result to India in 1877-78 of the Guaranteed Railways is thus expected to be a net charge of £9,000, being an improvement upon the result similarly calculated from the Budget Estimates of no less than £1,333,000.

Some portion of this improvement is doubtless due to the prolongation of the Famine: the Government of India has repeatedly taken occasion to acknowledge the vitally important services of these railways in the operations for the relief of the great population suffering from that calamity. Calculations have been made which indicate that the Famine does not account for more altogether than £600,000 of the excess net earnings of the guaranteed railways during the two years 1876-77 and 1877-78. Regular mates, 187

It is not too much to say that the enormous increase in the of these Railways has taken every one by surprise. In his Financial Statement made on the 15th March last, the Hon'ble Sir John Strachey drew attention prominently to the fact that, for the first time, the gross earnings were expected in 1876-77 to exceed £10,000,000: the sum of £10,885,098 was actually earned in that year. It was estimated that £9,279,400 would be similarly earned in 1877-78: the estimate has now grown to no less than £13,147,000, being an excess in the year of £3,867,600. If this estimate be realised (and there is no reason to doubt that it will be realised), the earnings of these lines in 1877-78 will have increased by 72 per cent. in five years. Meanwhile the percentage of working expenses has not increased but diminished steadily from 61.86 in 1872-73 to 51.98 in 1877-78, which is creditable to the administration of the Companies.

Now that the East Indian and Great Indian Peninsula Companies are earning surplus profits each half-year, the growth of the traffic benefits the State proportionately less than it did. Of the gross earnings this year the unprecedented sum of £871,400, being more than double the estimated amount, will be surrendered to the Companies as surplus profits. But, altogether, the recent history of the Railways constructed by the Guaranteed Indian Companies is exceedingly satisfactory.

The several Railways have contributed to the net increase over the Original Estimates this year as follows :—

East Indian Railway ...	859,900	Bombay and Baroda ...	136,500
Great Indian Peninsula ...	348,000	Eastern Bengal ...	102,500
Sindh, Punjab and Delhi ...	180,000	Oudh and Rohilkhand ...	62,000
Madras Railway ...	161,200	South Indian ...	40,300

Regular Estimates, 1877-78. This great growth of the traffic upon the Guaranteed Railways has been closely bound up with the simultaneous growth of the trade of India, which, without their assistance, could not have attained its remarkable development.

XPANY.

The Madras Irrigation Company causes a charge of £50,000 a year for interest on the £1,000,000 spent by the Company, and the result of its operations has, till now, been that the working expenses annually exceed the revenue by a considerable sum.

TE RAILWAYS.

XXXXI and 26, State Railways.—Expenditure less £77,000; Revenue less £137,800; Net Revenue less £60,800. The progress of these lines is as yet slow, and it is observed with regret that the facts usually fall short of the estimates. The failure this year is attributed to delay in the opening of the Northern Bengal State Railway, and, elsewhere, to over-sanguine estimates: sufficient experience has not yet been accumulated to enable the administrators of these Railways to estimate future results with accuracy.

The gross earnings and working expenses and net traffic receipts of these Railways are as follows:—

STATE RAILWAYS.

	Miles open.	Receipts.	Expenditure.	Net Revenue.	Loss on Working.
		£	£	£	£
1872-73	69	16,533	11,171	5,362	...

1878-79—Budget Estimate	2,150	967,000	704,000	263,000	...

It must be borne in mind that the Guaranteed Lines have occupied the main trade arteries of the country, and that it can hardly be expected that the progress of the State Railways should in these the first years of their existence compare favourably with the Guaranteed Lines, many of which have been in operation for a long series of years.

37 and XXXVIII, Provincial Surpluses and Deficits.—Expenditure more £230,000; Revenue less £9,200. The Net Surplus accruing to the Provincial Governments upon the transactions of the year is thus estimated at £220,800. Of this, £102,900 is a grant from the General Revenues to the Governments of Madras and Bombay, to constitute moderate opening balances available for Provincial Services in 1878-79. The Government of Bengal had a surplus of £122,300; the Government of the North-Western Provinces a deficit of £25,000, caused entirely by the Relief operations in those Provinces, the whole charge for which has been accepted by the Local Government.

Productive Public Works.—Expenditure more £1,249,000, of which £863,000 is in India, and £386,000 in England.

The Excess is in the main due to the Famine. Heavy Expenditure was necessary to increase the Rolling Stock of the Railways, in order that they might be properly equipped for their work: and extensive operations were undertaken in order to provide useful labour for the people dependent upon the State for their daily food.

Of the total expenditure of £4,877,000, £869,000 was spent on Irrigation and Navigation works, and £4,008,000 on Railways. The principal Irrigation Works and Railways under construction were as follows:—

The deficit of Revenue compared with the Whole Expenditure of the year is expected to exceed the estimated deficit by £4,058,300. It has been shown that the opening balance was larger than the Estimate by £2,776,865, of which £1,000,000 was borrowed just before instead of just after the beginning of the year. The amount to be added to the balances £535,335 falls short of the estimated amount £823,400 by £288,065, which sum with £3,770,235 obtained by increasing the remaining net obligations of the State will supply the deficit of Revenue.

According to the original arrangement, a net sum of £6,500,000 was to be borrowed in the year. This sum has been raised to £7,254,000, so that all the additional financial difficulties of the year have been apparently met with an addition of less than three-quarters of a million to the Funded Debt in excess of what was originally contemplated. This, however, is not a complete view of the case: not only was an unestimated million borrowed, as has been seen, immediately before the year opened, but the capital transactions with the Railway Companies leave the Public Debt to them just one million larger than it was expected to be. On the other hand, the net Loans to Native States, &c., have exceeded the Estimate by £416,000, which excess is much more than explained by the loans to Mysore and Gwalior, already described, some portion of which, indeed, still remains to be taken. The net sum to be added to the Public Debt during the year (including in this category the capital transactions with the Guaranteed Railway Companies and the loan transactions with Native States, &c.) is in excess of Estimate by £1,344,900, to which, if the £1,000,000 borrowed in March 1877 be added, the sum of £2,344,900 results as the real addition to the Debt on account of the prolongation of the Famine. So far, however, as the Estimates of the current year are concerned, the excess deficit of £4,058,300 has been thus supplied:—

Borrowed	1,344,900
From the Public Balances	288,065
From other Debt Heads	2,425,335

Of this last item (£2,425,335) the Local Funds supplied an excess surplus of £425,000, and the remaining £2,000,335 is spread over the various deposit and remittance transactions. The closing balances in the Home and Indian Treasuries are now estimated at £16,000,000, viz., £14,734,600 in India, and £1,265,400 in the Home-Treasury.

In October 1877 the pressure upon the resources of the Government of India was so great, that it became necessary to obtain some temporary assistance for the Treasury; £565,115 was accordingly, borrowed for short terms at rates of interest varying from 5 to 7 per cent. All these loans have now been repaid; the sum of £8,300 represents the interest upon them.

BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1878-79.

In the following Table, the Budget Estimates, 1878-79, are compared with the Regular Estimates, 1877-78:—

mate, 1878-79.

The Regular Estimates for 1877-78 show a gross Revenue of £58,682,000; the Budget Estimates for 1878-79 produce a gross Revenue of £63,250,000, being an improvement of £4,568,000, of which £2,654,000 is due to the incorporation of Local Funds, the transactions of which have hitherto been recorded separately; £929,000* (net) to new taxation and the temporary incidental increase of the duties upon Salt, and £985,000 to other causes. As the Land Revenue for collection in 1878-79 is estimated to exceed the amount collected in 1877-78 by £1,968,000, the Estimates of Revenue as a whole are, primâ facie, moderate.

The Regular Estimates of 1877-78 point to a gross expenditure of £66,990,000 and to an Ordinary Expenditure of £62,113,000. The Grants for the service of 1878-79 aggregate £65,649,000, those for the ordinary services amounting to £61,091,000. For comparative purposes, however, it is more convenient to eliminate the Famine Expenditure altogether. The Famine Expenditure in 1877-78 is £5,231,000 upon the Civil Estimates, and £200,000 upon those of the Army, total £5,431,000; the Grants for Famine Expenditure in 1878-79 are £500,000 upon the Civil Estimates and £55,000 upon the Army Estimates, total £555,000. Thus, excluding all plainly distinguishable recorded expenditure on Famine, the Regular Estimates point to a Grand Total Ordinary Expenditure in 1877-78 of £56,679,000, whilst the Grants for 1878-79 aggregate £60,539,000, showing an increase of £3,860,000, of which £2,832,100 is explained by the incorporation of the expenditure from Local Funds, and £54,000 is for the cost of collecting the License Tax. The great estimate of £3,000,000 for Loss by Exchange would alone account for an excess of £1,384,000 over the Regular Estimate. Compared with the present year, therefore, the Grants for the ordinary service of next year are, primâ facie, reasonable and moderate.

The following are the detailed explanations of the differences between the Budget Estimates and the Regular Estimates of 1877-78:—

REVENUE.

I, Land Revenue.—Increase £1,968,000. The Land Revenue of 1877-78 was depressed by the famine.

An ordinary year's land revenue being now about £21,400,000, the estimate for 1878-79 (£22,071,000) includes nearly £700,000 arrears: and this is not perhaps too sanguine an estimate. It cannot indeed be predicted confidently that, even if the season proves favourable, the Madras Presidency will not only resume its usual productiveness, but be able to make good much of its recoverable arrears; but in Upper India there will probably be no difficulty in collecting the arrears.

II, Tributes.—More £10,000. Owing to the Drought, the State of Búndi will probably not be able to pay till next year its tribute due in 1877-78.

III and 5, Forest.—Revenue more £53,000; Expenditure more £29,000; Net Revenue more £24,000; Net Revenue £203,000; a large recovery is expected in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh for sleepers supplied to State Railways. The estimate seems moderate.

IV and 6, Excise.—Revenue more £248,000; Expenditure less £4,000; Net Revenue more £252,000; Net Revenue £2,654,000; being by far the largest Net Excise Revenue yet obtained.

Of the increase, £142,900 is due to the anticipated return of prosperity in the Minor Presidencies; the estimates of Revenue there are moderate. There is, moreover, a special item of £50,000 at Bombay—the expected result of the enforcement of the treaty obligations of the Baroda State in respect to opium. At present opium is so freely smuggled through or from Baroda into the neighbouring British territory, that the Revenue obtained upon the consumption of opium there is nominal, although the drug is more freely used in Kattywar and Cutch than in any other part of India excepting Assam. As compared with previous years, the bulk of the improvement is in Bengal, Burma, the Central Provinces, and Assam. The growing prosperity of the country, and the firm ground of results attained this year, justify these estimates: the improvement manifested in them illustrates the advantage of provincial responsibility for such revenues.

V and 7, Assessed Taxes.—Revenue more £675,000; Expenditure more £48,000; Net Revenue more £627,000: Net Revenue £711,000.

This is the estimated produce of the License Tax imposed by Act II of 1878 (Imperial Council), Act I of 1878 (Bengal Council), and the corresponding legislation, accomplished or expected, in the Bombay and Madras Councils.

VI and 8, Provincial Rates.—Revenue more £3,103,000; Expenditure more £43,000; Net Revenue more £3,060,000.

This comprises the proceeds of the new taxation imposed by the Bengal Public Works Cess Act, 1877 (maximum half anna in the rupee— $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.—rental), and the several Local Rates Acts III, IV, and V, 1876 (two per cent. on Land Revenue), as well as the rates hitherto accounted for, separately as Local Funds. These last-mentioned rates are balanced by the following expenditure hitherto recorded under Local Funds and now, for the first time, incorporated in the General Accounts:—

3.—Refunds and Drawbacks	17,400
4.—Land Revenue	443,700
6.—Excise	800
7.—Provincial Rates	43,400
12.—Post Office	33,200
15.—Minor Departments	211,500
16.—Law and Justice	100
17.—Police	244,600
19.—Education	276,500
21.—Medical	66,100
22.—Stationery and Printing	200
23.—Political	100
26.—Superannuation, &c.	100
28.—Miscellaneous	93,300
Public Works, Ordinary	1,401,100

TOTAL ... £2,832,100

The New Rates are expected to yield, in 1878-79, as follows:—

Bengal (Public Works Cess Act II of 1877)	315,000
North-Western Provinces and Oudh (Acts III and IV of 1877)	55,000
Punjab (Act V of 1877)	49,000
TOTAL	£ 419,000

The New Rates will not be levied in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh till the new agricultural year, which begins in September. In 1879-80, and thereafter, these rates will yield, in those Provinces, £55,000 more.

Thus the expected License Tax and the New Rates together are expected to yield this year gross £1,214,000 and net, say, £1,150,000. Both taxes have been surrendered to the Provincial Governments, and the Abstract Statement

Esti- No. III shows that these Governments are to pay to the Imperial Treasury in 1878-79. 1878-79 in respect thereof as follows:—

	£
Famine Insurance	776,500
Interest on Capital invested in Provincial Canals and Railways	611,300
Total ...	1,387,800
Less net profits on Canals and Railways:—
Bergal	£ 78,400
North-Western Provinces and Oudh ..	„ 181,400
	259,800

Remaining Net new burden to be borne by the Provincial Governments in 1878-79 with the assistance of the New Taxes 1,128,000

If to this be added the sum of the new retrenchments exacted (£189,800), it would appear that the total relief obtained by this means is £1,317,000.

VII and 9, Customs.—Revenue less £150,000; Expenditure less £1,000; Net Revenue less £146,000: Net Revenue £2,284,000.

As first prepared, these Estimates showed a gross improvement of £82,000; but, as explained in the prefixed Resolution, the Government has resolved to abolish the long-condemned sugar duties levied upon the Inland Customs Line, and to remit the duties upon the coarser qualities of Cotton Yarns and Piece-goods, Railway Materials, and a number of articles, each producing only a small amount of revenue.

Sugar duties	155,000
Coarse cotton yarns and piece-goods	26,000
Railway materials	11,000
Miscellaneous items	40,000
	232,000

The remaining Net Customs Duty (£2,284,000) is only £5,000 less than the Net Customs Revenue of 1876-77.

The Net Customs Revenue of late years has been—

1872-73	2,473,515	1875-76	2,535,658
1873-74	2,444,632	1876-77	2,289,115
1874-75	2,404,308	1877-78	2,430,000

The depression in 1876-77 is mainly due to the reforms of the 5th August 1875 (Indian Tariff Act VIII of 1875). Apparently, the Revenue has already completely recovered from the effects of the sacrifices then made, though they were estimated at £308,000.

VIII and 10, Salt.—Revenue more £247,000; Expenditure less £11,000; Net Revenue more £258,000: Net Revenue £3,293,000.

It has been explained that the revenue of 1877-78 has been accidentally reduced by £165,500 owing to the correction of an erroneous practice at Madras; otherwise, the revenue during the current year would have been £165,000 more, and the estimated improvement next year £165,000 less, or only £93,000 in all. The readjustment of the Salt Duties by Act XVIII of 1877 was expected to result in a net addition of £300,000 to the revenue, but little of which is believed to have been realised in 1877-78. Nevertheless, only a moderate part of the £300,000 has been added to the estimated revenue of 1877-78, because the amount of that revenue is quite unprecedented, and it does not seem prudent, for the present, to reckon upon it as permanent.

IX and 11, Opium.—Revenue less £948,000; Expenditure less £489,000; Net Revenue less £479,000; Net Revenue £6,000,000. The Estimates and Accounts of late years have been as follows:—

Budget Estimates, 1878-79

NUMBER OF CHESTS			NET REVENUE.
	Sold at Calcutta.	Paid duty for export from Bombay.	Estimated.	Obtained.
1871-75 ...	45,000	49,561	5,500,000	6,215,083
1875-76 ...	45,510	41,804	5,750,000	6,252,860
1876-77 ...	47,240	49,786	6,000,000	6,280,813
1877-78 ...	49,500	41,000	6,250,000	6,479,000
1878-79 ...	55,500	27,500	6,000,000	...

* It has been already stated that, owing to the drought, the present harvest in Malwa is likely to fail to such an extent that local authorities expect less than half a crop. This explains the low estimate of chests for export from Bombay. Under the circumstances, the Government has advertised 60,000 chests of Bengal Opium for sale in the calendar year 1879, being 6,000 chests more than the provision of 1878. It has seemed prudent to reduce the Estimate of Net Opium Revenue below the standard of 1877-78, which was the highest recent Estimate; but it is hoped that, notwithstanding the failure in Malwa, at least £6,000,000 of net revenue will be obtained. The crop in the Bengal Presidency is reported to be also deficient, while the reduction of the price paid to the cultivators will tell throughout the year, instead of during half the year only as in 1877-78; so that the expenditure is likely to be less than during the last two years.

X and 12, Stamps.—Revenue less £8,000; Expenditure more £21,000; Net Revenue less £29,000; Net Revenue £2,867,000. The excess expenditure is for stores at Home. In view of the exceptional cause for an improvement of £50,000 in Bengal in 1877-78, it has seemed imprudent to estimate for any further growth of the Revenue.

XI and 13, Mint.—Revenue less £269,000; Expenditure less £22,000; Net Revenue less £247,000; Net Revenue £70,000.

The great influx of silver bullion in 1877-78 is doubtless, to a great extent, due to the large sums that it has been necessary to borrow: the same cause will not, it is hoped, be in operation next year, and there is no reason to expect that the imports of silver will be repeated upon their recent scale.

XXII, Provincial Contributions.—Revenue less £8,000. This Head disappears owing to the incorporation of the Local Funds in the General Accounts.

EXPENDITURE.

1, 2, and XVII, Interest.—Expenditure more £175,000; Revenue more £26,000; Net Expenditure more £149,000; Net Expenditure £5,719,000. Provision is made for a full year's interest on the amounts borrowed and lent during the current year and for the loan operations of the coming year; also for the usual increase of payments to the Civil Service Funds.

3, Refunds.—Expenditure more £36,000. The entry under this Head in 1877-78 is unusually small. The grant for next year (£324,000) is for the normal amount, including £17,400 from the Local Funds now incorporated.

4, Land Revenue.—Increase £422,000; £443,700 is incorporated for payments to village officers, heretofore recorded under Local Funds. The balance of decrease is owing to settlement operations diminishing in the North-Western Provinces, and because some famine expenditure fell upon this Grant in Bombay in 1877-78.

14 and XXII, Post Office.—Expenditure more £41,000; Revenue more £31,000; Net Expenditure more £10,000; Net Expenditure £70,000, of which £33,200 is Expenditure for the District Posts, heretofore recorded under Local Funds. If all things be considered, this Estimate is the most favorable ever presented.

15 and XIII, Telegraph.—Expenditure more £31,000; Revenue less £4,000; Net Revenue less £35,000. The same Grant of Net £180,000, which was made for this year, has been repeated for next year.

17, Minor Departments.—Expenditure more £226,000, of which £215,000 has been hitherto recorded under Local Funds; the rest is for some increase in the cost of Horse-breeding Operations chiefly for military purposes.

udget Estimates, 1878-79.

18 and XIV, Law and Justice.—Expenditure less £1,000; Revenue more £8,000; Net Expenditure less £,9000; Net Expenditure £2,476,000. The Expenditure this year is affected by the Famine.

19 and XV, Police.—Expenditure more £244,000; Revenue less £7,000; Net Expenditure more £251,000, of which £244,800 is imported from Local Funds.

20 and XVI, Marine.—Expenditure more £30,000; Revenue less £35,000; Net Expenditure more £65,000; Net Expenditure £373,000. As has already been explained, the Revenue collected at Calcutta this year was exceptional; the increase next year is for the construction of a Steam-vessel for the Marine Surveys.

21 and XVII, Education.—Expenditure more £290,000; Revenue more £1,000; Net Expenditure more £289,000; imported from Local Funds £276,500.

23, Medical.—Expenditure more £42,000; imported from Local Funds £66,100. The saving is in Bengal, where the Local Government is taking vigorous measures to enforce economy.

24, Stationery and Printing.—Expenditure less £11,000; the Expenditure in 1877-78 was swollen by the Famine.

25, Political.—Expenditure less £31,000. The reduction is in England, where several exceptional items caused an abnormal expenditure this year.

28 and XIX, Superannuations.—Expenditure less £14,000; Revenue less £22,000; Net Expenditure more £8,000: a normal increase to the grant, which may, perhaps, prove too small. The gross figures this year are swollen by the retirement of the junior subscribers to the Bombay Medical Retiring Fund.

29 and XX, Exchange.—Expenditure more £1,384,000. Revenue less £1,000. Net Expenditure more £1,383,000.

The sum of £17,000,000 must be remitted in 1878-79 for the supply of the Home Treasury; it is estimated that this will cost Rs. 20,00,00,000, being at the rate of 1s. 8⁴/₁₆d. The rate for the adjustment of transactions between the Indian and Imperial Governments has been fixed by the Secretary of State at 1s. 9d.

30 and XXI, Miscellaneous.—Expenditure more £76,000; Revenue less £77,000. Imported from Local Funds £93,300. The decrease of Revenue is chiefly at the Home Treasury, where there have been exceptional receipts in 1877-78.

31, Famine Relief.—The Government of Madras estimates that £500,000 may be spent in 1878-79 on famine operations.

32, The Army.—Expenditure less £636,000; Revenue less £17,000; Net Expenditure less £619,000. Net Grant £14,905,000. Of this considerable saving, £225,100 (net) is in India and the rest is in England. The extra cost of the Army attributed to the Famine this year is £200,000; for next year it is only £55,000; this accounts for £145,000 of the saving in India: the rest is due to the expenditure having been swollen this year by other exceptional causes. The saving at the Home Treasury is entirely in Stores, the Grant for expenditure on Stores being much lower than has been usual lately.

34 and XXIII, Public Works, Ordinary.—Expenditure more £1,839,000; Revenue less £10,000; Net Expenditure more £1,849,000; transferred from Local Funds £1,401,000. Of the remaining £448,000, a considerable sum is nominal, owing to the adjustment of the Expenditure in 1877-78 in connection with the Famine as already described. £189,900 is in Bengal, the Lieutenant-Governor having determined to spend some of the balances at credit of his Government; this amount is balanced by a corresponding entry on the Revenue side under Provincial Deficits: £70,800 is in the Imperial Expenditure, including provision for a costly dredger for the harbour at Kurrachee.

35 and XXV, Guaranteed Railways.—Expenditure less £154,000; Revenue less £965,000; Net Expenditure more £811,000; Net Expenditure by the Accounts £94,000. True Net Expenditure, as shewn in the Table in the Review of the Regular Estimates, £935,000, or £926,000 more than this year.

It does not seem safe to count upon a repetition next year of the signal prosperity of the current year. The estimate is for a less favourable result than that obtained even in 1876-77, when the net cost to the State was £714,384; but, in that year, only £296,000 was surrendered to the Companies as Surplus Profits, whereas in 1878-79 the Government expect to pay £642,000 as such profits.

36 and XXVI, State Railways.—Revenue more £430,000; Expenditure more £298,000; Net Revenue better £132,000, which seems moderate, considering the large capital expenditure that is being incurred.

38, Productive Public Works.—Net loss £322,000, the expenditure this year having been accidentally swollen by the Famine; indeed, the Government of India can hardly undertake with confidence to provide yearly even 4½ millions for expenditure on Productive

Public Works. Of the whole grant, £4,555,000, £3,555,000 will be spent upon Railways and £1,000,000 on Canals, as follows:—

Thus, again, the comparatively unproductive expenditure mounts up to the large sum of £1,169,000. The Public Works Department estimate that there still remains to be spent on these works as follows:—

Western Jumna Re-alignment	286,000
Indus Valley Railway	700,000
Punjab Northern	650,000
Total	1,666,000

When this is spent, the cost of these works will have been as follows:—

Western Jumna Realignment	955,000
Indus Valley Railway	6,310,000
Punjab Northern Railway	3,910,000
Total	11,175,000

XXIV and 34, Irrigation.—Revenue more £43,000; Expenditure more £14,000; Net Revenue more £29,000; Net Revenue £80,000. The improvement is in Bengal, where the Soane Canals are expected to yield increased revenue.

XXVIII and 37, Provincial Deficits and Surpluses.—The Provincial Governments are expected to incur a net deficit of £268,000; that is to say, they will expend that sum out of their balances; this amount will appear in the General Account under the appropriate Heads of Services, and must be made good by the Provincial Governments, whose payment to the Imperial Treasury will appear under this Head.

It remains now only to speak of the Estimates of Ways and Means for the service of 1878-79. The little abstract in the right hand corner of Statement No. IV shows that, besides the deficit of Revenue which, as has been seen, is estimated at £2,399,000, the Government is called upon to provide for the repayment to the extinct Military Funds of the sum of £281,000 for which credit is taken as Revenue; to find £600,000 net for advances to Native States, Municipalities, Port Trusts, &c.; and, lastly, to repay £1,000,000 Railway Capital to the Guaranteed Companies. Thus the net requirements of the year in excess of the Revenue amount to £4,280,000. Towards meeting this demand the Government is prepared to submit to a reduction by £1,500,000 of the Public Balance, and to content itself with an estimated balance on the 31st March 1879 of only £14,500,000, viz., £13,069,200 in India and £1,430,800 in the Home Treasury. The amount is rather small, but if the year is prosperous it may turn out to be larger. Some anticipated petty receipts raise the expected assets of the Government, including the £1,500,000 taken from the balances, to £1,780,000; there remains still wanting £2,500,000; and for this sum resort must probably be had to the money market during the year. The Government is not at present prepared to announce how, or when, or where it will invite subscriptions for this sum.

Budget Estimates, 1878-79.

INCLUDING TAKES.

The Estimates of 1878-79 thus show a surplus on the ordinary account of £2,156,000, or omitting the credit of £281,000, from the Military Funds, which, as has just been said, must first be borrowed before it is credited as Revenue, a surplus of £1,875,000. The expected arrears of land revenue, £671,000, exceed by £116,000 the £555,000 which is provided on account of the Famine. Deducting this sum, the net surplus becomes £1,759,000. There is, happily, no deduction to be made in respect of the loan operations of the year; for provision is made upon the estimates for the remittance in full of all the requirements of the Home Treasury. So far, it would seem that, besides supplying the whole £1,500,000 wanted for Famine insurance, a surplus of £259,000 remains. But it must be once more remarked that of the £4,555,000 set down for Productive Public Works, £1,169,000 is allotted for works which do not in fact comply with the condition of being truly productive. These dead-weight obligations are now, however, approaching liquidation. Of the whole estimated cost of the Frontier Line, of Railway and the re-alignment of the Western Jumna Canal (£11,175,000) there will remain, it is hoped, after the end of 1878-79, only £1,666,000 to spend. • Meanwhile, it is clear that, favorable in many respects as the present Estimates appear, the country has not been required by the measures of taxation recently adopted to make any unnecessary sacrifices for the Public Weal.

In an appendix will be found some interesting Financial and Commercial Statistics illustrating the economical history and condition of India during the period covered by this Statement.

By order of His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General in Council.

R. B. CHAPMAN,

Secretary to the Government of India.

FORT WILLIAM,

The 18th March 1878.

APPENDIX A.

Extract from speech by the HON'BLE SIR JOHN STRACHEY, in the Legislative Council of the Governor General of India, on the 9th February 1878.

A desire has been expressed that I would explain more fully, than has hitherto been done, the manner in which the Government proposes to apply the proceeds of these new taxes. I shall, I feel certain, be very readily able to do this to the satisfaction of the Council, for nothing can be clearer than the principles on which the Government proposes to act.

I can hardly do better, in the first place, than ask the Council to look at the brief official Statement of Objects and Reasons, which was published with the new Taxation Bills when they were first introduced. That Statement explained, in a few words, the reasons for these measures. It was said that the necessity was imposed upon the Government of India of bringing the public revenues and expenditure into a state of proper equilibrium; that famines could no longer be treated as exceptional calamities; and that the obligations entailed by them must be provided for among the ordinary charges of the State. The periodical occurrence of famine must, therefore, enter into the calculation of the Government in making provision for its ordinary yearly wants, and such a surplus of ordinary income over expenditure must be provided in each year of prosperity, as would make a sensible impression on the debt which it might be necessary to incur in times of famine. To enable the Government, it was said, to meet these obligations, additional taxation was necessary.

The object which I thus stated is a perfectly simple one. These new taxes are required for the sole purpose of giving us, year by year, a sufficient surplus of income over expenditure to meet these famine charges, which had not hitherto been taken into consideration in our yearly accounts. It seems to have been supposed by some that the primary object of the Government of India was to give to the Local Governments the proceeds of these new taxes, and to transfer to them, in some mysterious manner, certain indefinite obligations in relation to the future charges arising from famine. There could be no greater mistake, and I am sure that I have never said anything to justify it. These great calamities can only be met by aid of the resources of the Government of India, and it is these resources that must be strengthened to meet the obligations they impose. Although then, as I shall presently explain, we shall use the Local Governments as our agents in levying these taxes, their proceeds will mainly go into the Imperial Treasury. With their help we hope to secure that surplus revenue, which will enable us in the future to discharge the heavy obligations which the periodical occurrence of famine entails upon the country, without being driven into the fatal course of constantly increasing the public debt, and the burden it involves.

As I previously explained, we start with the hypothesis, that in every ten years the Government of India will have to spend £15,000,000 on the relief of famine. The case will be put into its simplest form, if we assume that the whole of the £15,000,000 will have to be spent at once at the end of this period, and the arguments I am about to use will not be in any way invalidated by this assumption, though it be not strictly true. Now, as the very foundation of our policy is the resolution not to permit this expenditure to create a constantly increasing charge for interest, the expedient of simply borrowing when the occasion occurs, and thus increasing the annual charges on account of debt, say, by £600,000 in each period of ten years must, of course, be set aside; and it follows that we can only obtain the £15,000,000 which we require by saving up an equivalent sum in years of prosperity. If we provide for this purpose a bona fide surplus of £1,500,000 a year for ten years, we shall have obtained our £15,000,000.

As we cannot keep our annual savings locked up in a separate box, it is inevitable that when the actual necessity for spending the £15,000,000 arrives, we shall have to borrow the money, so that what we have practically to do is this—we must reduce our debt by £1,500,000 year by year during the whole period, or by £15,000,000 in the ten years, thereby reducing the yearly charge for interest at the end of that time by £600,000. Then, when the necessity for spending the £15,000,000 arrives, we can borrow that amount and incur a fresh charge for interest of £600,000 a year, and be no worse off than we were ten years before. This process, by which in periods of prosperity the charge for interest on debt is gradually reduced, thus constantly restoring the exhausted power of borrowing without increased taxation, is what the Government virtually proposes to adopt.

In India, however, the policy has been deliberately and wisely accepted of borrowing every year large sums of money for the construction of the railways and canals which it is absolutely necessary that the country should possess if its material advancement is not to be arrested. Even if the financial consequences of this policy had been less satisfactory than they have been, it might still have been our duty to persevere in it, though it should have called for increased sacrifices from the country in the form of taxation. But experience has shown beyond the shadow of a doubt that, looking at the matter even from a purely financial point of view, we could have done nothing wiser and more profitable than go on investing capital in these undertakings; and that so long as these investments are prudently limited, as they have been up to the present time, so that the growing income derived from the works keeps pace with the charge for interest on the borrowed funds, they may be continued with complete financial safety.

It was on considerations such as these that Lord Lawrence in 1869, in his minute on Railway extension, assuming that the revenues could, without objection, bear a yearly charge of about $1\frac{1}{2}$ millions, to meet the interest on Capital outlay on productive works in course of construction, &c., during the period in which their income is become developed, based his proposals for the gradual, but systematic, prosecution of this class of works, and that the Government of India has been since acting with most satisfactory results. The forecasts relating to the extraordinary expenditure on Railways and Irrigation Works that have from time to time been prepared in the Public Works Department have supplied sufficient evidence of the prudence with which this part of our financial policy has been conducted, and it is only necessary to follow the same principles in the future to ensure equally sound results.

The truth of these remarks can readily be established. In the first place, the net charge for the interest on the Guaranteed Railway Capital which was upwards of $1\frac{1}{2}$ millions sterling in 1870-71, was reduced by the growth of the income to less than £300,000 in 1876-77, while in the present financial year, partly no doubt from the increased famine traffic, the interest will be more than covered. And though next year quite so good a result cannot be anticipated, it is certain that in these six years a net improvement of more than $1\frac{1}{2}$ millions has been secured for the public revenues by reason of these works. During the same period the total expenditure on State Railways has reached a sum involving a gross charge for interest now amounting to £700,000, against which we already have a net income of £300,000 yearly, leaving a net charge of £400,000. The Irrigation Works carried out in the same years have led to an increase of interest charge of £400,000 set off by an increased net income of £200,000, leaving a net charge of £200,000. On the whole, setting off the increased charge of £600,000 against the improved income of $1\frac{1}{2}$ millions, the general result is an improved financial position of £600,000 a year, notwithstanding the large investments made in the new works, a considerable part of which is necessarily not yet productive, though it is rapidly becoming so.

The same general result is plainly indicated otherwise by the fact that the total charge for Interest on Debt of all sorts and Guaranteed Railway Capital is in the present year less than the charge in 1870-71 by about 2 millions, to which sum should be added the net increase of income due to Public Works, amounting, say, to £500,000, to show the improvement in the general financial position, which, if not directly due to the prosecution of these works, has, at all events, been consistent with a continued average expenditure upon them of hardly less than 4 millions a year. It must also be remembered that these results have been secured during a period in which very exceptional seasons of scarcity have occurred, involving charges of some 16 millions sterling.

We assume, therefore, that the Government will continue to borrow money on these principles for such productive works.

Now, it would be obviously absurd to pay off every year debt to the amount of £1,500,000, and simultaneously to incur fresh debt to the same extent. What, therefore, we have to do in the actual circumstances of the case, is, by applying to the construction of these works the proceeds of the new taxes, to reduce by £1,500,000 a year, the sum which we might otherwise have borrowed. The ultimate financial result of this, as will readily be seen, will be practically the same as that which would have followed if we had devoted every year £1,500,000 to the actual repayment of debt. For returning to our former hypothesis, we shall, at the end of our ten years, thus have prevented borrowing to the extent of £15,000,000, and our annual charge for interest will then be less by £600,000 a year than it would otherwise have been. We could, therefore, if occasion required, borrow £15,000,000 for the relief of famine, and be in no worse a financial position than we were at the beginning of the period of ten years.

The soundness of this argument depends, of course, on the assumption that the works which are constructed from our annual contribution of £1,500,000 from the public revenues will be really reproductive, that is, that they will at the end of the ten years produce an income at least equal to the interest which we should have to pay if we had then to replace by borrowing a sum equal to that furnished from the new taxes for their construction. This assumption, however, has no special or peculiar significance in connection with these new arrangements; it is (as I have just explained) the justification of our whole policy of borrowing money for works of public improvement. Whether we construct our railways and canals with borrowed capital, or pay for them out of this famine insurance fund, we equally assume that they will eventually give us a return of more than the ordinary charge for interest on the outlay; and to repeat what I had said before, experience has now been sufficiently prolonged to show conclusively that, notwithstanding all the mistakes that have been made, the gradual growth of the income of the productive public works has been sufficient to protect the Imperial Treasury against any increase to the actual charge for interest on debt. This explanation will show the Council how, either by the direct discharge of debt, or by the investment of money in productive works, if the circumstances of the time should render that course most suitable, charges on the revenue may be extinguished, or new income created, which shall enable the Government to borrow in the future to the full extent to which the proceeds of the new taxes are applied, and that a true famine insurance fund will thus have been created.

a return showing, in as great detail as can be given, the amount of revenue received under each article (not merely each group of articles) specified in the Tariff.

2. An examination of the monthly statements of the trade of British India from November 1875 to October 1876, that is for twelve months after the Tariff Act of 1875 came into operation, shows the receipts from the duty on the importation of a large number of articles to have been those given in the margin. In drawing the attention of Your Excellency to this return, I feel it necessary to say that I have observed with some surprise the long list of articles still retained on the Indian Tariff, the duties derived from which are actually not worth collecting. There are, doubtless, special reasons for the maintenance of the duty on opium; and with regard to a few of the minor articles which have been already removed from the Tariff, I presume that the amount received is in payment of duty incurred before the Tariff Act came into force. Without, however, entering into these considerations, and speaking generally, there appears to be no possible room for doubt as to the inexpediency of retaining on the Import Tariff the few articles which individually yield less than Rs. 10, or the 14 articles yielding each less than Rs. 100, or the 17 articles yielding less than Rs. 1,000; and some question may arise even as to the 25 articles, none of which give so much as Rs. 5,000. There is also an unspecified number of "other" unmanufactured articles, together bringing in a receipt of Rs. 452. The whole amount at stake in excluding these 65 or 70 articles would be Rs. 84,592, or less than £8,500.

3. I consequently request that this subject may receive Your Excellency's attention, and that at a convenient time the propriety of excluding from the Tariff items that will not be productive of revenue may be considered.

APPENDIX C.

No. 124 (Statistics and Commerce), dated India Office, London, 23rd August 1877.

From—Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India,

To—The Government of India.

In continuation of my despatch, dated the 31st of May 1876, No. 9 (Separate Revenue),

* Dated 27th June 1877.

† Dated 6th July 1877.

I forward a copy of a memorial* from the Council of the East India Association, and of a reply† thereto by Mr. Raynsford Jackson on behalf of the Associated Committees of Employers and Workmen in the cotton manufacturing districts, respecting the abolition of the duties on the importation of cotton goods and yarns into India.

2. Your Excellency is well aware of the great importance attached by Her Majesty's Government to the gradual reduction of these duties at the earliest period that is not inconsistent with the financial requirements of your administration.

Dated Westminster, 27th June 1877.

To—The MOST HONOURABLE THE MARQUIS OF SALISBURY, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India in Council.

The Memorial of the Council of the East India Association.

MOST RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH.—That great anxiety appears to exist in the minds of a large number of the natives of India in respect to the persistent endeavours which are being made by a very influential body in England to obtain from the Government the abolition, at the earliest possible period, of the 5 per cent. ad valorem duty now levied in India on the importation of cotton goods.

That the only arguments adduced in favour of the abolition are, that the duty in question is, in its nature, a protective duty, and that its abolition would therefore be a boon to the people of India at large in their capacity of consumers of British cotton goods.

That it has recently been shown, however, in a very able letter addressed by Mr. Soorabjee Shapoyee Bengallee, a member of the Legislative Council of Bombay, to the Viceroy, that the cotton goods of India and those of England have so little in common,* that it is only to an almost inappreciable extent that they can come at all into competition with each other, the whole of the cotton goods of Manchester, with very trifling exceptions, being above all effective rivalry at the hands of the Indian manufacturer, while the cotton goods turned out by the latter, owing to their comparative coarseness and cheapness, are for the most part outside the range of competition on the part of Manchester. The only real competition that exists appears to be a competition between the mill-owners of India and the hand-loom weavers there.

There being thus no appreciable competition between the cotton goods of Manchester and those of India respectively, the whole argument, based on the allegation that the import duty levied in India is a protective duty, of course falls to the ground, and this has been clearly admitted by the Tariff Committee appointed by the Government of India. It would, indeed, be difficult so to characterise, under any circumstances, so small a duty as a 5 per cent. ad valorem duty—an amount not very greatly in excess of that retained on the importation of corn into Great Britain when the corn laws were abolished.

That with the argument based on the charge that the duty is a protective duty, there also falls to the ground the argument based on the assumption that the remission of the duty would be a boon to the people of India at large in their capacity of consumers of Manchester cotton goods. For nothing can be clearer than that, Manchester having the command of the Indian market so far as its own products are concerned, the greater part of the duty so remitted would find its way into the pockets of the Manchester mill-owners in the shape of additional profits, and not, in the shape of lower prices, into the pockets of the consumers in India.

That this will probably not be denied by the Manchester advocates of the abolition of the duty, the proposition being self-evident. Indeed, it would be but a poor compliment to their well known intelligence to suppose that they would take all the trouble they are taking, and have taken, for the purpose of forcing on the people of India a measure which the latter do not want, and wholly fail to appreciate, unless they were themselves to reap some substantial benefit from it.

That the case being as stated, it appears to your memorialists that, even if the finances of India were in so flourishing a condition that a sacrifice could be made of the £800,000 sterling per annum which this duty amounts to, there could still be no valid reason for selecting for abolition a duty than which none, in their opinion, could be more legitimate.

That, in support of this assertion, they would beg to remind Your Lordship that the state of things which enables Manchester to find a market for its goods in India to so vast an extent as is indicated by the duty, viz., £16,000,000 sterling worth annually, has not been brought about without an immense expenditure by the Government and the people of India, expenditure in the shape of harbours and roads, police, and well-ordered legal tribunals, protection from external attack, and the maintenance of internal order, the development, to a high degree of the country's resources, and the numberless other items which it were needless to go on enumerating. Of all this expenditure, the Manchester mill-owner who sends his goods to India reaps his full share of the benefit in the shape of the secure and extensive market thus provided for him there, while, if it were not for this trifling duty levied on his fabrics, he would absolutely contribute nothing whatever towards it.

That your memorialists think it very natural that the natives of India should, under these circumstances, be so strongly opposed to the abolition of this duty, even if the finances of India were in such a condition as to enable the Government to dispense with the money it produces, but the finances of India being as they are, they have double reason to protest against a measure which would obviously necessitate the laying on them of new burthens.

That the burthens they have to bear, as it is, are very heavy, and in some instances, as, for example, the salt tax, may, without exaggeration, be called oppressive—a tax which not only presses very severely on the working classes of India generally, but is also very destructive to the cattle, which are the mainstay of the Indian cultivator, so much so, indeed, that it has been estimated by Europeans who have had practical experience as planters in India that the virtual prohibition of the use of salt as a cattle condiment, owing to its dearness, occasioned by the enormous duty on it, has had much to do with the frequent murrains there that carry off the cattle by thousands, and give a blow to the agriculture of the districts affected which it requires years for them to recover from.

That besides this there are other imposts, though not of so objectionable a nature, the only valid excuse for the retention of which is the impossibility of doing without them; and your memorialists cannot therefore be surprised if the natives who have called their attention to this matter should oppose so strongly the selection of a duty for abolition which is in itself so fair a one, which represents all that is contributed to the Indian Exchequer by the English exporters thither of goods to the value of £16,000,000 sterling per annum, and which, if abolished, would necessitate the simultaneous imposition of new taxes of equal amount upon the already heavily-taxed people of India. To strip the matter of all confusing phraseology, it would be simply to take from the people of India £800,000 sterling per annum, in addition to what they already pay, in order to increase the profits on their Indian trade of the cotton manufacturer of Manchester.

That if the natives of India had any representation in Parliament, and more especially if they had any representation at all commensurate with their numbers, their importance, or the £50,000,000 sterling they pay into the Indian Treasury annually, they might safely be left to fight their own battles with Manchester in that assembly; but as it is, excluded as they are from all voice in the management of their own affairs, the case seems to be peculiarly one in which the greatest care and deliberation are requisite before coming to any final decision upon it; for nothing could be more deplorable than that a feeling should arise among them that their interests were sacrificed to the interests of Manchester, and the more powerful, politically and commercially, those interests are, the more important it seems to your memorialists that all ground should be taken away for the possible creation of any such impression.

That your memorialists venture to think that nothing could be more conducive to the avoidance of such a danger, than for the Government to institute a full and searching inquiry into the whole subject before coming to any final decision in regard to the policy to be pursued in respect of it. This might be done by means of a Commission impartially selected and sitting with open doors at Bombay—the chief seat of the British cotton trade with India, as well as of the Indian cotton manufacturing industry. Before it might be examined all the Natives who had any evidence to offer, as well as the European representatives of the great Manchester houses in India, and the result would be, doubtless, a mass of information which would effectually set the matter in its true light, and enable Your Lordship to arrive at a conclusion beyond the reach of cavil or question on either side.

Your memorialists, therefore, most respectfully pray that this, or some other equally satisfactory method, may be adopted, with a view of finally terminating an agitation which at any time would be most undesirable, but which is particularly so at a moment when it is of the utmost importance that England and India should be cordially, as well as politically, united.

And your memorialists will ever pray.

Dated Blackburn, 6th July 1877.

To—The Most Honourable the Marquis of Salisbury, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India in Council.

The Associated Committees of Employers and Workmen representing the Public Meetings held in the Cotton Manufacturing Districts, to secure the Abolition of the Indian Import Duties on Cotton Goods and Yarns.

MY LORD MARQUIS,—On behalf of the above Associations, I have the honour to ask your attention to the following answer to the memorial addressed to Your Lordship by the Council of the East India Association.

The argument of the memorial is based upon three assumptions. I shall endeavour to shew that all three are incorrect, and that consequently the memorial itself is a superstructure without solid foundation:—

The 1st is, that there is no appreciable competition between the cotton goods of Manchester and those of India respectively, and that “the only real competition that exists appears to be a competition between the mill-owners of India and the hand-loom weavers there.”

The 2nd, that a 5 per cent. duty is so small that it would be difficult to characterise it as a protective duty.

The 3rd, that a Commission sitting in India and taking the evidence of “Natives” and “European representatives of the great Manchester houses in India,” would be able to acquire such information as would “enable Your Lordship to arrive at a conclusion beyond the reach of cavil or question on either side.”

1st.—“That there is no appreciable competition between the cotton “goods of Manchester and those of India respectively,” &c., &c.

It seems probable that the India Association is ignorant of the existence of Your Lordship's Despatch to the Viceroy of India, dated the 31st May 1876, as it has made no attempt to answer the arguments advanced therein, but has repeated in almost synonymous terms the fallacies so effectually exposed. I cannot, therefore, do better than ask Your Lordship's re-perusal of paragraphs 23 to 36 of that Despatch. Paragraphs 23 and 24 shew, on the authority of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, that, comparing the three years 1858, 1859, and 1860 with the three years 1872, 1873, and 1874, a most serious decline had taken place in the British export to Bombay of the class of goods made in the Bombay mills concurrently with a very large increase in that of the finer goods not made in the Native mills.

These facts may be accepted as proving that there is a real competition between the productions of the English and Indian mills for the supply of coarse goods to India.

As regards the medium class of goods, which compose nearly two-thirds of our Indian exports, I admit that the Indian mills are not at present making them extensively, the reason being that they are fully employed in manufacturing the coarser fabrics, on which the transit charges and the duty tell the most heavily in favour of the Native manufacturer and against the importer. Their power to make these goods out of indigenous cotton has, however, been proved, and samples so made have been exhibited in England.

The English manufacturers, moreover, produced the medium, or shirting, class of goods out of Indian cotton without admixture with other growths, during the American war; and I have no hesitation in saying that when the factory industry of India has so extended as to over-supply the demand for coarse fabrics, the Native manufacturer will supplant the British in the supply of the Indian markets with the finer goods.

It is not unimportant that the same opinion has recently been given by an Indian manufacturer interested in more than one Indian mill.

2nd.—The statement that a 5 per cent. duty is so small that it would be difficult to characterise it as a protective duty is best met by shewing how it would affect an average-sized Bombay mill in competition with an English mill of the same size, presuming that British goods can be laid down in India minus the duty, and Native goods manufactured in India at the same price.

For this purpose I may take a mill of 30,000 spindles and 500 looms. The annual turnover will be about £70,000, which, at 5 per cent., is £3,500. Let the English mill-owner work for 30 years without profit, his Indian rival will have made out of the aid given by the duty £105,000, besides interest and compound interest.

I think, then, it will hardly be denied that 5 per cent. may be characterised as a protective duty.

3rd.—Of what nature is the evidence which the Indian Association would obtain by means of a committee from the "Natives" and European representatives of the great Manchester houses in India? Is it as to whether the duty is consistent with free trade principles? whether it has a protective operation? whether it is important enough in its pressure to merit the appellation of "protective"? whether the Indian Treasury can spare its amount? or whether the said Natives and European representatives will be dissatisfied and irritated if they cannot retain the bonus it confers in favour of their special investments?

I cannot think that we are without adequate light on all these points, and do not believe that anything stated by the gentlemen in question,—however disinterestedly solicitous they may be, exclusive of all considerations of personal advantage, to guard the Indian revenue, and to satisfy Indian sentiment,—would be regarded in the cotton textile districts as safe ground work for "a conclusion to be accepted as beyond the reach of cavil."

As for the assumption that we are to submit to this duty in order to pay our share of the expenses of Indian administration, I ask how such a claim is consistent with our own practice and conclusion derived from adhesion to the principles of free trade, that taxes are not to be imposed upon any article which enters into competition with any home production without being balanced by countervailing internal duties, the result being that many countries from which we import the most largely, as the United States, contribute very much less towards our customs revenue than others which, like, China, avail themselves of our markets to a relatively small extent?

For the reasons above given, I respectfully solicit Your Lordship not to accede to the request of the India Association to appoint such a Commission as that suggested, the only and the evident consequence of which would be needless waste of time.

APPENDIX D.

No. 136 (Statistics and Commerce), dated India Office, London, 30th August 1877.

From—Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India,

To—The Government of India.

I TRANSMIT herewith a Resolution which was adopted by the House of Commons on the 11th July last, without a division, to the following effect:—

"That, in the opinion of this House, the duties now levied upon cotton manufactures imported into India, being protective in their nature, are contrary to sound commercial policy, and ought to be repealed without delay so soon as the financial condition of India will permit."

2. Your Excellency will perceive that this expression of opinion on the part of the House of Commons is in entire conformity with the tenor of my despatch of the 31st May 1876, No. 9 (Separate Revenue), upon this question, as well as with the views of your Government, as reported in the speeches of Your Lordship and Sir John Strachey in the proceedings of your Legislative Council at Calcutta, on the occasion of the Budget Statement in March last.

3. It is a subject of much satisfaction to me that both Your Excellency and the Financial Member of your Council, after a careful review of the fiscal system of India, have been able to concur with me so unreservedly in the opinion that the early reduction of the duties on cotton manufactures, with a view to their ultimate repeal, is a measure of great importance, both on economical and political grounds; and I do not doubt that the resolution of the House of Commons, which I now convey to you, will strengthen your desire to give the earliest practicable effect to a reform which has already commended itself to your deliberate approval.

4. In your financial letter of the 16th March last, No. 83, you enclose Minutes by your colleagues, Sir Henry Norman, Sir Arthur Hobhouse, and Sir Edward Bayley, dissenting from the policy adopted by Your Excellency in Council with reference to the abolition of Sea Customs revenue, and stating their reasons for objecting to the announcement made by Sir John Strachey with respect to cotton goods.

5. I observe nothing in these dissents which I have not already discussed and dealt with by anticipation in my despatch of the 31st May 1876. I do not therefore think it necessary to refer to them further on the present occasion, especially as two of the dissentients, the Legal and Military Members of Council, have since left your Government.

6. I will only remark that the experience of the last twelve months has tended to confirm the opinions which I expressed last year in some important respects.

7. In paragraph 30 of that despatch, I referred to the increasing number of mills and spindles at work in India. In the report of Mr. O'Connor, enclosed in your letter of the 11th of June last, No. 11 (Statistics), it is stated that five more mills were about to begin work, and that it was estimated that by the end of March 1877 there would be 1,231,284 spindles employed in India.

8. In paragraph 31, I called attention to the inconvenience and administrative difficulty which would arise from the importation into Calcutta and other Indian ports of Bombay cotton goods, free of duty, side by side with the taxed imports of similar goods of British production.

9. The following figures will shew that this interportal trade has already attained considerable dimensions, a fact of some significance also as shewing the increased competition of India with British-made cotton manufactures.

Exports from Bombay of Indian-made cotton goods in 1875-76 to—

				Quantity.		Value.
Bengal—
Twist and yarn	Lbs.	372,400	Rp.	1,64,180

Twist and yarn	Lbs.	5,542,142	Rs.	25,89,606*
Piece goods	Yds.	12,671,891	"	17,80,340

10. I can only, in conclusion, express my hope that the financial prospects of your Government in the approaching year may not preclude the possibility of commencing the reform of this branch of the Indian Tariff, but if, as now seems too probable, it shall unfortunately be such as to render you unable to incur the risk of any material loss of revenue from remission of duties, there are still two measures in connexion with this reform which should not, in my opinion, be delayed beyond the present year. I mean the repeal of the duty of 5 per cent. on foreign raw cotton imported into India, and the exemption from import duty of the lower qualities of cotton manufactures, upon which the present tax is incontestibly protective, not only in principle but in fact, and the value of which for revenue purposes is wholly insignificant.

Copy of a Resolution adopted by the House of Commons on 11th July 1877, without a division.

"That in the opinion of this House, the duties now levied upon cotton manufactures imported into India, being protective in their nature, are contrary to sound commercial policy, and ought to be repealed without delay so soon as the financial condition of India will permit."

* The totals for 1876-77 were as follows:—

		Quantity.	Value.
Twist and yarn ...	Rs.	10,697,088	48,98,094
Piece goods ...	yds.	17,098,801	20,41,435

showing a very large increase.

APPENDIX E.

No. 4192, dated Calcutta, the 14th December 1877.

From—A. MACKENZIE, Esq., Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal, Financial Dept.,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Financial Department.

I AM directed to acknowledge receipt of Financial Resolution No. 2506, dated the 8th instant, asking for an immediate report on the working of the orders of March last, extending the Financial powers and responsibilities of local Governments. The Government of India admit that it is not possible for any local Government as yet to express a mature or final judgment on the effects and tendencies of such important changes. All that is asked for is a general opinion on the working of the scheme, based upon the experience already gained, and an estimate of the probability or otherwise of the local Government being able to fulfil its engagements in the current year. Special information is also requested with reference to recent measures of provincial taxation and any other similar measures now in contemplation.

2. Dealing first with the question of Provincial Services, I am to say that the Lieutenant-Governor has only at present before him accounts showing the actual expenditure of 1876-77, and Accountant-General's consolidated abstract of receipts and disbursements for the first six months of the current year. In the regular estimate for 1876-77 it was assumed that the closing balances of that year would probably stand thus—

						Rs.
Under Provincial Services	47,692
Ditto	Reserve	1,03,027
Total						1,50,719

Owing partly to the fact that the outlay was less and the receipts greater than had been anticipated, and partly to faulty preparation of the regular estimate itself, the actual closing balance has turned out to be better than the estimated by seven lakhs of rupees, and stands thus—

						Rs.
Under Provincial Services	2,88,446
Ditto	Reserve	5,62,130
Total						8,50,576

3. The following statement shows the receipts of the first six months of the current year under all the main heads of Service, as compared with the receipts during the corresponding period of last year :—

Provincial Services.						Six months' Receipts.
						1877-78.	1876-77.
						Rs.	Rs.
Land Revenue	50,876	34,505
Excise	36,06,910	31,91,069
Customs	32,542	26,998
Salt	1,15,355	1,19,797
Stamps	62,14,967	51,11,681
Law and Justice	3,74,259	4,03,231
Jails	3,15,779	2,69,306
Registration	3,53,284	3,04,851
Police	38,905	29,283
Marine	6,31,576	4,44,049
Education	2,78,715	2,43,532
Medical	76,313	53,117
Printing	30,592	31,650
Miscellaneous	1,34,241	1,76,069
Public Works	40,025	19,117
Cash recoveries	9,963	6,633
Total Provincial Service Receipts						1,23,04,300	1,04,65,490

This shows an improvement in Receipts of Rs. 18,38,810. (In the above Statement the Imperial allotment is for obvious reasons not treated as a receipt for purposes of comparison.)

4. The Excise revenue has shown remarkable improvement, attributable no doubt to the general prosperity of the country, and to increased attention paid to this branch of the revenue on the part of district officers. If the receipts in the last six months of the year bear the same ratio to the receipts of the first half as has been usual in former years, the revenue under this head may very probably be close upon 70 lakhs of rupees. Steps are being taken to secure this, and even a higher revenue, by the reorganization of the excise arrangements throughout the country, by more energetic efforts to suppress illicit distillation, by reforms in the matter of ganja, by raising the prices of excise opium, and by more careful local inspection by selected officers, and more vigorous administration in every branch of the department.

5. The Stamp revenue has also so far shown an abnormal development, attributable in the early months of the year to the operations under the Land Registration Act. But as nearly 4 lakhs out of the gross improvement of 11 lakhs shown in the table were realized in the month of September, and that mainly under Court Fee stamps, there is good ground for supposing that the revenue of the first half of the year has been unduly swelled by a rush of suits filed in anticipation of the expiry of the old Civil Procedure Code on the 30th September. The gross stamp revenue of the year cannot be expected to be 22 lakhs better than that of 1876-77. It will be satisfactory if, in the remaining months of the year, it even maintains the same figure as in the corresponding months of last year. Certain changes have, however, been introduced by the new Civil Procedure Code, which are likely to cause serious loss to the revenue until the new Stamp Bill becomes law, e. g., the exemption from stamp of certificates of sale hitherto stamped as conveyances.

6. Under the head of 'Miscellaneous,' the receipts of the first six months are no criterion of the year's income, inasmuch as the large balances of unclaimed deposits are not credited to Government in the accounts until the close of the year. There is no reason to believe that the receipts under this head will eventually fall short of the estimate (Rs. 8,91,600), though only Rs. 1,34,241 were credited in the first six months.

7. The remaining heads do not call for special remark. Jail manufactures are doing well; registration receipts show a considerable improvement; and the great development of the rice trade during the past year has sent up pilotage receipts. There are, of course, in all these departments corresponding increases of charge; but the balance on the whole is largely in favour of Government.

8. Turning now to the Expenditure side of the account, I am to say that it is impossible to give a complete return of expenditure during the six months owing to the necessary delay in the adjustment of public works charges. The Accountant-General's figures are, however shown for all the main heads in the following table:—

Provincial Services.		Six months' Disbursements.
		1877-78. Rs.	1876-77. Rs.
Refunds	..	3,16,520	2,92,444

Cash Recoveries	...	9,963	6,633
Total		1,25,32,624	1,24,76,125

9. It will be seen that in the majority of headings the expenditure, so far from showing any tendency to grow, is actually somewhat less than in the corresponding period of last year; and although the public works expenditure is relatively more, this is in fact merely an accident of account. The outlay on public works will almost certainly be well within budget limits. In the uncertainty felt as to the effect of the revised financial arrangements, the Lieutenant-Governor has enforced a very general and strict economy.

10. The receipts under Provincial Reserve also show satisfactory progress. Excluding the income from Provincial Public Works Cess, they stand at a total of Rs. 6,80,277 against Rs. 5,83,983 in the corresponding six months of last year; while the expenditure was only Rs. 2,75,337, against Rs. 4,17,728.

11. In the arrangements made by your letter of the 29th March last for the transfer of additional services to this Government, the receipts and the disbursements were generally calculated on the basis of the regular estimates of 1876-77. The chief exceptions to this procedure were that in Excise 64 lakhs of rupees were taken as the receipts against 63 lakhs estimated for 1876-77, the normal rate of increase being assumed to be one lakh annually; while in "Stamps" and "Law and Justice" the normal rate of increase was assumed to be 2½ lakhs per annum, and the revenue for 1877-78 was taken at 105½ lakhs. From the consolidated assignment thus ascertained a lump deduction of Rs. 5,90,000 was made. Thus, apart from minor items of profit or loss, the Local Government has to find in 1877-78 a sum of Rs. 9,65,000 over and above the receipts of 1876-77.

12. On the whole, the Lieutenant-Governor believes that, if there be no unforeseen and serious falling off in the remaining months of the year, he will have no difficulty in meeting the liabilities of this Government in the matter of Provincial Services. The opening balance has proved to be so much better than was expected, and the growth of the Stamp and Excise revenue has been so much larger than was hoped, while the expenditure has been kept so fairly within budget limits, that Mr. Eden has no doubt about this Government being able to discharge its ordinary obligations in the current year.

13. In addition to these, however, this Government was made responsible for meeting the charges on account of Extraordinary Public Works (Railways and Irrigation Canals). The charges so transferred were estimated to amount to about 27½ lakhs of rupees. To meet this demand the Provincial Public Works Cess was imposed under Act II (B.C.) of 1877. This Act did not come into force until the 13th June last, and the Government of India, recognizing the fact that only three quarters' tax at most could be collected under it during the current financial year, reduced the contribution payable by the Government of Bengal for Irrigation Works and State Railways to 20 lakhs of rupees. The first instalment of the cess fell due on the 28th September, and it appears from the Accountant-General's returns that only Rs. 4,66,560 were paid into the treasuries during the quarter ending on that day. This normal demand for the quarter is about 7½ lakhs, so that the collections are far below the proper standard. There were, no doubt, difficulties in getting all the notices required by the Act, on its first introduction, duly served; and as failure to pay these cesses is not attended with the same penalties as attach to default under the Revenue Sale Law, their realization is always likely to be in arrear of quarter day. The Board have been directed to urge upon district officers the importance of prompt collection, and if it is found eventually that the financial position is at all endangered by these difficulties in collection, the law must be amended so as to make the payment of the cesses with the land revenue absolutely compulsory. In the meanwhile the Lieutenant-Governor cannot guarantee that he will be able to provide 20 lakhs of rupees for the purpose of meeting the interest charges for State Railways and Canals out of the proceeds of the cess in the current year. But he may be able to discharge his obligations otherwise, if the improvement in the ordinary Service receipts continues to the end of the year. It is, however, very important that this Government should have a reasonably large working balance in hand. It is impossible to carry on the Government with efficiency and a due regard to improvement in administration if there is not a reasonably large surplus available after satisfying the demands of the Imperial Government. The Lieutenant-Governor has before him many necessary and useful projects which ought to be undertaken, and would be undertaken, were funds available; but for the present he is compelled to proceed with great caution in the matter of expenditure, and has not been able to make that use of his improved revenue that he would have liked.

14. In paragraph 4 of Mr. Reynolds' letter No. 875, dated 24th March, the sanction of the Government of India was asked to the introduction of a Bill for imposing a compulsory water-rate upon all lands protected or irrigated by the canals which have been constructed in Behar, Orissa, and Midnapore. Such a Bill was subsequently laid before the Bengal Legislative Council, its chief features being that it made all irrigable lands liable to the payment of a rate not exceeding Rs. 2 per acre, and all lands protected from flood by flood-embankments (if not irrigable) liable to a rate not exceeding 8 annas per acre. These rates were as a general principle to be payable by the cultivator, the zemindar being made responsible for collecting them and handing them over to Government. The duty of constructing and maintaining village channels was thrown upon the occupiers of land, under the supervision of the owner thereof. Remission of rates was to be allowed in cases where Government might fail to supply sufficient water or to maintain adequate embankments.

15. The Bill as published evoked much hostile criticism, and numerous petitions from landholders and others taking exception both to its principles and details were referred to the Select Committee of Council which sat upon the measure. The Committee found that they had not before them sufficient information to enable them to deal satisfactorily with these representations: and it was eventually determined to postpone further consideration of it until local enquiry should have been made both in Behar and Orissa with reference to various matters of fundamental importance. The duty of directing these enquiries was undertaken by Mr. T. E. Ravenshaw, Member of the Board of Revenue, who had charge of the Bill, assisted by Mr. G. Toynebee, Officiating Collector of Cuttack. Eventually it was proposed by these officers to abandon the attempt to impose a rate upon protected lands not being irrigable, to eliminate all questions of embankments from the Bill altogether, and to introduce the compulsory rate upon irrigable lands only when it could be shown (1) that all such lands in the villages affected had been surveyed, and that field maps and schedules of holdings existed in respect of such lands; (2) that canal water had been brought to some points within the boundary of each village whence all the irrigable lands could be commanded; (3) that a full supply of canal water would be available for some part of the year for at least one crop grown on all the lands within the village; and (4) that adequate means of drainage existed for such lands.

16. The Bill in this shape would be merely supplementary to Act VII (B.C.) of 1876, and would be brought into play gradually as the cadastral surveys extend and irrigation works are completed. The Lieutenant-Governor has just returned from visiting the Sone works. During the past season all the water which the canals could supply was freely taken at optional rates. Where the people can be relied upon to do this, it is fairer to them, and more advantageous to Government, that the optional system should continue. It remains to be seen whether they will repeat their application next year; but the result of the Lieutenant-Governor's observation is to induce him to believe that the agriculturists of Behar are really beginning to appreciate thoroughly the advantages of an assured supply of water, and under these circumstances he does not consider it expedient to press the compulsory system for the present. Orissa is not yet ready for its introduction, as the field survey there has not been completed.

17. I am to add that the Lieutenant-Governor has found that the general effect of the extension of the decentralization system in respect to the facilities which it has given to provincial administration has been even more satisfactory than he anticipated. In making the Local Government responsible for expenditure, and giving them a direct interest in the development of various branches of the revenue, it has secured a careful scrutiny over the expenditure of all departments, and a deep interest in all improveable heads of revenue which has extended to all grades of the services. District officers understand that the Provincial Government can sanction no new schemes and few new works unless it has a constantly improving revenue, and they have shewn an earnest desire to assist the Government by the adoption of every measure which their local experience suggests as likely to have a beneficial effect upon the revenues. At the same time the Local Government has, since the inauguration of the system of provincial finance in 1870-71, been in a position to carry out many works and many measures of improvement on its own responsibility, which would, under the old system, have possibly been delayed for an indefinite period. All friction with the Imperial Government has been obviated, and much useless and unsatisfactory correspondence avoided.

APPENDIX F.

MINUTE BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY.

1. In the observations I addressed to the Legislative Council on the introduction of the measures of taxation that have lately become law, I dwelt on the altered position in which the Local Governments would be placed in relation to the prosecution of Public Works, under the enlarged responsibilities with which it was proposed to entrust them.

2. Speaking of the fundamental principle of this policy, which has been fully accepted by Her Majesty's Government, I said that it—“involves the enlargement, with adequate precautions, of the financial, and “consequently also of the administrative, powers and responsibilities of the “Local Governments. In the next place, we believe that, if this principle be “fairly carried into effect, the new imposts, which the Council is now asked “to sanction, will, when added to the resources already created, provide the “State with sufficient means for the permanent maintenance of a national “insurance against famine, without heavily increasing the pecuniary burdens
“of its subjects. For the attainment of this object, the material appliances
“we intend to promote, by means of additional revenue, are cheap railroads “and extended irrigation works. We are conscious of the reproach we “should justly incur if, after such a declaration as I have now made, the “prosecution of these necessary works were commenced, suspended, or relin“quished, according to the increased or relaxed pressure of annual cir“cumstance, or the intermittent activity of spasmodic effort. We, therefore, “propose to entrust, in the first instance, to the Local Governments the duty of “framing a sufficient and carefully considered scheme of local railroad and irri“gation works. We are prepared to provide them with the means whereby they “may from year to year work systematically forwards and upwards to the com“pletion of such a scheme. The funds locally raised for this purpose will be “locally applied. But Provincial Governments will have to meet the cost of “provincial famines out of provincial funds to the fullest extent those funds can “bear. They will find that thriftless expenditure in one year may involve the “risk of diminished allotments in subsequent years; and I cannot doubt that the “unavoidable recognition of this fact will make them wisely eager to spend the “requisite proportion of their annual income upon well-planned and carefully “estimated railway and irrigation works, which will be their best insurance “against the losses of famine, and the postponement of all administrative progress “which famine generally entails. It will be the special duty of the Public “Works Department of this Government to keep those objects constantly in view “of the Local Governments, and to assist them, no less constantly, in their endea“vours to give a rational preference to really useful and remunerative works, “over those more captivating, but less compensating, subjects of expenditure “which, in all comparatively small communities, so powerfully appeal to pro“vincial pride, professional proclivities, or popular pleasure.”

3. It now becomes my duty to invite my colleagues in charge of the two Departments on which will mainly devolve the task of giving effect to the policy thus sketched out, (that is to say, the Public Works and Financial Departments,) to consider, and propose, the further measures requisite for accomplishing the object of it. Considerable progress has indeed been already made in this direction. The orders that will shortly issue on the report of the Committee assembled last autumn at Simla, and the supplementary report more recently received, will do much to facilitate the operations of the Local Governments; and to place their relations with the Government of India on the footing that is now requisite.

4. But, while requesting the co-operation of my colleagues in this important task, I feel that I should be imperfectly performing my own duty if I did not endeavour, to the best of my ability, to lay down the lines on which the action of our Government should proceed in the prosecution of the great object which, for many months past, has been one of the chief causes of our solicitude.

5. The sole justification for the increased taxation which has just been imposed upon the people of India for the purpose of ensuring this Empire against the worst calamities of future famine, so far as such an insurance can now be practically provided, is the pledge we have given that a sum not less than a million and a half sterling, which exceeds the amount of the additional contributions obtained from the people for this purpose, shall be annually applied to it. We have explained to the people of this country that the additional revenue raised by the new taxes is required, not for the luxuries, but the necessities, of the State; not for general purposes, but for the construction of a particular class of Public Works; and we have pledged ourselves not to spend one rupee of the special resources, thus created, upon works of a different character; while we exercise the most strict economy in all other branches of our expenditure, so that no greater burdens shall be thrown on the country than are absolutely required by the necessities of the case.

6. The pledges which my Financial Colleague was authorised to give, on behalf of the Government, were explicit and emphatic as regards these points. It was, however, impossible to explain in detail to the public the precise character of those administrative guarantees which the Government of India then bound itself to provide for the faithful redemption of the above-mentioned pledges.

7. Owing to this impossibility, the manner in which the proceeds of the new taxation are to be applied to the reduction of debt is the only 'part' of our financial programme as to which any mistrust of our sincerity has been indicated on the part of the community. For this reason, it is all the more binding on the honor of the Government to redeem to the uttermost, without evasion or delay, those pledges, for the adequate redemption of which the people of India have, and can have, no other guarantee than the good faith of their rulers.

8. Now, the engagements which the Government of India has bound itself to fulfil, are the following:—

1st.—To apply funds from the surplus revenues at the rate of $1\frac{1}{2}$ million sterling per annum, in such a manner as to create what shall, in fact, be an insurance fund, by which future expenditure for famine relief can be provided for without adding to the permanent burdens on the revenues.

2nd.—To bring about this result, either by the direct discharge of debt in times of prosperity, or by investments of surplus revenue in Productive Public Works, under conditions that shall ensure their being really remunerative, and that they shall at the same time supply to the country the best material protection against famine.

3rd.—To comply with these conditions by carrying out in all the provinces of India, as speedily as our financial position and other economical considerations will admit, all approved extensions of irrigation, and a complete system of cheap railroads, primarily and specially adapted to a slow goods traffic.

4th.—To secure to the utmost the financial basis of this undertaking, by assigning to, and concentrating upon, the Local Governments the financial responsibility and administrative powers necessary for the designing, commencement, completion, and maintenance, within their respective provinces, of such a system of works as shall fulfil the requirements of the case for each of them.

5th.—To arrive at this result by giving to these Local Governments the maximum of pecuniary interest and profit in the cheap construction and successful management of all provincial public works; by reducing to a minimum interference on the part of the Government of India in the administration of such works; and by not permitting such interference to extend beyond what is necessary to ensure regularity and harmony of action, or protection to the general financial interests of the State.

9. To carry out adequately the engagements thus publicly contracted, immediate, consistent, and persistent adherence to certain lines of conduct, on the part of the Central Government, is absolutely necessary.

10. In the first place, the great and dominant condition which must necessarily govern our action, determine every direction, and influence every detail, in the prosecution of a policy on the success of which the character and efficiency of our government will henceforth be properly held to depend, is decentralisa-

tion of the administration, and consequent reduction of the central establishments. These conditions apply more or less to all departments of the Supreme Government; but, from the nature of the case, it is in the Public Works Department that they will chiefly operate, and that the loyal and intelligent recognition of them will have the amplest and most beneficent results. I need not, however, now dwell further on the paramount importance of the efficient application of these conditions to all departments of the Supreme Government, because it has already been decided in Council to constitute and appoint a Committee for the purpose of working out in detail recommendations to be submitted to the Governor General in Council for the reduction of all the central establishments in just proportion to the diminution in the administrative work of each department, relatively one to the other, which may be reasonably anticipated from the practical operation of the decentralisation policy now adopted and proclaimed.

11. In the next place, inasmuch as it is upon the Local Governments that the responsibility has been placed for the provision, maintenance, and management of local protective works, it is with the Local Governments, and not with the Government of India, that the initiative must now rest, as regards the recommendation and elaboration of schemes for giving effect to this policy.

12. Further, it must be distinctly understood, and constantly borne in mind, that as the improvement of the means of communication throughout the country is without doubt one of the most certain means of giving protection from famine, the rapid and cheap construction of provincial railroads, specially constructed for a slow goods traffic, is an object to which all the financial resources of the Government of India, available for this class of works, aided by those of the Local Governments, must now, and for many years to come, be primarily, if not almost exclusively, directed. The desired economy should be sought for by rigorously excluding from our present consideration all proposals that will sensibly add to the first cost of construction, whether for works or carriages, anything not essential for meeting the main end in view,—a local goods traffic. It will certainly be better to pay somewhat more, after the lines become remunerative, for additions then found desirable, than to delay the early general extension of railways, in order to supply what, in some sense at least, are luxuries.

13. It is also now essential that the Government of India in the Public Works Department should seriously re-consider its action in respect to lines passing through Native States; and that it should, without loss of time, take such steps as may be possible to secure its financial position in regard to those lines; so that while the provision of such improved means of communication in the territories of our Native feudatories is encouraged as far as possible, they shall not become causes of delay in the extension of railways through British provinces, the revenues of which have till now almost exclusively supplied the means of carrying out the lines which pass through Native States.

14. In every case of a line passing through Native territory, vigilant foresight and re-doubled care will be required from the Public Works Department to provide financial guarantees sufficient to replace that responsibility for results which is guarded, in the case of provincial lines, by the liability of provincial revenues to make good all deficiencies in the estimated profits on expenditure. If this condition of our present and future action be not carefully observed in the Public Works Department, the Government of India may be exposed to a great scandal.

15. Caution is also needed on the part of the Public Works Department in respect to outlay, both as regards capital outlay and working expenditure, on Guaranteed Railways, more especially on those of which the receipts do not cover the guaranteed rate of interest.

16. In amplification of these general principles, there are some observations on the manner of applying them which I desire to add.

It will henceforth be necessary to exercise great caution when devising railroad projects, or ordering surveys on behalf of railroad projects, which are not essential to the purpose I have indicated; and which would, therefore, involve the diversion of necessarily limited funds to objects other than those to which all the available financial resources of the Government of India must, for many years to come, be devoted. Any preliminary expenditure that will not lead to the eventual execution of some useful work, or tend to reduce the risk of error in the preparation of projects for actual execution, will be wasteful, and should not be permitted.

17. Next, to ensure the rapid and general extension of railways, it is essential that they should be cheap, and designed as simply and economically as may be consistent with the practical demands of a slow goods traffic, while proper attention is given to permanence in the construction of the principal works. From this point of view some re-consideration of existing rules (relating to the preparation and sanction of projects) may be requisite, so as to give reasonable facilities for the gradual execution of railway works. It is certainly not expedient to force prematurely the provision of conveniences, though in themselves desirable, which will operate as causes of expense, and which might be postponed without sacrifice of substantial efficiency. The early opening of the lines in a manner that will admit of a properly economical slow traffic of goods is the object to be aimed at, rather than the complete provision of all those appliances which the profuse expenditure on our Guaranteed Railways has in their case supplied; and which, through them, have come to be looked upon as necessities. Those who find in the absence of such luxuries a just cause of complaint should be reminded that all Indian Railways are provided at the cost of the Indian tax-payer, and that the well-being of the country at large must receive attention before merely personal comfort.

18. Speaking of the lines of railway we now have to provide, as a whole, it may certainly be said that the traffic upon them will be light, and that the financial obligations to construct them at the smallest possible cost are paramount. In respect to these lines I regard the question of gauge as no longer open. Our experience is already sufficient to prove that narrow-gauge lines admit of considerable economy in first construction; and that they are fully capable of carrying any traffic likely to be brought upon them, as cheaply at least as a similar traffic could be carried on any railway. The Government of India having some years ago decided that the narrow gauge should be adopted for such lines as those to which I am now referring, much progress having been already made in their prosecution, and no reason existing for going back from the original decision, I hold it to be finally settled that this system of construction shall be exclusively adopted in future, so far as regards the class of railways here under consideration.

19. That there may be lines of communication on which the construction of railways will hereafter be desirable on strategic and military grounds, I am ready to recognise. Were they commenced, however, to-morrow and carried out, under high pressure, regardless of expenditure, they could not be completed in time to render them available for military purposes for the next three or four years. It is not upon the commencement of long and costly strategic lines of rail, that the resources available for increasing the strength and efficiency of our military power at India, can, at the present time, be most advantageously laid out. Nor, so far as I am able to judge, is the Government of India pledged by public engagements, or required on behalf of any urgent interests, to commence and carry out any such lines with all possible expedition. Still less, is there any reason, which I can recognise, for giving to the construction of such lines precedence in the present distribution of our annual expenditure upon Public Works. On the other hand, the Government of India is most distinctly, publicly, and emphatically bound to lose no time in commencing, and completing, within the limits of its actual means, the construction of provincial lines of railroad for slow goods traffic on the cheapest possible system. Until the projects necessary for the fulfilment of this engagement have been completely and satisfactorily carried out, no other new projects can be entertained, or discussed, unless the plea of superior urgency is first established.

20. Of course, due provision must be made for the early completion of lines of this character which are now in progress; though the present expenditure upon them should be limited as closely as possible. While all is done that is really necessary to meet the objects for which they were primarily undertaken, it should be borne in mind that they were not designed as lines of commercial traffic; and that the supply of the conveniences required for such a traffic should rather follow, than precede, its development.

21. Whenever we are called upon to consider, as a practical and pressing question, the immediate construction of strategic lines of railroad not yet commenced, I shall be ready to receive and discuss, without prejudice, all arguments in favor of adopting for such lines, upon military grounds, the broad-gauge system. But no such projects are now before us; nor does it seem probable that they can be brought before us in any practical shape for some years to come.

22. For these reasons, I am satisfied that the Government of India, in the prosecution of the objects it is pledged to carry out, should conform its action to the strictest conditions of promptitude, combined with economy; and should watch carefully against the misdirection, either of the ingenuity of its officers, or the resources of the State, to the survey of lines of railroad which have no connection with the attainment of these objects, and are likely to lead to no present useful results.

23. With reference to the Guaranteed Railways, which serve as the great arteries of commerce through the country, it should be our object to see that all really needful supplementary works or rolling-stock are provided to meet the growth of the traffic. Beyond this, however, any expenditure that cannot be justified on the general principles laid down in the earlier part of this Minute, for the extension of railways, should be jealously challenged. The mere fact that such expenditure may probably be sufficiently covered by the expected return, will not justify the construction of costly lines, if thereby the completion of a greater length of cheaper lines is prevented. It is not possible to lay down any positive rule on such a subject; but the fact should not be lost sight of, that expenditure on Guaranteed Railways is, in truth, hardly different, in its financial effect on the ways and means of the Government, from expenditure on lines directly carried out by the State; and that the expansion of the former will necessarily cause the contraction of the latter.

24. In the presence of the vast area to which no sort of provision of railway transport has yet been given, it will further be extremely doubtful whether any countenance should be given to carrying out supplementary through lines of communication, as distinguished from those cheap local lines, the immediate provision of which I regard as so important. Without going so far as to reject the idea of some such lines being hereafter expedient, I consider that they should be closely examined if proposed; and that enquiry should be made whether the desired relief of the traffic may not be better provided by means of judiciously designed local lines.

25. The principle that justifies such a course of action is obvious. It is that, by closely limiting the first outlay, the largest possible extension of railways will be obtained in the shortest possible time. By doubling the lines, should the traffic anywhere ultimately require it, or by re-laying them on the broad gauge, should such a course be ever proved essential to carry the trade of the country, all needful relief can be given in the future; with this very great advantage, that the increased outlay will, in all cases, follow the growth of the Revenue, and not precede it. The minimum of financial risk will be incurred, while the maximum of practical advantage is secured.

26. To give full effect to the conclusions thus indicated, the early attention of the Financial and Public Works Departments should, as I have already suggested, be given to the matters that properly fall within their respective branches of business; acting however in concert, so far as may be necessary for the purpose of, framing instructions to all authorities concerned.

27. The Financial Department may usefully call the attention of all the other departments of the Government of India, and of all the Local Governments, to the paramount importance of giving effect to the policy recently adopted in relation to the protection of the country from the effects of famine. It should reiterate, in clear and emphatic terms, to the authorities concerned, both imperial and local, the cautions already generally stated in the declarations of the Government of India, as regards their several responsibilities; whether in co-operating for the suggestion and practical application of the requisite measures to be taken, or in guarding the many important financial interests directly or indirectly involved in all proposals for expenditure, or sanction.

28. Increased attention is also required in the Financial Department to the financial results of all Productive Public Works; and that Department should now, in communication with the Public Works Department, consider what steps ought to be taken to secure a full review of the results of all such works, year by year, in a complete and comprehensive shape, such as would be suitable for presentation to Parliament.

29. The consideration of all administrative details in relation to their cost, and a comparison of such cost on various works of like general character, would properly fall within the province of the Public Works Department. On the other hand, a general review of the financial results as a whole, whether in relation to the original cost of the works, the liabilities they involve in the shape of interest charges or otherwise, their aggregate effects in increasing the public revenues or expenditure, or other analogous considerations, would be dealt with in the Financial Department.

30. The extreme importance of constantly keeping in view the actual results of the great financial operations involved in the prosecution of Public Works in India, whether under guarantee of interest or by the direct expenditure of money by the State, cannot be overrated. It is only by the consideration and comparison of such results that proper economy can be secured, and financial trouble avoided. It will almost invariably be found that it is to the want of attention to this point that embarrassments arise from excess of expenditure over estimates, or from the unthrifty management of works in operation.

31. In such returns promptitude and regularity are more to be sought for, than over-refinement in calculation, which is often of no real value for practical purposes.

32. My attention has been drawn, in relation to this matter, to a despatch from the Secretary of State (Railway No. 119, dated 25th November 1875), in which he gives instructions for the revision of the railway traffic returns, for the purpose to which I have referred. The subject is one which should be reconsidered in connection with the steps now to be taken; and a joint responsibility should be held to attach to the Financial and Public Works Departments for securing the regular and punctual preparation of whatever returns of this class are eventually held to be requisite.

33. It would fall to the Public Works Department, in dealing with its share of the duties now placed upon it, to point out to the Local Governments the increased necessity which now exists for greater attention on their part, than has heretofore been given, to the requirements of their provinces as a whole; and to remind them of the fresh responsibilities now thrown upon them; at the same time requiring them, in sending up proposals on behalf of Productive Public Works which require the sanction of the Supreme Government, or the provision of funds outside of the ordinary grants from the Revenues of the year, to regard such proposals as parts of a general and connected scheme for satisfying as expeditiously, and as economically, as may be practically possible, the pressing wants of their provinces within the limits of their financial powers.

34. It will further be apparent that the obligations now publicly undertaken by the Government of India as regards, on the one hand, expedition, and, on the other hand, economy, in the construction of useful local works, demand from the Public Works Department the severest restraint upon superfluous expenditure in every branch of its administration; and the most careful, intelligent, and well-considered selection of the works recommended to the sanction of the Governor General in Council for the purpose of supplying to the country at large the best means that can be devised for giving it protection from the destructive effects of Famine.

s. The Value of the Trade of 1876-77 is the largest ever yet recorded, if the years of the American war 1863 to 1866 are excluded. The total Imports amounted to £48,864,086, and the total Exports to £65,043,789, both including treasure and Government stores.

The increase of the Import of treasure was very large, the amount having been more than double the average of the preceding 4 years.

EXPORT OF INDIA TO THE WORLD.

The value of the Imports of merchandise, though somewhat less than in 1875-76, shows a fair increase over the average of the last 4 years, which, in combination with the continued increase of the Exports, is a satisfactory indication of the growing prosperity of the country.

The rapid change in the relative values of gold and silver which culminated in July 1876 is illustrated by many entries in the Table in the preceding page.

In the following table the statistics of the exports of the principal Indian staples are arranged in order of their value in 1876-77. Opium has continued in steady demand, and now stands first in the list, closely followed by Cotton, which, however, it is observed with regret, has declined in value and quantity. Rice has changed places again with Seeds. Jute, Hides and Skins and Indigo form the next group, each member of which retains its relative place. The growing proportion of manufactured Cotton, Jute and Hides is interesting and encouraging. Tea made a stride forward; and Wheat more than doubled in value. Silk and Sugar also sprang up again under the stimulus of higher prices:—

MONETISATION
SILVER IN
UNITED STATES.

The most important event of the year bearing upon the value of silver is the remonetisation of that metal by the Legislature of the United States of America by an Act which was passed on the 28th February 1878, in spite of the President's veto, by a majority of two-thirds of the House of Representatives and the Senate respectively.

The text of the Act cannot reach India for some time; but the following is the Bill which, it is understood, was accepted by the Senate: it has been ascertained that the Act does not differ from it in essential particulars:—

An Act to authorize the free coinage of the standard silver dollar and to restore its legal-tender character.

Be it enacted, Sec.—That there shall be coined, at the several mints of the United States, silver dollars of the weight of four hundred-and-twelve-and-a-half grains troy of standard silver, as provided in the Act of January 18th, 1837, on which shall be the devices and superscriptions provided by said Act, which coins, together with all silver dollars heretofore coined by the United States, of like weight and fineness, shall be a legal tender, at their nominal value, for all debts and dues, public and private, except when otherwise provided by contract; (and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorised and directed, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to purchase from time to time silver bullion, at the market price thereof, not less than $2,000,000 per month, nor more than $4,000,000 per month, and cause the same to be coined into such dollars, and any gain or seigniorage arising from this coinage shall be accounted for and paid into the Treasury as provided under existing laws relative to the subsidiary coinage; provided that the amount of money at any one time invested in such silver bullion, exclusive of such resulting coin, shall not exceed $5,000,000).

* The values measured in silver in London have been calculated from the values in gold on the basis of the price of standard silver in London.

Section 2.—All Acts and parts of Acts inconsistent with the provisions of this Act are hereby repealed.

The proceedings of the Latin Union also may conveniently be recounted here. In 1873 the Belgian Government obtained from their Legislature authority to suspend or limit the coinage of 5-franc pieces. From 1874 the same principle was adopted by the States of the Latin Union, and, at the yearly meetings of their respective delegates, the limitation of the silver coinage was fixed as follows:—

At the meeting of the Conference which it was intended to hold in January 1877, the question of adopting a gold standard was to have been discussed; but the Conference was postponed to the end of the year, the several Powers forming the Union agreeing, meanwhile, to restrict the coinage of silver in 1877 to half the amounts authorised for 1876. The Conference was again deferred till February 1878, to fix the contingents of silver to be coined this year; but as a Conference will be necessary in October to consider whether the Union should be maintained in its present form, the delegates might decide on not meeting till then. Negotiations on the subject were going on at the end of January 1878. If the Latin Union be not denounced before the 1st January 1879, it can only be terminated at the end of another period of fifteen years. In 1875, the coinage of 5-franc pieces was, in Belgium, France and Italy, to the full extent permitted, while Switzerland refrained from issuing any. In 1877, France, Belgium and Switzerland did not coin any silver, but Italy coined to the full amount of her contingent. On 5th August 1876 a law was passed in France, authorising the President to keep the mints of France closed against the coinage of silver until January 1878; and in August 1876 he suspended entirely the coinage of silver, except for subsidiary purposes. In January 1878 M. Léon Say introduced into the French Senate a Bill to prolong the power of the Government to suspend the coinage of silver until the end of March 1879. After explanation, the Bill was carried without opposition. In December 1876 Belgium suspended the coinage of silver.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL STATISTICS 1877-78.

The following are the figures of the Trade of the ten months April to January 1877-78, compared with the corresponding figures during the two previous years:—

	1876-77.	1877-78.
Value of commodities exported excluding gold and silver	46,300,370	48,265,519
Value of commodities imported excluding gold and silver	30,826,294	30,398,721
Excess exports	15,483,076	17,866,798
Net imports of silver	966,336	5,028,814
Net imports of gold	1,486,222	—410,253
Total net imports of gold and silver	2,452,558	5,218,581
GRAND TOTAL IMPORTS AND EXPORTS OF ALL KINDS	83,120,811	91,355,711

Both imports and exports have increased largely, which indicates on the whole a prosperity which appears extraordinary when it is remembered that the Famine which has during this period afflicted the whole of Southern India is estimated to cost 9½ million sterling in all and 6½ million in 1877-78, and that Upper India lost almost the whole of its autumn harvest.

In the following table the statistics of the principal staples exported to Foreign Countries during the first ten months of the year are compared with the corresponding statistics of the two previous years. The cause of the decreased quantity of Opium exported, and of its increased average value, is the drought in Malwa. Cotton, Raw, shows again a large decrease, partly compensated by a small increase of Cotton Manufactures, as more mills come into work. The astonishing growth of the exports of Seeds, Rice, Jute, and Wheat, notwithstanding the pressure of the famine in Southern India, with consequent high prices, may perhaps be, to a great extent, attributed to the Turco-Russian War: Russian supplies having been interrupted, India has replaced them. The movement of these staples has doubtless produced the great traffic on the East Indian and Great Indian Peninsula Railways which has been already reviewed. Tea has done well, the average declared value being but little lower than last year. Coffee, too, has prospered. The only article besides Cotton, Raw, which shows a serious decrease is Lac, but this article is comparatively unimportant.

Next follow similar comparative statistics of imports. Here Cotton Goods show a large and important increase, though at some sacrifice of price. Metals also once more show an increase. Liquors, Silk, Railway Plant, Coal, Provisions, Sugar show more or less considerable growth. The Trade of India this year is certainly flourishing.

The value of silver and the sterling exchanges have been remarkably steady throughout the year and have even manifested some recovery. The recent unprecedented inflation of the Government Paper Currency is connected no doubt with the great importations of silver during the year, and to the reaction upon the rather sudden cessation of the grain traffic with Madras in November last.

By order of the Government of India,

FORT WILLIAM,
FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT,
March 18th, 1878.

R. B. CHAPMAN,
Secretary to the Government of India.

The 22nd March 1878.

No. 1980.—Ordered that the following Resolution be published for general information:—

READ again—

Financial Resolution No. 3556, dated 19th October 1877.

RESOLUTION.—In order to eliminate from the category of “Money in the Government Treasuries and at credit of the Government in the Presidency Banks and their Branches” everything which is not actually available for immediate use as legal-tender in payment or on account, the Governor General in Council is pleased to pass the following orders.

2. All legal-tender copper coin, and all silver coin which is legal-tender only for fractions of a rupee, shall be received in the first instance—if coined at the Calcutta Mint—by the Comptroller General, and if coined at the Bombay Mint—by the Accountant General, Bombay, and shall be deposited in the Office of Issue of Paper Currency in Calcutta and Bombay respectively, where depôts of these coins shall be formed and supplied by the Mints from time to time upon the requisition of the Comptroller General. Sub-depôts shall be formed, in like manner, at all the other Offices of Issue of Paper Currency, and at such other treasuries as the Comptroller General may direct.

3. Legal-tender copper coin, and silver coin which is legal-tender for only fractions of a rupee, which may accumulate in any treasury or at any Presidency Bank or Branch of a Presidency Bank in excess of the current local demand for such coin, should, under the orders of the Comptroller General, be at once returned into store in the nearest depôt or sub-depôt.

4. No copper or silver coin in store in such depôts or sub-depôts shall be reckoned as money, or included in any return of money in the public treasuries or at credit of the Government.

5. Legal-tender copper or small silver coins, to meet current local demands, will be supplied to treasuries from the nearest depôt or sub-depôt; but indents should not be made for such coin in excess of what is necessary to meet current local demands.

6. As soon as legal-tender copper coin or small silver coin is issued from a depôt or sub-depôt, it will be reckoned and treated as money; and as soon as any such coin is received into such depôt, it will cease to be treated as money. The net revenue from the copper coinage in any year will be reckoned upon the excess of the issues from the depôts and sub-depôts over the receipts from the public, or the treasuries or banks under paragraph 3.

7. As soon as occasion offers, the contracts with the Presidency Banks should, with the concurrence of the Directors, be revised, so as to remove the distinction now made in respect to coin which is not legal-tender without limit of amount. These present orders will obviate the need of any such distinction.

No. 1981.—The services of Mr. D. M. Barbour, Officiating Accountant General, Bengal, are placed at the disposal of the Government of Bengal, with effect from the 8th April 1878.

No. 1987.—Privilege leave for three months, beginning on the 25th March 1878, is granted to Mr. C. E. Chapman, B.C.S., Accountant General and Commissioner of the Department of Issue of Government Paper Currency, Bombay.

Mr. W. E. Gordon is appointed to officiate as Accountant General and Commissioner of the Department of Issue of Government Paper Currency, Bombay, during the absence of Mr. Chapman, or until further orders.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to signify Her intention to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross on the under-mentioned Officer, whose claim to the same has been submitted for Her Majesty's approval, for his gallant conduct at Quetta, in the East Indies, as recorded against his name, viz. :—

Corps.	Rank and Name.	Act of Gallantry for which recommended.
Bengal Staff Corps.	Capt. Andrew Scott.	For his gallant conduct at Quetta, on the 20th July 1877, whilst serving in the 4th Sikh Infantry, on the occasion of an attack by some Pathan coolies on Lieutenants Hewson and Kunhardt, of the Royal Engineers. On the evening of that day, Captain Scott, whilst on duty at the regimental parade ground of the 4th Sikh Infantry at Quetta, hearing an alarm that British Officers were being killed, spontaneously rushed to the rescue, and finding Lieutenant Hewson cut down, and Lieutenant Kunhardt retiring, hand-pressed and wounded, and only protected by Sepoy Ruchpal Singh, of the above-mentioned Regiment, fell on the assailants, and with his own hand bayoneted two men, and closed with a third, who fell with him to the ground, and was killed by Sepoys of the Regiment. This act of courage and devotion saved the life of Lieutenant Kunhardt.

POST OFFICE.

NOTIFICATIONS.

Calcutta, the 8th March 1878.

GOVERNMENT SIMLA PASSENGER DAK.

Through booking from Umballa to Simla.

Arrangements have been made with effect from the 15th March for booking Express Carriage Daks from Umballa to Kalka, and Express Tonga Daks from Kalka to Simla, at the Calcutta Post Office,* under certain rules and conditions, of which a printed copy can be obtained on application to the Post Master, Calcutta. These arrangements will continue in force till the 25th April.

* Post Master's room, east verandah, between the hours of 10 A. M. and 4 P. M.

2. The charge for an Express Carriage Dāk from Umballa to Kalka will be Rs. 20. The charge for an Express Tonga Dāk from Kalka to Simla will be Rs. 20.

3. From the 1st April three ordinary vans carrying mails will also leave the Umballa Post Office—one in the morning at or about 5 A. M., and two others in the evening at or about 7 P. M. and 9-40 P. M. In each of these vans four seats will be available for passengers (if the weight of the mails admit) at a charge of Rs. 2½ per seat.

4. From the same date, viz., 1st April, two mail tongas will start from Kalka—one at about 3 A. M., and another at about 10-30 A. M. If the weight of mails admit of it, passengers can be accommodated in these tongas at Rs. 5 a seat. Seats in the Mail tongas can be booked only in the Umballa and Kalka Offices.

5. The Tonga Dāks are not Government Dāks, but those of a private agency called the Mountain Carrying Company, under the management of Mr. Lowrie, and under contract with the Post Office for the conveyance of mails.

TURTON SMITH,

Asst. Dir. Genl. of the Post Office of India.

The 28th January 1878.

The Passenger and Mail Cart Service between Caragola and Siligoree, hitherto kept up by the Postal Department, will, in consequence of the opening of the Northern Bengal State Railway, be discontinued from the 1st February 1878.

The 2nd March 1878.

PASSENGER SERVICE.

Messrs. Bird and Company have contracted to carry the Mails between Siliguri and Darjeeling by Tonga.

Passengers are conveyed by these Tongas at the following rates:—

For one seat, a sum not exceeding 8 annas a mile.

For two seats, a sum not exceeding 12 annas a mile.

J. MACFARLAN,

Offg. Post Master General of Bengal.

PASSENGER SERVICE.

Jessore Line.

A carriage line is maintained under contract between Chagdah Station on the Eastern Bengal Railway and Jessore, a distance of 48 miles. The contractor is bound to start one carriage each way daily to meet the up and down Mail Trains, but he is at liberty to make his own charges for the conveyance of passengers.

The 22nd March 1878.

Mails for Chittagong, Akyab, and Kyouk Phyoo, for transmission per Steamer Calcutta, will be closed at the General Post Office on Sunday, the 24th March 1878, at 6 P. M.

NOTICE.

The monuments of the persons named in the list appended in the Karnal Cemeteries are in want of repairs. The friends of the deceased, who desire their maintenance, are requested to communicate with the Deputy Commissioner, Karnal, Punjab, within two months.

This notice is given with reference to the following Rule XII of the rules for the care and use of Government Cemeteries, promulgated with Government of India's Notification (Home Department) No. 421, dated 12th December 1877.

"RULE XII (1). The Chaplain should communicate with the friends of the deceased when a monument needs repairing, or when such communication is not possible, advertise three times in the Gazette of India and the Gazette of the Province. If it falls into a ruinous condition, and no party will undertake to restore it, the ruined monument must be made level with the ground during the next repairs, and any slab it contained must be placed over the grave in simple masonry, or be inserted in the wall."

SCHEDULE.

An Act to amend the law relating to Forests, the transit of forest-produce, and the duty leviable on timber.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to Forests, the transit of forest-produce and the duty leviable on timber; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

1. This Act may be called "The Indian Forest Act, 1878:"

Short title.

It shall come into force at once in the territories respectively administered by the Governor of Bombay in Council, the Lieutenant-Governors of the Lower Provinces, the North-Western Provinces, and the Panjáb, (except the District of Hazára), and the Chief Commissioners of Oudh, the Central Provinces and Assam.

And any other Local Government may from time to time, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, extend, by notification in the local official Gazette, this Act to all or any of the territories for the time being under its administration.

Extension.

On and from the date on which this Act comes into force in any of the said territories, the enactments mentioned in the schedule hereto annexed shall be repealed in such territories. But all rules made under or validated by any of the said enactments and in force at the date of such repeal shall, so far as they are consistent with this Act, be deemed to have been made and published hereunder.

Repeal of enactments.

2. In this Act, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context,—

Interpretation-clause.

"Forest-officer" means any person whom the Governor General in Council, or the Local Government or any officer empowered by the Governor General in Council or the Local Government in this behalf, may from time to time appoint by name, or as holding an office, to carry out all or any of the purposes of this Act, or to do anything required by this Act or any rule made under this Act to be done by a Forest-officer:

"Tree." "Tree" includes bamboos, stumps and brushwood:

"Timber" includes trees and bamboos when they have fallen or have been felled, and all wood, whether cut up, or fashioned or hollowed-out for cart-wheels, mortars, canoes or other purposes or not:

"Timber."

"Forest-produce" includes the following when found in, or brought from, a forest, that is to say,—

"Forest-produce."

minerals (including limestone and laterite), surface-soil, trees, timber, grass, peat, canes, creepers, reeds, leaves, moss, flowers, fruits, roots, juice, catechu, bark, honey, wax, lac, caoutchouc, gum, wood-oil, grass-oil, resin, varnish, silk-worms and cocoons, shells, skins, tusks, bones and horns:

"Forest-offence" means an offence punishable under this Act, or under any rule made under this Act:

"Forest-offence."

"Cattle" includes elephants, camels, buffaloes, horses, mares, geldings, ponies, colts, fillies, mules, asses, pigs, rams, ewes, sheep, lambs, goats and kids:

"Cattle."

"River" includes streams, canals, creeks and other channels, natural or artificial.

"River."

CHAPTER II.

OF RESERVED FORESTS.

3. The Local Government may from time to time constitute any forest-land or waste-land which is the property of Government, or over which the Government has proprietary rights, or to the whole or any part of the forest-produce of which the Government is entitled, a Reserved Forest in the manner hereinafter provided.

Power to reserve forests.

4. Whenever it is proposed to constitute any land a Reserved Forest, the Local Government may publish a notification in the local official Gazette—

Notification by Local Government.

(a) declaring that it is proposed to constitute such land a reserved forest;

(b) specifying the limits of such forest; and

(c) appointing an officer (hereinafter called "the Forest Settlement Officer") to inquire into and determine the existence, nature and extent of any rights alleged to exist in favour of any person in or over any land comprised within such limits, or in or over any forest-produce, and to deal with the same as provided in this chapter.

Explanation 1.—For the purpose of clause (b) of this section, it shall be sufficient to describe the limits of the forest by roads, rivers, ridges or other well-known or readily intelligible boundaries.

The officer appointed under clause (c) of this section shall ordinarily be a person not holding any forest-office except that of Forest Settlement Officer.

Nothing in this section shall prevent the Local Government from appointing any number of officers not exceeding three, not more than one of whom shall be a person holding any forest-office except as aforesaid, to perform the duties of a Forest Settlement Officer under this Act.

5. During the interval between the publication of such notification and the date fixed by the notification under section nineteen, no right shall be acquired in or over the land comprised in such notification, except by succession or under a grant or contract in writing made or entered into by or on behalf of Government or some person in whom such right was vested when the former notification was issued; and no fresh clearings for cultivation or for any other purpose shall be made in such land.

Bar of accrual of forest-rights.

6. When a notification has been issued under section four, the Forest Settlement Officer shall publish in the language of the country, in every town and village in the neighbourhood of the land comprised therein, a proclamation—

Proclamation by Forest Settlement Officer.

(a) specifying the limits of the proposed forest;

(b) explaining the consequences which, as herein-after provided, will ensue on the reservation of such forest; and

(c) fixing a period of not less than three months from the date of such proclamation, and requiring every person claiming any right mentioned in section four or five either to present to such officer within such period a written notice specifying, or to appear before him and state, the nature of such right and the amount and particulars of the compensation (if any) claimed in respect thereof.

7. The Forest Settlement Officer shall take down in writing all statements made under section six, and shall, at some convenient place, enquire into all claims duly preferred under that section, and the existence of any rights mentioned in section four or five and not claimed under section six, so far as the same may be ascertainable from the records of Government and the evidence of any persons likely to be acquainted with the same.

8. For the purposes of such enquiry, the Forest Settlement Officer may exercise the following powers, that is to say:—

(a) power to enter, by himself or any officer authorized by him for the purpose, upon any land, and to survey, demarcate, and make a map of the same; and

(b) the powers of a Civil Court in the trial of suits.

9. Rights in respect of which no claim has been preferred under section six, and of the existence of which no knowledge has been acquired by enquiry under section seven, shall be extinguished, unless before the notification under section nineteen is published the person claiming them satisfies the Forest Settlement Officer that he had sufficient cause for not preferring such claim within the period fixed under section six.

10. In the case of a claim to a right in or over any land, other than a right of way or pasture or to forest-produce or a watercourse, the Forest Settlement Officer shall pass an order admitting or rejecting the same in whole or in part.

If such claim is admitted in whole or in part, the Forest Settlement Officer shall either (1) exclude such land from the limits of the proposed Forest; or (2) come to an agreement with the owner thereof for the surrender of his rights; or (3) proceed to acquire such land in the manner provided by the Land Acquisition Act, 1870.

For the purpose of so acquiring such land—

(a) the Forest Settlement Officer shall be deemed to be a Collector proceeding under the Land Acquisition Act, 1870;

(b) the claimant shall be deemed to be a person interested and appearing before him in pursuance of a notice given under section nine of that Act;

(c) the provisions of the preceding sections of that Act shall be deemed to have been complied with; and

(d) the Collector, with the consent of the claimant, or the Court, with the consent of both parties, may award compensation in land, or partly in land and partly in money.

11. In the case of a claim to rights of pasture or to forest-produce, the Forest Settlement Officer shall pass an order admitting or rejecting the same in whole or in part.

12. The Forest Settlement Officer, when passing any order under section eleven, shall record, so far as may be practicable,—

(a) the name, father's name, caste, residence and occupation of the person claiming the right;

(b) the designation, position and area of all fields or groups of fields (if any), and the designation and position of all buildings (if any), in respect of which the exercise of such rights is claimed.

13. If the Forest Settlement Officer admits in whole or in part any claim under section eleven, he shall also record the extent to which the claim is so admitted, specifying the number and description of the cattle which the claimant is from time to time entitled to graze in the forest, the season during which such pasture is permitted, the quantity of timber and other forest-produce which he is from time to time authorised to take or receive, or such other particulars as the case may require. He shall also record whether the timber or other forest-produce obtained by the exercise of the rights claimed may be sold or bartered.

14. After making such record, the Forest Settlement Officer shall, to the best of his ability, and having due regard to the maintenance of the Reserved Forest in respect of which the claim is made, pass such orders as will ensure the continued exercise of the rights so admitted. For this purpose, the Forest Settlement Officer may—

(a) set out some other forest-tract of sufficient extent, and in a locality reasonably convenient for the purposes of such claimants, and record an order conferring upon them a right of pasture or to forest-produce (as the case may be) to the extent admitted; or

(b) so alter the limits of the proposed Forest as to exclude forest-land of sufficient extent, in a locality reasonably convenient, for the purposes of the claimants; or

(c) record an order, continuing to such claimants a right of pasture or to forest-produce (as the case may be), to the extent so admitted, at such seasons, within such portions of the proposed Forest and under such rules as may from time to time be prescribed by the Local Government.

15. In case the Forest Settlement Officer finds it impossible, having due regard to the maintenance of the Reserved Forest, to make such settlement under section fourteen as shall ensure the continued exercise of the said rights to the extent so admitted, he shall (subject to such rules as the Local Government may from time to time prescribe in this behalf) commute such rights, either by the payment to such persons of a sum of money in lieu thereof, or by the grant of land, or in such other manner as he thinks fit.

16. Any person who has made a claim under this Act, or any Forest-officer or other person generally or specially empowered by the Local Government in this behalf, may, within three months from the date of the order passed on such claim by the Forest Settlement Officer under section ten, eleven, fourteen or fifteen, present an appeal from such order to such officer of the Revenue Department, of rank not lower than that of a Collector or Deputy Commissioner, as the Local Government may from time to time, by notification in the local official Gazette, appoint by name, or as holding an office, to hear appeals from such orders:

Provided that if the Local Government establishes (as it is hereby empowered to do) a Court (hereinafter called the Forest Court) composed of three persons to be appointed by the Local Government, such appeals shall be presented to such Court.

17. Every appeal under section sixteen shall be made by petition in writing, and may be delivered to the Forest Settlement Officer, who shall forward it without delay to the authority competent to hear the same.

If the appeal be to an officer appointed under section sixteen, it shall be heard in the manner prescribed for the time being for the hearing of appeals in matters relating to land-revenue.

If the appeal be to the Forest-court, the Court shall fix a day and a convenient place in the neighbourhood of the proposed forest for hearing the appeal, and shall give notice thereof to the parties, and shall hear such appeal accordingly.

The order passed thereon by such officer or Court, or by the majority of the members of such Court, shall be final, subject to revision by the Local Government.

18. The Local Government, or any person who has made a claim under this Act, may appoint any person to appear, plead and act on its or his behalf before the Forest Settlement Officer, or the appellate officer or Court, in the course of any inquiry or appeal under this Act.

19. When the following events have occurred (namely),—

(a) the period fixed under section six for preferring claims has elapsed, and all claims (if any) made within such period have been disposed of by the Forest Settlement Officer; and

(b) if such claims have been made, and the period limited by section sixteen for appealing from the orders passed on such claims has elapsed, and all appeals (if any) presented within such period have been disposed of by the appellate officer or Court; and the Local Government may publish a notification in the local official Gazette, specifying definitely, according to boundary-marks erected or otherwise, the limits of the forest which it is intended to reserve, and declaring the same to be reserved from a date fixed by such notification.

(c) all lands (if any) to be included in the proposed forest, which the Forest Settlement Officer has, under section ten, elected to acquire under the Land Acquisition Act, 1870, have become vested in the Government under section sixteen of that Act,

From the date so fixed, such forest shall be deemed to be a Reserved Forest.

20. The Forest-officer shall, before the date fixed by such notification, cause a translation thereof into the language of the country to be published in every town and village in the neighbourhood of the forest.

21. The Local Government may, within five years from the publication of any notification under section nineteen, revise any arrangement made under section fourteen or seventeen, and may, for this purpose, rescind or modify any order made under section fourteen or seventeen, and direct that any one of the proceedings specified in section fourteen be taken in lieu of any other of such proceedings, or that the rights admitted under section eleven be commuted under section fifteen.

22. No right of any description shall be acquired in or over a Reserved Forest, except by succession or under a grant or contract in writing made by or on behalf of the Government or of some person in whom such right was vested when the notification under section nineteen was issued.

23. Notwithstanding anything contained in section twenty-two, no right continued under section fourteen, clause (c), shall be alienated by way of grant, sale, lease, mortgage or otherwise, without the sanction of the Local Government: provided that when any such right is appendant to any land or house, it may be sold or otherwise alienated with such land or house.

No timber or other forest-produce obtained in exercise of any such right shall be sold or bartered except to such extent as may have been admitted in the order recorded under section thirteen.

24. The Forest-officer may from time to time, with the previous sanction of the Local Government or of any officer duly authorized in that behalf, stop any public or private way or water-course in a Reserved Forest: provided, that a substitute for the way or water-course so stopped, which the Local Government deems to be reasonably convenient, already exists, or has been provided or constructed by the Forest-officer in lieu thereof.

25. Any person who—

(a) makes any fresh clearing prohibited by section five, or

(b) sets fire to a Reserved Forest, or kindles any fire in such manner as to endanger the same; or who, in a Reserved Forest,

(c) kindles, keeps or carries any fire except at such seasons as the Forest-officer may from time to time notify in this behalf;

(d) trespasses or pastures cattle or permits cattle to trespass;

(e) causes any damage by negligence in felling any tree or cutting or dragging any timber ;

(f) fells, girdles, lops, taps or burns any tree, or strips-off the bark or leaves from, or otherwise damages, the same ;

(g) quarries stone, burns lime or charcoal, or collects, subjects to any manufacturing process or removes, any forest-produce ;

(h) clears or breaks up any land for cultivation, or any other purpose ; or,

(i) in contravention of any rules which the Local Government may from time to time prescribe, kills or catches elephants, hunts, shoots, fishes, poisons water, or sets traps or snares ;

shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine not exceeding five hundred rupees, or with both, in addition to such compensation for damage done to the forest as the convicting Court may direct to be paid.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prohibit (a) any act done by permission in writing of the Forest-officer, or under any rule made by the Local Government ; or (b) the exercise of any right continued under section fourteen, clause (c), or created by grant or contract in writing made by or on behalf of Government under section twenty-two.

Whenever fire is caused wilfully or by gross negligence in a Reserved Forest, the Local Government may notwithstanding that any penalty has been inflicted under this section direct that in such forest or any portion thereof the exercise of all rights of pasture or to forest-produce shall be suspended for such period as it thinks fit.

26. The Local Government may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, by notification in the local official Gazette, direct that, from a date fixed by such notification, any forest or any portion thereof reserved under this Act shall cease to be a Reserved Forest.

From the date so fixed, such forest or portion shall cease to be reserved ; but the rights (if any) which have been extinguished therein shall not revive in consequence of such cessation.

CHAPTER III.

OF VILLAGE-FORESTS.

27. The Local Government may from time to time assign to any village-community the rights of Government to or over any land which has been constituted a Reserved Forest, and may cancel such assignment. All forests so assigned shall be called Village-forests.

The Local Government may from time to time make rules for regulating the management of Village-forests, prescribing the conditions under which the community to which any such assignment is made may be provided with timber or other forest-produce, or pasture, and their duties for the protection and improvement of such forest.

All provisions of this Act relating to Reserved Forests shall (so far as they are consistent with the rules so made) apply to Village-forests.

CHAPTER IV.

OF PROTECTED FORESTS.

28. The Local Government may from time to time, by notification in the local official Gazette, declare " Protected Forests." the provisions of this chapter applicable to any forest-land or waste-land which is not included in a Reserved Forest, but which is the property of Government, or over which the Government has proprietary rights, or to the whole or any part of the forest-produce of which the Government is entitled.

The forest-land and waste-lands comprised in any such notification shall be called a " Protected Forest."

No such notification shall be made unless the nature and extent of the rights of Government and of private persons in or over the forest-land or waste-land comprised therein have been enquired into and recorded at a survey or settlement, or in such other manner as the Local Government thinks sufficient.

Every such record shall be presumed to be correct until the contrary is proved.

Provided that, if in the case of any forest-land or waste-land, the Local Government thinks that such enquiry and record are necessary, but that they will occupy such length of time as that the rights of Government will in the meantime be endangered, the Local Government may (pending such enquiry and record) declare such land to be a protected forest, but so as not to abridge or affect any existing rights of individuals or communities.

29. The Local Government may from time to time, by notification in the local official Gazette,—

(a) declare any class of trees in a protected forest or any trees in any such forest, to be reserved from a date fixed by such notification ;

(b) declare that a portion of such forest be closed for such term not exceeding twenty years as the Local Government thinks fit, and that the rights of private persons (if any) over such portion shall be suspended during such term : provided that the remainder of such forest be sufficient, and in a locality reasonably convenient, for the due exercise of the rights suspended in the portion so closed ;

(c) prohibit, from a date fixed as aforesaid, the quarrying of stone, or the burning of lime or charcoal, or the collection or subjection to any manufacturing process, or removal, of any forest-produce, in any such forest, and the breaking up or clearing for cultivation, for building, for herding cattle or for any other purpose, any land in any such forest ; and

(d) alter or cancel such declaration or prohibition.

30. The Collector or Deputy Commissioner of the district shall cause a translation into the language of the district, of every notification issued under section twenty-nine, to be affixed in a conspicuous place in every town and village in the neighbourhood of the forest comprised in the notification.

31. The Local Government may from time to time make rules to regulate the following matters:—

Power to make rules for protected forests.

(a) the cutting, sawing, conversion and removal of trees and timber, and the collection, manufacture and removal of forest-produce, from protected forests;

(b) the granting of licenses to the inhabitants of towns and villages in the vicinity of protected forests to take trees, timber or other forest-produce for their own use, and the production and return of such licenses by such persons;

(c) the granting of licenses to persons felling or removing trees or timber or other forest-produce from such forests for the purposes of trade, and the production and return of such licenses by such persons;

(d) the payments (if any) to be made by the persons mentioned in clauses (b) and (c) of this section, for permission to cut such trees, or to collect and remove such timber or other forest-produce;

(e) the other payments, if any, to be made by them in respect of such trees, timber and produce, and the places where such payments shall be made;

(f) the examination of forest-produce passing out of such forests;

(g) the clearing and breaking up of land for cultivation or other purposes in such forests;

(h) the protection from fire of timber lying in such forests and of trees reserved under section twenty-nine;

(i) the cutting of grass and pasturing of cattle in such forests;

(j) killing or catching elephants, hunting, shooting, fishing, poisoning water, and setting traps or snares in such forests;

(k) the protection and management of any portion of a forest closed under section twenty-nine;

(l) the exercise of rights referred to in section twenty-eight.

32. Any person who commits any of the following offences:—

Penalties for acts in contravention of notification under section 29.

(a) fells, girdles, lops, taps or burns any tree reserved under section twenty-nine, or strips off the bark or leaves from, or otherwise damages, any such tree;

(b) contrary to any prohibition under section twenty-nine, quarries any stone, or burns any lime or charcoal, or collects, subjects to any manufacturing process, or removes, any forest-produce;

(c) contrary to any prohibition under section twenty-nine, breaks up or clears for cultivation or any other purpose any land in any protected forest;

(d) sets fire to such forest, or kindles a fire without taking all reasonable precautions to prevent its spreading to any trees reserved under section twenty-nine, whether standing, fallen or felled, or to any closed portion of such forest;

(e) leaves burning any fire kindled by him in the vicinity of any such trees or closed portion;

(f) fells any tree or drags any timber so as to damage any tree reserved as aforesaid;

(g) permits cattle to damage any such tree;

(h) infringes any rule made under section thirty-

shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

33. Nothing in this chapter shall be deemed to prohibit any act done with the permission in writing of the Forest-officer, or in accordance with rules made under section thirty-one, or (except as regards any portion of a forest closed under section twenty-nine) in the exercise of any right recorded under section twenty-eight.

CHAPTER V.

FORESTS UNDER CONSERVANCY ADMINISTRATION WHEN THIS ACT COMES INTO FORCE.

34. Within twelve months from the date on which this Act comes into force in the territories administered by any Local Government, such Government shall, after consideration of the rights of the Government and private persons in all forest-lands or waste-lands then under its executive control for purposes of Forest Conservancy, determine which of such lands (if any) can, according to justice, equity and good conscience, be classed as Reserved Forests or Protected Forests under this Act, and declare, by notification in the local official Gazette, any lands so classed to be Reserved or Protected Forests, as the case may be:

Provided that such declaration shall not affect any rights of the Government or private persons to or over any land or forest-produce in any such forest, which have, previous to the date of such declaration, been enquired into, settled and recorded in a manner which the Local Government thinks sufficient:

Provided also that if any such rights have not on such date been so enquired into, settled and recorded, the Local Government shall direct that the same shall be enquired into, settled and recorded in the manner provided by this Act for Reserved or Protected Forests, as the case may be; and until such enquiry, settlement and record have been completed, no such declaration shall abridge or affect such rights.

CHAPTER VI.

OF THE CONTROL OVER FORESTS AND LANDS NOT BEING THE PROPERTY OF GOVERNMENT.

35. The Local Government may from time to time, by notification in the local official Gazette, regulate or prohibit in any forest or waste-land—

(a) the breaking up or clearing of land for cultivation;

(b) the pasturing of cattle;

(c) the firing or clearing of the vegetation;

when such regulation or prohibition appears necessary for any of the following purposes:—

First.—For protection against storms, winds, rolling stones, floods and avalanches;

Second.—For the preservation of the soil on the ridges and slopes, and in the valleys, of hilly tracts, the prevention of landslips and of the formation of ravines and torrents, and the protection of land against erosion, or the deposit thereon of sand, stones or gravel;

Third.—For the maintenance of a water-supply in springs, rivers and tanks;

Fourth.—For the protection of roads, bridges, railways and other lines of communication;

Fifth.—For the preservation of the public health;

and may alter or cancel such notification.

The Local Government may, for any such purpose, construct at its own expense, in or upon any forest or waste-land, such work as it thinks fit:

Provided that no such notification shall be made or work begun until after the issue of a notice to the owner of such forest or land, calling on him to shew cause, within a reasonable period to be specified in such notice, why such notification should not be made or work constructed, and until his objections (if any) and any evidence he may produce in support of the same have been heard by an officer duly appointed in that behalf, and have been considered by the Local Government.

36. In case of neglect of, or wilful disobedience

Power to assume management of forests. to, any regulation or prohibition under section thirty-five, or if the purposes of any work to be constructed under that section so requiring, the Local Government may, after notice in writing to the owner of such forest or land, and after considering his objections (if any), place the same under the control of a Forest-officer, and may declare that all or any of the provisions of this Act relating to Reserved Forests shall apply to such forest or land.

The nett profits (if any) arising from the management of such forest or land shall be paid to the said proprietor.

37. In any case under this chapter in which

Expropriation of forests in certain cases. the Local Government considers that, in lieu of placing the forest or land under the control of a Forest-officer, the same should be acquired for public purposes, the Local Government may proceed to acquire it in the manner prescribed by the Land Acquisition Act, 1870.

The owner of any forest or land comprised in any notification under section thirty-five may, at any time not less than three or more than twelve years from the date thereof, require that such forest or land shall be acquired for public purposes, and the Local Government shall acquire such forest or land accordingly.

38. The owner of any land or, if there be more

Protection of forests at request of owners. than one owner thereof, the owners of shares therein amounting in the aggregate to at least two-thirds thereof may, with a view to the formation or conservation of forests thereon, represent in writing to the Collector or Deputy Commissioner their desire—

(a) that such land be managed on their behalf by the Forest-officer as a Reserved or a Protected Forest on such terms as may be mutually agreed upon; or

(b) that all or any of the provisions of this Act be applied to such land.

In either case, the Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, apply to such land such provisions of this Act as it thinks suitable to the circumstances thereof and as may be desired by the applicants.

Any such notification may be altered or cancelled by a like notification.

CHAPTER VII.

OF THE DUTY ON TIMBER.

39. The Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may levy a duty in such manner, at such places, and at such rates, as it may from time to time prescribe by notification in the local official Gazette on all timber—

(a) which is produced in British India, and in respect of which the Government has any right;

(b) which is brought from any place beyond the frontier of British India.

In every case in which such duty is directed to be levied ad valorem, the Local Government may, with the like sanction, from time to time fix, by like notification, the value on which such duty shall be assessed.

All duties on timber, which, at the time when this Act comes into force in any territory, are levied therein under the authority of the Local Government, shall be deemed to be and to have been duly levied under the provisions of this Act.

40. Nothing in this chapter shall be deemed to limit the amount (if any) limit not to apply to purchase-money or chargeable as purchase-money or royalty. or royalty on any timber or other forest-produce, although the same is levied on such timber or produce while in transit, in the same manner as duty is levied.

CHAPTER VIII.

OF THE CONTROL OF TIMBER AND OTHER FOREST-PRODUCE IN TRANSIT.

41. The control of all rivers and their banks as regards the floating Power to make rules to regulate transit of timber, as well as the control of forest-produce. of all timber and other forest-produce in transit by land or water, is vested in the Local Government, and it may from time to time make rules to regulate the transit of all timber and other forest-produce.

Such rules may (among other matters)—

(a) prescribe the routes by which alone timber and other forest-produce may be imported, exported or moved, into, from, or within, British India;

(b) prohibit the import and export or moving of such timber or other produce without a pass from an officer duly authorized to issue the same, or otherwise than in accordance with the conditions of such pass;

(c) provide for the issue, production and return of such passes and for the payment of fees therefor;

(d) provide for the stoppage, reporting, examination and marking of timber or other forest-produce in transit, in respect of which there is reason to believe that any money is payable to Government on account of the price thereof, or on account of any duty, fee, royalty or charge due thereon, or to which it is desirable for the purposes of this Act to affix a mark;

(e) provide for the establishment and regulation of standards for measuring such timber.

shall be taken by those in charge of it for examination, or for the payment of such money, or in order that such marks may be affixed to it; and the conditions under which such timber or other produce shall be brought to, stored at, and removed from, such depôt;

(f) prohibit the closing up or obstructing of the channel or banks of any river used for the transit of timber or other forest-produce, and the throwing of grass, brushwood, branches and leaves into any such river, or any act which may cause such river to be closed or obstructed;

(g) provide for the prevention and removal of any obstruction of the channel or banks of any such river, and for recovering the cost of such prevention or removal from the person whose acts or negligence necessitated the same;

(h) prohibit absolutely or subject to conditions, within specified local limits, the establishment of saw-pits, the converting, cutting, burning, concealing or marking of timber, the altering or effacing of any marks on the same, and the possession or carrying of marking-hammers or other implements used for marking timber;

(i) regulate the use of property-marks for timber, and the registration of such marks; prescribe the time for which such registration shall hold good; limit the number of such marks that may be registered by any one person, and provide for the levy of fees for such registration.

42. The Local Government may by such rules prescribe as penalties for the infringement thereof imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or both.

Double penalties may be inflicted in cases where the offence is committed after sunset and before sunrise, or after preparation for resistance to lawful authority, or if the offender has been previously convicted of a like offence.

43. The Government shall not be responsible for any loss or damage which may occur in respect of any timber or other forest-produce while at a depôt established under a rule made under section forty-one, or while detained elsewhere for the purposes of this Act; and no Forest-officer shall be responsible for any such loss or damage unless he causes such loss or damage negligently, maliciously or fraudulently.

44. In case of any accident or emergency involving danger to any property at any such depôt, every person employed at such depôt, whether by the Government or by any private person, shall render assistance to any Forest-officer or Police-officer demanding his aid in averting such danger and securing such property from damage or loss.

CHAPTER IX.

OF THE COLLECTION OF DRIFT AND STRANDED TIMBER.

45. All timber found adrift, beached, stranded, or sunk;

Certain kinds of timber to be deemed property of Government until title thereto proved, and may be collected accordingly.

all wood or timber bearing marks which have not been registered under section forty-one, or on which the marks have been obliterated, altered or defaced by fire or otherwise, and in such areas as the Local Government directs, all unmarked wood and timber, shall be deemed to be the property of Government unless and until any person establishes his right and title thereto, as provided in this chapter.

Such timber may be collected by any Forest-officer or other person entitled to collect the same by virtue of any rule made under section fifty-one, and may be brought to such depôts as the Forest-officer may from time to time notify as depôts for the reception of drift-timber.

The Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, exempt any class of timber from the provisions of this section, and withdraw such exemption.

46. Public notice shall from time to time be given by the Forest-officer, of timber collected under section forty-five. Such notice shall contain a description of the timber, and shall require any person claiming the same to present to such officer, within a period not less than two months from the date of such notice, a written statement of such claim.

47. When any such statement is presented as aforesaid, the Forest-officer may, after making such enquiry as he thinks fit, either reject the claim after recording his reasons for so doing, or deliver the timber to the claimant.

If such timber is claimed by more than one person, the Forest-officer may either deliver the same to any of such persons whom he deems entitled thereto, or may refer the claimants to the Civil Courts, and retain the timber pending the receipt of an order from any such Court for its disposal.

Any person whose claim has been rejected under this section may, within two months from the date of such rejection, institute a suit to recover possession of the timber claimed by him; but no person shall recover any compensation or costs against the Government, or against any Forest-officer, on account of such rejection, or the detention or removal of any timber, or the delivery thereof to any other person under this section.

No such timber shall be subject to process of any Civil, Criminal, or Revenue Court until it has been delivered, or a suit has been brought, as provided in this section.

48. If no such statement is presented as aforesaid, or if the claimant omits to prefer his claim in the manner and within the period prescribed by the notice issued under section forty-six, or, on such claim having been so preferred by him and having been rejected, omits to institute a suit to recover possession of such timber within the further period limited by section forty-seven, the ownership of such timber shall vest in the Government, or when such timber has been delivered to another person under section forty-seven, in such other person, free from all encumbrances.

49. The Government shall not be responsible for any loss or damage which may occur in respect of any timber collected under section forty-five, and no Forest-officer shall be responsible for any such loss or damage, unless he causes such loss or damage negligently, maliciously or fraudulently.

50. No person shall be entitled to recover possession of any timber collected or delivered as aforesaid until he has paid to the Forest-officer or other person entitled to receive it such sum on account thereof as may be due under any rule made in pursuance of section fifty-one.

51. The Local Government may from time to time make rules to regulate the following matters (namely) :—

(a) the salvaging, collection and disposal of all timber mentioned in section forty-five;

(b) the use and registration of boats used in salvaging and collecting timber;

(c) the amounts to be paid for salvaging, collecting, moving, storing and disposing of such timber;

(d) the use and registration of hammers and other instruments to be used for marking such timber.

The Local Government may from time to time prescribe, as penalties for the infringement of any rules made under this section, imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or both.

CHAPTER X.

PENALTIES AND PROCEDURE.

52. When there is reason to believe that a forest-offence has been committed in respect of any forest-produce, such produce, together with all tools, boats, carts and cattle used in committing any such offence, may be seized by any Forest-officer or Police-officer.

Every officer seizing any property under this section shall place on such property a mark indicating that the same has been so seized, and shall, as soon as may be, make a report of such seizure to the Magistrate having jurisdiction to try the offence on account of which the seizure has been made :

Provided that when the forest-produce with respect to which such offence is believed to have been committed is the property of Government and the offender is unknown, it shall be sufficient if the officer makes, as soon as may be, a report of the circumstances to his official superior.

53. Upon the receipt of any such report the Magistrate shall, with all convenient dispatch, take such measures as may be necessary for the arrest and trial of the offender and the disposal of the property according to law.

54. All timber or forest-produce which is not the property of Government and in respect of which a forest-offence has been committed, and all tools, boats, carts and cattle used in committing any forest-offence, shall be liable to confiscation.

Such confiscation may be in addition to any other punishment prescribed for such offence.

55. When the trial of any forest-offence is concluded, any forest-produce in respect of which such offence has been committed shall, if it is the property of Government or has been confiscated, be taken charge of by a Forest-officer, and in any other case may be disposed of in such manner as the Court may direct.

56. When the offender is not known, or cannot be found, the Magistrate may, if he finds that an offence has been committed, order the property in respect of which the offence has been committed to be confiscated and taken charge of by the Forest-officer, or to be made over to the person whom he deems to be entitled to the same :

Provided that no such order shall be made until the expiration of one month from the date of seizing such property, or without hearing the person (if any) claiming any right thereto, and the evidence (if any) which he may produce in support of his claim.

57. The Magistrate may, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, direct the sale of any property seized under section fifty-two and subject to speedy and natural decay, and may deal with the proceeds as he would have dealt with such property if it had not been sold.

58. The officer who made the seizure under section fifty-two or any of his official superiors, or any person claiming to be interested in the property so seized, may, within one month from the date of any order passed under section fifty-four, fifty-five or fifty-six, appeal therefrom to the Court to which orders made by such Magistrate are ordinarily appealable, and the order passed on such appeal shall be final.

59. When an order for the confiscation of any property has been passed under section fifty-four or fifty-six, as the case may be, and the period limited by section fifty-eight for an appeal from such order has elapsed and no such appeal has been preferred, or when, on such an appeal being preferred, the Appellate Court confirms such order in respect of the whole or a portion of such property, such property or such portion thereof, as the case may be, shall vest in the Government free from all incumbrances.

60. Nothing hereinbefore contained shall be deemed to prevent any officer empowered in this behalf by the Local Government from directing at any time the immediate release of any property seized under section fifty-two.

61. Any Forest-officer or Police-officer who vexatiously and unnecessarily seizes any property on pretence of seizing property liable to confiscation under this Act, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

62. Whoever, with intent to cause damage or injury to the public or to any person, or to cause wrongful gain as defined in the Indian Penal Code,—

Penalty for counterfeiting or defacing marks on trees and timber and for altering boundary-marks.

(a) knowingly counterfeits upon any timber or standing tree a mark used by Forest-officers to indicate that such timber or tree is the property of the Government or of some person, or that it may lawfully be cut or removed by some person; or

(b) alters, defaces or obliterates any such mark placed on a tree or on timber by or under the authority of a Forest-officer; or shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

63. Any Forest-officer or Police-officer may, without orders from a Magistrate and without a warrant, arrest any person against whom a reasonable suspicion exists of his having been concerned in any forest-offence punishable with imprisonment for one month or upwards.

Every officer making an arrest under this section shall without unnecessary delay take or send the person arrested before the Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorize such arrest for any act which is an offence under chapter IV of this Act, unless such act has been prohibited under section twenty-nine, clause (c).

64. Every Forest-officer and Police-officer shall prevent, and may interfere for the purpose of preventing, the commission of any forest-offence.

Power to prevent commission of offence.

65. The Magistrate of the District, and any Magistrate of the first class specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government, may try summarily, under the Code of Criminal Procedure, any forest-offence punishable only with imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, or fine not exceeding five hundred rupees, or both.

Power to try offences summarily.

66. Nothing in this Act shall be deemed to prevent any person from being prosecuted under any other law for any act or omission which constitutes an offence against this Act or the rules made under it, or from being liable under such other law to any higher punishment or penalty than that provided by the rules made under this Act: Provided that no person shall be punished twice for the same offence.

Operation of other laws not barred.

67. The Local Government may from time to time, by notification in the local official Gazette, empower any Forest-officer by name, or as holding an office, to accept from any person against whom a reasonable suspicion exists that he has committed any forest-offence other than an offence under section sixty-one or section sixty-two a sum of money by way of compensation for any damage which may have been committed, and to release any property which has been seized as liable to confiscation on payment of the value thereof as estimated by such officer.

On the payment of such sum of money or such value or both as the case may be to such officer, the accused person, if in custody, shall be discharged the property seized shall be released, and no further proceedings shall be taken under this Act against such person or property; but nothing herein contained shall exempt such person from prosecution on the same facts under any other law for the time being in force.

68. When in any proceedings taken under this Act, or in consequence of anything done under this Act, a question arises as to whether any forest-produce is the property of the Government, such produce shall be presumed to be the property of the Government until the contrary is proved.

Presumption that forest-produce belongs to Government.

CHAPTER XI.

CATTLE-TRESPASS.

69. Cattle trespassing in a Reserved Forest, or in any portion of a Protected Forest which has been lawfully closed to grazing, shall be deemed to be cattle doing damage to a public plantation within the meaning of the eleventh section of the Cattle-trespass Act, 1871, and may be seized and impounded as such by any Forest-officer or Police-officer.

Cattle-trespass Act, 1871, to apply.

70. The Local Government may from time to time, by notification in the local official Gazette, direct that, in lieu of the fines fixed by the twelfth section of the Act last aforesaid, there shall be levied for each head of cattle impounded under section sixty-nine of this Act, such fines as it thinks fit, but not exceeding the following, that is to say:—

For each elephant	...	ten rupees.
For each buffalo or camel	...	two
For each horse, mare, gelding, pony, colt, filly, mule, bull, bullock, cow or heifer	...	one rupee.
For each calf, ass, pig, ram, ewe, sheep, lamb, goat or kid	...	eight annas.

CHAPTER XII.

OF FOREST-OFFICERS.

71. The Local Government may invest any Forest-officer by name, or as holding an office, with the following powers, that is to say:—

Local Government may invest Forest-officers with certain powers.

(a) power to enter upon any land and to survey, demarcate, and make a map of the same;

(b) the powers of a Civil Court to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents;

(c) power to issue a search-warrant under the Code of Criminal Procedure;

(d) power to hold an enquiry into forest-offences, and, in the course of such enquiry, to receive and record evidence.

Any evidence recorded under clause (d) of this section shall be admissible in any subsequent trial before a Magistrate, provided that it has been taken in the presence of the accused person.

72. All Forest-officers shall be deemed to be public servants within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code.

Forest-officers deemed public servants.

73. No suit shall lie against any public servant for anything done by him in good faith under this Act.

Indemnity for acts done in good faith.

74. Except with the permission in writing of the Local Government, no Forest-officer shall, as principal or agent, trade in timber or other forest-produce, or be or become interested in any lease of any forest or in any contract for working any forest, whether in British or Foreign territory.

Forest-officers not to trade.

CHAPTER XIII.

SUBSIDIARY RULES.

75. The Local Government may from time to time make rules—

Additional powers to make rules.

(a) to prescribe and limit the powers and duties of any Forest-officer under this Act;

(b) to regulate the rewards to be paid to officers and informers out of the proceeds of fines and confiscations under this Act;

(c) for the preservation, reproduction and disposal of trees and timber belonging to Government, but grown on lands belonging to or in the occupation of private persons; and

(d) generally to carry out the provisions of this Act.

76. Any person breaking any rule under this Act, for the breach of which no special penalty is provided, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or both.

Penalties for breach of rules.

77. All rules made by the Local Government under this Act shall be published in the local official Gazette, and shall thereupon, so far as they are consistent with this Act, have the force of law:

Rules when to have force of law.

Provided that no rule made under section twenty-seven, thirty-one or forty-one shall be so published without the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council.

CHAPTER XIV.

MISCELLANEOUS.

78. Every person who exercises any right in a Reserved or Protected Forest, or who is permitted to take any forest-produce from, or to cut and remove timber or to pasture cattle in, such forest, and Persons bound to assist Forest-officer and Police-officers.

every person who is employed by any such person in such forest, and every person in any village contiguous to such forest who is employed by the Government, or who receives emoluments from the Government for services to be performed to the community, shall be bound to furnish without unnecessary delay to the nearest Forest-officer or Police-officer any information he may possess respecting the commission of, or intention to commit, any forest-offence, and shall assist any Forest-officer or Police-officer demanding his aid

(a) in extinguishing any fire occurring in such forest;

(b) in preventing any fire which may occur in the vicinity of such forest from spreading to such forest;

(c) in preventing the commission in such forest of any forest-offence; and

(d) when there is reason to believe that any such offence has been committed in such forest, in discovering and arresting the offender.

79. If the Government and any person be jointly interested in any forest or waste-land, or in the joint property of Government and other persons, the Local Government may from time to time either

(a) undertake the management of such forest, waste-land or produce, accounting to such person for his interest in the same or

(b) issue such regulations for the management of the forest, waste-land or produce by the person so jointly interested as it deems necessary for the management thereof and the interests of all parties therein.

When the Local Government undertakes, under clause (a) of this section, the management of any forest, waste-land or produce, it may from time to time, by notification in the local official Gazette, declare that any of the provisions contained in chapters II and IV of this Act shall apply to such forest, waste-land or produce, and thereupon such provisions shall apply accordingly.

80. If any person be entitled to a share in the produce of any forest which is the property of Government or over which the Government has proprietary rights, or to any part of the forest-produce of which the Government is entitled, upon the condition of duly performing any service connected with such forest, such share shall be liable to confiscation in the event of the fact being established to the satisfaction of the Local Government that such service is no longer so performed: Provided that no such share shall be confiscated until the person entitled thereto, and the evidence (if any) which he may produce in proof of the due performance of such service, have been heard by an officer duly appointed in that behalf by the Local Government.

81. All money payable to the Government under this Act, or under any rule made under this Act, or on account of the price of any forest-produce, or of expenses incurred in the execution of this Act in respect of such produce, may, if not paid when due, be recovered under the law for the time being in force as if it were an arrear of land-revenue.

Recovery of money due to Government.

82. When any such money is payable for or in respect of any forest-produce, the amount thereof shall be deemed to be a first charge on such produce, and such produce may be taken possession of by a Forest-officer until such amount has been paid.

If such amount is not paid when due, the Forest-officer may sell such produce by public auction, and the proceeds of the sale shall be applied first in discharging such amount.

The surplus (if any), if not claimed within two months from the date of the sale by the person entitled thereto, shall be forfeited to Her Majesty.

83. Whenever it appears to the Local Government that any land is required for any of the purposes of this Act, such land shall be deemed to be needed for a public purpose within the meaning of the Land Acquisition Act, 1870, section four.

An Act to consolidate and amend the law relating to the levy of Sea Customs-duties.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to the levy of Sea Customs-duties; It is enacted as follows:—

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

1. This Act may be called "The Sea Customs Act, 1878."

It extends to the whole of British India, and shall come into force on the first day of April 1878.

2. The Acts mentioned in the first schedule hereto annexed are repealed to the extent specified therein.

All references to any of the said Acts, in Acts passed subsequently thereto, shall be read as if made to the corresponding provisions of this Act.

All appointments, rules, declarations, exemptions, conditions prescribed, values, fees, rates, and periods fixed, and notifications, instructions, directions, prohibitions, passes and licenses issued, under any Act hereby repealed shall, if the same are in force at the time this Act comes into force, be deemed to have been respectively made, conferred, prescribed, fixed and issued under this Act, in so far as they are consistent herewith.

3. In this Act, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context—

(a) "Chief Customs-Authority" denotes the person authorized to exercise, subject to the Local Government, the chief control in matters relating to Sea-customs in any place in which this Act operates :

(b) "Chief Customs-Officer" denotes the Chief Executive Officer of Sea-customs for any Port to which this Act applies:

(c) "Customs-collector" includes every officer of Customs for the time being in separate charge of a Custom-house, or duly authorized to perform all, or any special, duties of an officer so in charge:

(d) "Customs-port" means any place except Aden declared under section 11 to be a Port for the shipment and landing of goods:

(e) "Foreign Port" means Aden and any place beyond the limits of British India:

(f) "Vessel" includes anything made for the conveyance by water of human beings or property:

(g) "Coasting vessel" denotes any vessel proceeding from one Customs-port to another Customs-port, whether touching at any intermediate Foreign Port or not; or proceeding from or to a Customs-port to or from a place declared to be a port under section 12:

(h) "Master" when used in relation to any vessel means any person, except a Pilot or Harbour Master, having command or charge of such vessel:

(i) "Warehousing port" means any Customs-port declared under section 11 to be a warehousing port:

(j) "Warehouse" denotes any place appointed or licensed under section 15 or section 16.

4. When any person is expressly or impliedly authorized by the owner of any goods to be his agent in respect of such goods for all or any of the purposes of this Act, and such authorization is approved by the Customs-collector, such person shall, for such purposes, be deemed to be the owner of such goods.

5. Anything which a Master is required or empowered to do under this Act may, with the express or implied consent of such Master and the approval of the Customs-collector, be done by a ship's agent.

CHAPTER II.

APPOINTMENT AND POWERS OF OFFICERS, &c.

6. The Local Government of every place in which duties of Sea-customs are leviable, may appoint such persons as it thinks fit to be officers of Customs, and to exercise the powers conferred, and to perform the duties imposed, by this Act on such officers.

Every person so appointed may be suspended or dismissed by the Local Government which appointed him.

7. The Local Government may delegate to any officer of Customs any of the powers vested in it by the first clause of section 6.

Every person appointed in exercise of such delegated power may be suspended or dismissed by the officer who appointed him.

8. At any place for which there is no Custom-house, the Collector of the District and the officers subordinate to him shall, unless the Local Government otherwise directs, perform all duties imposed by this Act on a Customs-collector and other officers of Customs.

9. The Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time, with the sanction of the Local Government, make rules consistent with this Act

(a) prescribing and limiting the powers and duties of officers of Customs,

(b) regulating the delegation of their duties by such officers; and

(c) generally to carry out the provisions of this Act.

10. No Chief Customs-Authority or Chief Customs-Officer, and no other officer of Customs whom such Chief Authority or Chief Officer deems it necessary to exempt on grounds of public duty, shall be compelled to serve on any jury or inquest, or as an assessor.

CHAPTER III.

APPOINTMENT OF PORTS, WHARVES, CUSTOM-HOUSES, WAREHOUSES AND BOARDING AND LANDING-STATIONS.

11. The Local Government may from time to time, by notification in the official Gazette,

(a) declare the places within the territories administered by it which alone shall be Ports for the shipment and landing of goods;

(b) declare the limits of such Ports;

(c) appoint proper places therein to be Wharves for the landing and shipping of goods, or of particular classes of goods;

(d) declare the limits of any such Wharf;

(e) alter the name of any such Port or Wharf; and

(f) declare what shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be a Custom-house, and the limits thereof.

12. The Local Government may also from time to time in like manner declare places to be Ports for the carrying on of coasting trade with Customs-ports, or with any specified Customs-port, and for no other purpose.

13. The Governor General in Council may from time to time direct, by notification in the Gazette of India, that all goods or any specified class of goods imported from or exported to any Foreign Port to or from a Customs-port shall, with such limitations and on such conditions (if any) as he thinks fit, be treated for any of the purposes of this Act as goods imported from or exported to a Customs-port as the case may be.

14. The Local Government may from time to time declare, by notification in the official Gazette, that any Customs-port shall be a Warehousing Port for the purposes of this Act.

15. At any Warehousing Port, the Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time appoint public warehouses wherein dutiable goods may be deposited without payment of duty on the first importation thereof, and may cancel such appointment.

16. At any Warehousing Port, the Chief Customs-Officer may from time to time license private warehouses wherein dutiable goods may be deposited as aforesaid.

Every application for a license for a private warehouse shall be in writing, and shall be drawn up in such form as is from time to time prescribed by the Chief Customs-Authority, and shall be signed by the applicant.

Every license granted under this section may be cancelled on conviction of the licensee of any offence under this Act relating to warehouses, unless it is otherwise provided in the license, or on the expiration of one month's notice in writing given to the licensee by the Chief Customs-Officer.

17. The Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time appoint, in or near any Customs-port, stations or limits at or within which vessels arriving at, or departing from, such Port shall bring-to for the boarding or landing of officers of Customs, and may, unless separate provision therefor has been made under the Indian Ports Act, 1875, direct at what particular place in any such Port vessels, not brought into Port by pilots, shall anchor or moor.

CHAPTER IV.

PROHIBITIONS AND RESTRICTIONS OF IMPORTATION AND EXPORTATION.

18. No goods specified in the following clauses shall be brought, whether by land or sea, into British India :—

(a) any book printed in infringement of any law in force in British India on the subject of copyright, when the proprietor of such copyright, or his agent, has given to the Chief Customs-Authority a notice in writing that such copyright subsists, and a statement of the date on which it will expire :

(b) counterfeit coin : or coin which purports to be Queen's coin of India, or to be coin made under the Native Coinage Act, 1876, but which is not of the established standard in weight or fineness :

(c) any obscene book, pamphlet, paper, drawing, painting, representation, figure or article :

(d) articles bearing any names, brands or marks being, or purporting to be, the names, brands or marks of manufacturers resident in the United Kingdom or British India, and not made by such manufacturers.

19. The Governor General in Council may from time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India, prohibit or restrict the bringing or taking by sea or by land goods of any specified description into or out of British India or any specified part of British India.

CHAPTER V.

LEVY OF, AND EXEMPTION FROM, CUSTOMS-DUTIES.

20. Except as herein after provided, Customs-duties shall be levied at such rates as may be prescribed by or under any law for the time being in force.

(a) goods imported or exported by sea into or from any Customs-port from or to any Foreign Port ;

(b) opium, salt or salted fish imported by sea from any Customs-port into any other Customs-port ;

(c) goods brought from any Foreign Port to any Customs-port, and without payment of duty, there transhipped for, or thence carried to, and imported at any other Customs-port ; and

(d) goods brought in bond from one Customs-port to another :

Provided that no such duties shall be levied on goods belonging to the Government.

21. Except as otherwise expressly provided by any law for the time being in force, goods whereof any article liable to duty under this Act forms a part or ingredient shall be chargeable with the full duty which would be payable on such goods if they were entirely composed of such article, or if composed of more than one article liable to duty then with the full duty which would be payable on such goods if they were entirely composed of the article charged with the highest rate of duty.

22. The Governor General in Council may from time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India, fix, for the purpose of levying duties, tariff-values of any goods exported or imported by sea on which Customs-duties are by law imposed, and alter any such values fixed by any Tariff Act for the time being in force.

23. The Governor General in Council may from time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India, exempt any goods imported into, or exported from, British India, or into or from any specified Port therein, from the whole or any part of the Customs-duties leviable on such goods.

The Local Government may, by special order in each case, exempt from the payment of duty, under circumstances of an exceptional nature, to be stated in such order any goods on which Customs-duties are leviable.

24. The Customs-collector may, subject to any general rules relating to the landing and shipping of passengers' baggage and the passing of the same through the Custom-house, which may be made under section 75, pass free of duty any baggage in actual use, and for this purpose may determine, subject to any such rules, whether any goods shall be treated as baggage in actual use, or as goods subject to duty.

25. If goods produced or manufactured in British India be imported into any Customs-port from any Foreign Port, such goods shall be liable to all the duties, conditions and restrictions (if any) to which goods of the like kind and value not so produced or manufactured are liable on the first importation thereof:

Provided that, if such importation takes place within three years after the exportation of such goods, and it is proved to the satisfaction of the Customs-collector that the property in such goods has continued in the person by whom, or on whose account, they were exported, the goods may be admitted without payment of duty.

26. Any goods produced or manufactured in British India which have been exported therefrom, and on the exportation of which any drawback of excise has been received shall, on being imported into any Customs-port, be subjected, unless the Chief Customs-Authority in any particular case otherwise directs by special order, to payment of excise duty, at the rate to which goods of the like kind and quality are liable at such port.

27. All goods derelict, jetsam, flotsam and wreck, brought or coming into any place in British India shall be subject to the same duties, if any, to which goods of the like kind are for the time being subject on importation at any Customs-port and shall in other respects be dealt with as if they were imported from a foreign port, unless it be shown to the satisfaction of the Customs-collector that such goods are the produce or manufacture of any place, from which they are entitled to be admitted duty-free.

28. Provisions and stores produced or manufactured in British India, required for use on board of any vessel proceeding to any Foreign Port, may be shipped free of duty, whether of custom or excise, in such quantities as the Customs-collector determines with reference to the tonnage of the vessel, the numbers of the crew and passengers, and the length of the voyage on which the vessel is about to depart:

Provided that no rum shall be so shipped on any vessel going on a voyage of less than thirty days' probable duration.

29. On the importation into, or exportation from, any Customs-port of any goods, whether liable to duty or not, the owner of such goods shall, in his bill of entry or shipping-bill, as the case may be, state the real value, quantity, and description of such goods to the best of his knowledge and belief, and shall subscribe a declaration of the truth of such statement at the foot of such bill.

In case of doubt, the Customs-collector may require any such owner or any other person in possession of any invoice, broker's note, policy of insurance or other document, whereby the real value, quantity, or description of any such goods can be ascertained, to produce the same, and to furnish any information relating to such value, quantity, or description which it is in his power to furnish. And thereupon such person shall produce such document and furnish such information:

Provided that, if the owner makes and subscribes a declaration before the Customs-collector to the effect that he is unable, from want of full information, to state the real value or contents of any case, package or parcel of goods, then the Customs-collector shall permit him, previous to the entry thereof, (1) to open such case, package or parcel, and examine the contents in presence of an officer of Customs, or (2) to deposit such case, package or parcel in a public warehouse appointed under section 15 without warehousing the same, pending the production of such information.

30. For the purposes of this Act the real value shall be deemed to be—

(a) the wholesale cash-price, less trade-discount, for which goods of the like kind and quality are sold, or are capable of being sold, at the time and place of importation or exportation as the case may be, without any abatement or deduction whatever, except (in the case of goods imported) of the amount of the duties payable on the importation thereof; or,

(b) where such price is not ascertainable, the cost at which goods of the like kind and quality could be delivered at such place without any abatement or deduction except as aforesaid.

31. Goods chargeable with duty upon the Examination of ad- value thereof, but for which valorem goods, a specific value is not fixed by law for the purpose of levying duties thereon, shall, without unnecessary delay, be examined by an officer of Customs. If it appears that the real value of such goods is correctly stated in the bill-of entry or shipping-bill, the goods shall be assessed in accordance therewith.

32. If it appears that such goods are properly chargeable with a higher rate or amount of duty than by owner, that to which they would be subject according to the value thereof as stated in the bill-of entry or shipping-bill, such officer may detain such goods.

In every such case the detaining officer shall forthwith give notice in writing to the owner of the goods of their detention, and of the value thereof as estimated by him; and the Customs-collector shall, within two clear working days after such detention, or within such reasonable period as may with the consent of the parties be arranged, determine either to deliver such goods on payment of duty charged according to the entry of such owner, or to retain the same for the use of Government.

If the goods be retained for the use of Government, the Customs-collector shall cause the full amount stated in the bill as their real value to be paid to the owner in full satisfaction for such goods, in the same manner as if they had been transferred by ordinary sale, and shall, after due notice in the local official Gazette, or some local newspaper and without unnecessary delay, cause them to be put up to public auction in wholesale lots for cash on delivery.

If the Customs-collector deems the highest offer made at such sale to be inadequate, he may either adjourn the sale to some other day, to be notified as aforesaid, or buy in the goods, and without unnecessary delay dispose of them for the benefit of Government.

If the proceeds arising from such sale exceed the sum paid to the owner, together with (in the case of goods imported) the duty to which the goods are liable and all charges incurred by Government in connection with them, a portion not exceeding one-half of the overplus shall, at the discretion of the Chief Officer of Customs, be payable to the officer who detected the under-valuation of the goods.

Nothing in this section shall prevent the Chief Officer of Customs, when he has reason to believe that any such under-valuation was solely the result of accident or error, from permitting the owner of the goods, on his application for that purpose, to amend such entry, on payment of such increased rate of duties on the excess of the amended over the original valuation, or on such other terms as the Chief Officer of Customs may determine.

33. If, on the first examination of any such goods under section 31, the owner thereof states in writing that such goods are, in consequence of damage sustained before delivery of the bill of entry, of value less than that stated in such bill, the Customs-collector, on being satisfied of the fact, may allow abatement of duty accordingly.

The reduced duty to be levied on such goods may be ascertained by either of the following methods, at the option of the owner—

Reduced duty how determined.

(a) the real value of such goods may be fixed on appraisement by an officer of Customs and the duty may be assessed on the value so fixed; or

(b) the goods may, after due notice in the local official Gazette or some local newspaper, be sold by public auction at such time (within thirty days from the date of delivery of the bill of entry), and at such place, as the Customs-collector appoints; and the duty may be assessed on the gross amount realized by such sale, without any abatement or deduction, except (in the case of goods imported) of so much as represents the duties payable on the importation thereof.

34. When any goods, the value of which has been fixed by law for the purpose of levying duties thereon, have, before delivery of the bill-of-entry, deteriorated to the extent of more than one-tenth of their value, the duty on such goods shall if the owner thereof so desires be assessed ad valorem.

The real value of such goods shall be ascertained as provided in section 33, and the duty shall be assessed thereon.

35. No abatement of duty on account of damage shall be allowed on wines, spirit or beer, or on any other articles on which duties are levied on quantity and not on value.

36. Except as provided in section 34, no amendment of a bill of entry or shipping-bill relating to goods assessed for duty on the declared value, quantity, or description thereof shall be allowed after such goods have been removed from the Custom-house.

37. The rate of duty and the tariff valuation (if any) applicable to any goods imported shall be the rate and valuation in force on the date on which the bill of entry thereof is delivered to the Customs-collector under section 86:

Provided that when such rate or valuation has been raised after the grant of port-clearance at the port of shipment, the rate and valuation applicable to such goods shall be the rate and valuation in force on the date of such grant.

Provided also that if such goods are warehoused and re-assessed under section 115 of this Act, the rate and valuation applicable thereto shall be the rate and valuation in force at the time when application is made to clear such goods for home consumption.

Explanation.—A bill of entry shall for the purposes of this section be deemed to be delivered when it is first presented to the proper officer of Customs.

38. The rate of duty and tariff valuation (if any) applicable to any goods exported shall be the rate and valuation in force when a shipping-bill of such goods is delivered under section 137.

39. When Customs-duties or charges have been short-levied through inadvertence, error, collusion or misconstruction on the part of the officers of Customs, or through mis-statement as to real value, quantity, or description on the part of the owner, or when any such duty, or charge after having been levied, has been owing to any such cause erroneously refunded, the person chargeable with the duty or charge so short-levied, or to whom such refund has erroneously been made, shall pay the deficiency or repay the amount paid to him in excess, on demand being made within three months from the date of the first assessment or making of the refund;

and the Customs-collector may refuse to pass any goods belonging to such person until the said deficiency or excess be paid or repaid.

40. No Customs-duties or charges which have

No refund of charges erroneously levied or paid, unless claimed within three months.

been paid, and of which repayment, wholly or in part, is claimed in consequence of the same having been paid through inadvertence, error or misconstruction, shall be returned, unless such claim is made within three months from the date of such payment.

41. The Customs-collector may, if he thinks fit,

Power to give credit for and keep account current of duties and charges.

instead of requiring payment of Customs-duties and charges due from any mercantile firm or public body, at the time such duties and charges are payable under this Act, keep with such firm or body an account current of such duties and charges. Such account shall be settled at intervals not exceeding one month, and such firm or body shall make a deposit or furnish security sufficient in the opinion of the Customs-collector to cover the amount which may at any time be due from them in respect of such duties and charges.

CHAPTER VI.DRAWBACK.*42. When any goods, capable of being easily identified to the satisfaction of the Customs-collector at such Customs-port, and that the re-export be made within two years from the date of importation, as shown by the records of the Custom-house, or within such extended term as the Chief Customs-Authority, on sufficient cause being shown, in any case determines.

43. When any goods having been charged with Drawback on goods exported to Customs-port and thence to Foreign Port.

import-duty at one Customs-port and thence exported to another, are re-exported by sea as aforesaid, drawback shall be allowed on such goods as if they had been so re-exported from the former port.

Provided that, in every such case, the goods be duties shall be allowed on wine and spirit intended for the consumption of any officer of Her Majesty's Navy, on board of any of Her Majesty's ships in actual service, unless such wine and spirit have been warehoused without payment of duty on the first entry thereof.

The quantity of wine and spirit on which drawback may be so allowed in any one year for the use of such officers shall not exceed the quantities hereinafter allowed for each such officer respectively; that is to say—

	Gale.
For every Admiral	1,260
Vice-Admiral	1,050
Rear-Admiral	840
Captain of 1st and 2nd rate	630
Captain of 3rd, 4th and 5th rate	420
Captain of an inferior rate	210
Lieutenant or other Commanding Officer, Marine-officer, Master, Purser or Surgeon	105

45. Every person clearing^c and claiming draw-

Persons entering such wine or spirit for drawback to declare name and rank of officer claiming same.

back for wine or spirit, as provided in section 44, shall state in the shipping bill the name of the officer for whose use such wine or spirit is intended, and of the ship in which he serves, as well as the place and date of the last supply for which drawback was allowed.

All such wine and spirit shall be delivered into the charge of the proper officers of Customs at the Port of shipment, to be shipped under their care; and when the officer commanding the ship has certified the receipt of such wine and spirit into his charge, and any such officer of Customs has certified the shipment, the drawback shall be paid to the person entitled to receive the same.

46. The Customs-collector may permit the trans-

Transfer of wine or spirit from one Naval officer to another.

fer of any such wine or spirit from one Naval officer to another Naval officer on board of the same, or of any other such vessel, as part of his authorized quantity; or may permit the transshipment of any such wine or spirit from one vessel to another for the use of the same Naval officer; or the re-landing and warehousing of any such wine or spirit for future re-shipment.

The Customs-collector may also receive back the duties for any such wine or spirit, and allow the same to be cleared for home-consumption.

47. Provisions and stores for the use of Her

Provisions and stores for Her Majesty's Navy.

Majesty's Navy or of any officer thereof which are subject to duty may, in like manner, be transferred, transhipped or reloaded and warehoused, free of duty;

and where duties have been paid on any such provisions or stores required for shipment, drawback of such duties, whether of customs or excise, shall be allowed on receipt of an application in writing from the officer commanding the ship for which they are intended, or from some other officer duly authorized to make such application.

48. The provisions of sections 44, 45, 46 and 47

as to officers of Her Majesty's Navy apply also to officers of Her Majesty's Indian Marine and Marine-survey on board of any of the ships of such Marine or Survey proceeding to any port out of India, and the rules prescribed by section 47 as to provisions and stores for the use of Her Majesty's Navy apply also to provisions and stores for the use of such Marine or Survey.

49. The Governor General in Council may from time to time, by notification Power to declare what goods are identifiable, in the Gazette of India,

(a) declare what goods shall, for the purpose of this chapter, be deemed to be capable of being easily identified; and

(b) prohibit the payment of drawback upon the re-exportation of goods to any specified Foreign Port in India. and may prohibit drawback in case of specified Foreign Port.

50. Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, no drawback shall be allowed—

(a) upon goods not included in the export-manifest, or

(b) where the goods to be exported are of less value than the amount of drawback claimed, or

(c) where the claim is for drawback amounting, in respect of any single shipment, to less than five rupees, and the Customs-collector thinks fit to reject it, or

(d) on salt, salted fish, or opium.

51. No drawback shall be allowed unless the claim to receive such drawback be made and established at the time of re-export.

No such payment of drawback shall be made until the vessel carrying the goods has put out to sea, or unless payment be demanded within six months from the date of entry for shipment.

52. Every person, or his duly authorized agent, claiming drawback on any goods duly exported, shall make and subscribe a declaration that such goods have been actually exported, and have not been re-landed and are not intended to be re-landed at any Customs-port; and that such person was at the time of entry outwards and shipment, and continues to be, entitled to drawback thereon.

CHAPTER VII.

ARRIVAL AND DEPARTURE OF VESSELS.

Arrival and entry of vessel inwards.

53. The Local Government may, by notification Power to fix places beyond which inward-bound vessels are not to proceed until manifest delivered. in the local official Gazette, fix a place in any river or Port, beyond which no vessel arriving shall pass until a manifest has been delivered to the Pilot, officer of Customs or other person duly authorized to receive the same.

If, in any river or Port wherein a place has been fixed by the Local Government under this section, the Master of any vessel arriving remains outside or below the place so fixed, such Master shall, nevertheless, within twenty-four hours after the vessel anchors, deliver a manifest to the Pilot, officer of Customs or other person authorized to receive the same.

54. If any vessel arrives at any Customs-port in which a place has not been so fixed, the Master of such vessel shall, within twenty-four hours after such vessel has anchored within the limits of the Port, deliver a manifest to the Pilot, officer of Customs or other person authorized to receive the same.

Delivery of manifest where no place has been so fixed.

55. Every manifest shall be signed by the Master, shall specify all goods imported in such vessel, showing separately all goods (if any) intended to be landed, transhipped or taken on to another Port, and all ships' stores intended for consumption in Port or on the homeward voyage, and shall contain such further particulars, and be made out in such form, as the Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time direct.

The Customs-collector shall permit the Master to amend any obvious error in the manifest, or to supply any omission which in the opinion of such Collector results from accident or inadvertence, by furnishing an amended or supplementary manifest, and may, if he thinks fit, levy thereon such fee as the Chief Customs-Authority from time to time directs.

Except as herein provided no import manifest shall be amended.

56. The person receiving a manifest under section 53 or 54 shall counter-sign the same and enter thereon such particulars as the Chief Customs-Authority from time to time directs in this behalf.

57. No vessel arriving in any Customs-port shall be allowed to break bulk until a manifest has been delivered as hereinbefore provided; nor until a copy of such manifest, together with an application for entry of such vessel inwards, has been presented by the Master to the Customs-collector, and an order has been given thereon for such entry.

58. The Master shall, if required so to do by the Customs-collector at the time of presenting such application, deliver to the Customs-collector the bill of lading or a copy thereof for every part of the cargo laden on board, and any port-clearance, cockett or other paper granted in respect of such vessel at the place from which she is stated to have come, and shall answer all such questions relating to the vessel, cargo, crew and voyage as are put to him by such officer.

The Customs-collector may, if any requisition or question made or put by him under this section is not complied with or answered, refuse to grant such application.

59. Notwithstanding anything contained in section 57, the Customs-collector may grant, prior to receipt of the manifest, and to the entry inwards of the vessel, a special pass permitting bulk to be broken.

The granting of such pass shall be subject to such rules as may from time to time be made by the Chief Customs-Authority.

60. Notwithstanding anything contained in Manifest, &c., may be section 53, 54, 57 or 58, delivered by ship's agent. the Customs-collector may accept from the ship's agent in lieu of the Master delivery of the manifest or of any other document required by those sections to be delivered by the Master.

Entry outwards, port-clearance and departure of vessels.

61. No vessel shall take on board any part of her export-cargo, until a written application for entry of such vessel outwards subscribed by the Master of such vessel, has been made to the Customs-collector or before an order has been given thereon by such officer for such entry.

Every application made under this section shall specify the name, tonnage, and national character of the vessel, the name of the Master, and the name of every place for which cargo is to be shipped.

62. No vessel, whether laden or in ballast, shall depart from any Customs-port until a port-clearance has been granted by the Customs-collector or other officer duly authorized to grant the same.

And no Pilot shall take charge of any vessel proceeding to sea, unless the Master of such vessel produces a port-clearance.

63. Every application for port-clearance shall be made by the Master at least twenty-four hours before the intended departure of the vessel.

The Master shall, at the time of applying for port-clearance—

Master on applying for port-clearance to deliver documents and answer questions. (a) deliver to the Customs-collector a manifest in duplicate in such form as may from time to time be prescribed by the Chief Customs-Authority, signed by such Master, specifying all goods to be exported in the vessel, and showing separately all goods and stores entered in the import-manifest, and not landed or consumed on board or transhipped :

(b) deliver to the Customs-collector such shipping bills or other documents as such Customs-collector acting under the general instructions of such Chief Customs-Authority, requires ; and

(c) answer to the proper officer of Customs such questions touching the departure and destination of the vessel as are demanded of him.

The provisions of section 55 relating to the amendment of import-manifests shall mutatis mutandis apply also to export manifests delivered under this section.

64. The Customs-collector may refuse port-clearance to any vessel until

Power to refuse Port-clearance. (a) the provisions of section 63 are complied with

(b) all Port-dues and other charges and penalties due by such vessel, or by the owner or Master thereof, and all duties payable in respect of any goods shipped therein have been duly paid, or their payment secured by such guarantee, or by a deposit at such rate as such Customs-collector directs ;

(c) the ship's agent (if any) delivers to the Customs-collector a declaration in writing to the effect that he will be liable for any penalty imposed under section 167, No. 17, and furnishes security for the discharge of the same ;

(d) the ship's agent (if any) delivers to the Customs-collector a declaration in writing to the effect that such agent is answerable for the discharge of all claims for damage or short delivery which may be established by the owner of any goods comprised in the import-cargo in respect of such goods.

A ship's agent delivering a declaration under clause (c) of this section shall be liable to all penalties which might be imposed on the Master under section 167, No. 17, and a ship's agent delivering a declaration under clause (d) of this section shall be bound to discharge all claims referred to in such declaration.

65. When the Customs-collector is satisfied that the provisions of section 63 and if necessary of clauses (b) and (c) and (d) of section 64 have been complied with, he shall grant a port-clearance to the Master, and shall return at the same time to such Master one copy of the manifest duly countersigned by the proper officer of Customs.

66. Notwithstanding anything contained in sections 64 and 65, the Customs-collector may (subject to such rules as the Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time prescribe) grant a port-clearance to the Master when the ship's agent furnishes such security as the Customs-collector deems sufficient for duly delivering, within five days from the date of such grant, the manifest and other documents specified in section 63.

CHAPTER VIII.

GENERAL PROVISIONS AFFECTING VESSELS IN PORT.

67. The Customs-collector at any Customs-port may at any time depute an officer to board his discretion one or more officers of Customs to board any vessel in or arriving at such Port.

Every officer of Customs so sent shall remain on board of such vessel by day and by night unless or until the Customs-collector otherwise orders.

68. Whenever an officer of Customs is so deputed on board of any vessel, the Master of such vessel shall be bound to receive on board such officer, and one servant of such officer, and to provide such officer and servant with suitable accommodation of shelter and accommodation, officer and servant. and likewise with a due allowance of fresh water, and with the means of cooking on board.

69. Every officer of Customs so deputed shall have free access to every part of the vessel, and may fasten down any hatchway or entrance to the hold, and mark any goods before landing, and look up, seal, mark, or otherwise secure any goods on board of such vessel.

If any box, place or closed receptacle in any such vessel be locked, and Power to authorize such vessel be locked, and search and opening of the key be withheld, such locks. officer shall report the same to the Customs-collector, who may thereupon issue to the officer on board, or to any other officer under his authority, a written order to search.

On production of such order, the officer bearing the same may require that any such box, place or closed receptacle be opened in his presence; and, if it be not opened upon his requisition, he may break open the same.

70. Unless with the written permission of the Customs-collector or in accordance with a general permission granted under section 74, no goods, other than passengers' baggage, or ballast urgently required to be shipped for the vessel's safety, shall be shipped or waterborne to be shipped or discharged from any vessel in any Customs-port, except in the presence of an officer of Customs.

71. When an officer of Customs is deputed under section 67 to remain on board a vessel, the tonnage of which does not exceed six hundred tons, a period of thirty working days, reckoned from the date on which he boards such vessel, or such additional period as the Customs-collector directs, shall be allowed for the discharge of import-cargo and the shipment of export-cargo on board of such vessel.

One additional day shall, in like manner, be allowed for every fifty tons in excess of six hundred

No charge shall be made for the services of a single officer of Customs for such allowed number of working days, or for the services of several such officers (if available) for respective periods not exceeding in the aggregate such allowed number of working days.

If the period occupied in the discharge and shipment of cargo be in excess of thirty working days, together with the additional period (if any) allowed under this section, the vessel shall be charged with the expense of the officer of Customs at a rate not exceeding five rupees per diem (Sundays and holidays excepted) for such excess period.

In calculating any period allowed, or any charge made, under this section, the period (if any) during which a vessel after the completion of the discharge of import-cargo, and before commencing the shipment of export-cargo, is laid up by the withdrawal of the officer of Customs upon application from the Master, shall be deducted.

72. Except with the written permission of the Customs-collector, no goods, other than passengers' baggage, shall in any Customs-port be discharged from any vessel, or be shipped or water-borne to be shipped—

(a) on any Sunday or on any holiday or day in which the discharge or shipping of cargo, as the case may be, is prohibited by the Chief Customs-Authority;

(b) on any day, except between such hours as such authority from time to time appoints by notification in the official Gazette.

73. No goods shall in any Customs-port be landed at any place other than a wharf or other place duly appointed for that purpose, and unless with the written permission of the Customs-collector or when a general permission has been granted under section 74, no goods shall in any Customs-port be shipped or water-borne to be shipped from any place other than a wharf or other place duly appointed for that purpose.

74. Notwithstanding anything contained in section 70 or 73, the Chief Customs-Authority may, by notification in the local official Gazette, give general permission for goods to be shipped or water-borne to be shipped in any Customs-port from all or any places not duly appointed as wharves, and without the presence or authority of an officer of Customs.

75. The Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time make rules for the landing and shipping of passengers' baggage and the passing of the same through the Customs-house; and for the landing, shipping and clearing of parcels forwarded by Her Majesty's or other mails, or by other regular packets and passenger vessels.

When any baggage or parcels is or are made over to an officer of customs for the purpose of being landed a fee of such amount as the Local Government from time to time directs shall be chargeable thereon, as compensation for the expense and trouble incurred in landing and depositing the same in the Custom-house.

76. When any goods are water-borne for the purpose of being landed from any vessel and warehoused or cleared for home-consumption, or of being shipped for exportation on board of any vessel, there shall be sent, with each boat-load or other separate despatch, a boat-note specifying the number of packages so sent and the marks and numbers or other description thereof.

Each boat-note for goods to be landed shall be signed by an officer of the vessel, and likewise by the officer of Customs on board, if any such officer be on board, and shall be delivered on arrival to any officer of Customs authorized to receive the same.

Each boat-note for goods to be shipped shall be signed by the proper officer of Customs, and, if an officer of Customs is on board of the vessel on which such goods are to be shipped, shall be delivered to such officer. If no such officer be on board, every such boat-note shall be delivered to the Master of the vessel, or to an officer of the vessel appointed by him to receive it.

The officer of Customs who receives any boat-note of goods landed, and the officer of Customs, Master, or other officer, as the case may be, who receives any boat-note of goods shipped, shall sign the same and note thereon such particulars as the Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time, direct.

The Local Government may from time to time by notification in the local official Gazette, suspend the operation of this section in any Customs-port or part thereof.

77. All goods water-borne for the purpose of being landed or shipped shall be landed or shipped without any unnecessary delay.

Goods water-borne to be forthwith landed or shipped.

78. Except in cases of imminent danger no goods shall be transhipped into any other boat without the permission of an officer of Customs.

Such goods not to be transhipped without permission.

79. The Local Government may declare with regard to any Customs-port, by notification in the local official Gazette, that after a date therein specified, no boat not duly licensed and registered shall be allowed to ply as a cargo-boat for the landing and shipping of merchandize within the limits of such Port.

Power to prohibit plying of unlicensed cargo-boats.

In any Port with regard to which a notification has been issued, Chief Officer of Customs or other officer whom the Local Government appoints in this behalf, may, subject to such rules and on payment of such fees as the Local Government from time to time prescribes by notification in the local official Gazette, issue licenses for, and register, cargo boats. Such officer may also, subject to rules so prescribed, cancel any license so issued.

Issue of licenses and registration of cargo-boats.

80. The Customs-collector may, whenever he thinks fit, require that goods stowed in bulk, and brought by sea or intended for exportation, shall be weighed or measured on board-ship before landing or after shipment, and may levy duty according to the result of such weighing or measurement.

Power to require goods to be weighed or measured on board before landing or after shipment.

CHAPTER IX.

OF DISCHARGE OF CARGO AND ENTRY INWARDS OF GOODS.

81. When an order for entry inwards of any vessel which has arrived in any Customs-port, or a special pass permitting such vessel to break bulk, has been given, the discharge of the cargo of such vessel may be proceeded with.

Discharge of cargo may commence on receipt of due permission.

82. Except as otherwise provided in this Act, no goods shall be allowed to leave any such vessel, unless they are entered in the original manifest of such vessel, or in an amended or supplementary manifest received under section 55.

Goods not to leave ship unless entered in manifest.

83. If the owner of any goods (except such as have been shown in the import-manifest as not to be landed) does not land such goods within such period as is specified in the bill of landing of such goods, or if no period is so specified within such number of working days, not exceeding fifteen, after the entry

Procedure in respect of goods not landed within time allowed.

of the vessel importing the same, as the Local Government from time to time appoints by notification in the official Gazette, or if the cargo of any vessel, with the exception of only a small quantity of goods, has been discharged previously to the expiration of the period so specified or appointed, as the case may be,— the Master of such vessel or, on his application, the proper officer of Customs, may then carry such goods to the Custom-house, there to remain for entry.

The Customs-collector shall thereupon take charge of and grant receipts for such goods;

and if notice in writing has been given by the Master that the goods are to remain subject to a lien for freight, primage, general average, or other charges of a stated amount, the Customs-collector shall hold such goods until he receives notice in writing that the said charges are paid.

84. At any time after the arrival of any vessel, the Customs-collector may, with the consent of the Master of such vessel, cause any small package or parcel of goods to be carried to the Custom-house, there to remain for entry, in charge of the officers of Customs, during the remainder of the working days allowed under this Act for the landing of such package or parcel.

Power to land small parcels.

If any package or parcel so carried to the Custom-house remains unclaimed on the expiration of the number of working days so allowed for its landing, or at the time of the clearance outwards of the vessel from which it was landed, the Master may give such notice as is provided in section 83, and the officer in charge of the Custom-house shall thereupon hold such package or parcel as provided in that section.

Notice regarding unclaimed packages.

85. Notwithstanding anything contained in sections 83 and 84 the Customs-collector in any Customs-port to which the Local Government, by notification in the local official Gazette, declares this section to be applicable, may permit the Master of any vessel immediately on receipt of an order under section 57 or special pass under section 59, to discharge the cargo of such vessel or any portion thereof into the custody of the ship's agents if willing to receive the same, for the purpose of landing the same forthwith—

(a) at the Custom-house or any specified landing-place or wharf; or

(b) at any landing-place or wharf belonging to any Port Commissioners, Port Trust or other public body or company;

Any ship's agent so receiving such cargo or portion shall be bound to discharge all claims for damage or short delivery which may be established in respect of the same by the owner thereof, and shall be entitled to recover from such owner his charges for service rendered, but not for commission or the like, where any agent for the landing of such cargo or portion has been previously appointed by the owner and such appointment is unrevoked.

The Customs-collector shall take charge of all goods discharged under clause (a) of this section, and otherwise proceed in relation thereto as provided in sections 83 and 88.

A public body or company at whose landing place or wharf any goods are discharged under clause (b) of this section, shall not permit the same to be removed without an order in writing from the Customs-collector.

86. The owner of any goods imported shall on the landing thereof from the importing ship make entry of such goods for home consumption or warehousing by delivering to the Customs-collector a bill of entry thereof in duplicate, in such form and containing such particulars, in addition to the particulars specified in section 29, as may, from time to time, be prescribed by the Chief Customs-Authority.

The particulars of such entry shall correspond with the particulars given of the same goods in the manifest of the ship.

87. On the delivery of such bill the duty (if any) leviable on such goods shall be assessed, and the owner of such goods may then proceed to clear the same for home-consumption, or warehouse them, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained.

88. If any goods are not entered and cleared for home-consumption, or warehoused, within four months from the date of entry of the vessel, such goods may, after due notice to the owner, if his address can be ascertained, and in the Local official Gazette, be sold by public auction, and the proceeds thereof shall be applied, first, to the payment of freight, primage and general average, if the goods are held by the Customs-collector subject to such charges under notice given under section 83, 84 or 85; next, to the payment of the duties which would be leviable on such goods if they were then cleared for home-consumption, and next to the payment of the other charges (if any) payable to the Customs-collector in respect of the same.

The surplus, if any, shall be paid to the owner of the goods, on his application for the same, provided that such application be made within one year from the sale of the goods, or that sufficient cause be shown for not making it within such period.

If any goods of which the Customs-collector has taken charge under section 83, 84 or 85 be of a perishable nature, the Customs-collector may at any time direct the sale thereof, and shall apply the proceeds in like manner:

Provided that, where any goods liable to be sold under this section are arms, ammunition or military stores, they may be sold or otherwise disposed of at such place (whether within or without British India), and in such manner, as the Local Government may from time to time direct:

Provided also, that nothing in this section shall authorize the removal for home-consumption of any dutiable goods without payment of duties of customs thereon.

CHAPTER X.

OF CLEARANCE OF GOODS FOR HOME-CONSUMPTION.

89. When the owner of any goods entered for home-consumption, and (if such goods be liable to duty) assessed under section 87, has paid the import-duty (if any) assessed on such goods and any charges payable under this Act in respect of the same, the Customs-officer may make an order clearing the same; and such order shall be sufficient authority for the removal of such goods by the owner.

CHAPTER XI.

WAREHOUSING.

Of the admission of goods into a warehouse.

90. When any dutiable goods have been entered for warehousing and assessed under section 87, the owner of such goods may apply for leave to deposit the same in any warehouse appointed or licensed under this Act:

91. Every such application shall be in writing signed by the applicant, and shall be in such form as is from time to time prescribed by the Chief Customs-Authority.

92. When any such application has been made in respect of any goods, the owner of the goods to which it relates shall execute a bond, binding himself, in a penalty of twice the amount of duty assessed under section 87 on such goods,

(a) to observe all rules prescribed by this Act in respect of such goods;

(b) to pay, on demand, all duties, rent and charges claimable on account of such goods under this Act, together with interest on the same from the date of demand, at such rate not exceeding six per cent. per annum as is for the time being fixed by the Chief Customs-Authority; and

(c) to discharge all penalties incurred for violation of the provisions of this Act in respect of such goods.

Every such bond shall be, in the Form marked A hereto annexed, or, when such form is inapplicable or insufficient, in such other form as is from time to time prescribed by the Chief Customs-Authority, and shall relate to the cargo or portion of the cargo of one vessel only.

93. When the provisions of sections 91 and 92 have been complied with in respect of any goods such goods shall be forwarded in charge of an officer of customs to the warehouse in which they are to be deposited.

A pass shall be sent with the goods specifying the name of the importing vessel and of the bonder, the marks, numbers and contents of each package, and the warehouse or place in the warehouse wherein they are to be deposited.

94. On receipt of the goods, the pass shall be examined by the warehouse-keeper, and shall be returned to the Customs-collector.

No package, butt, cask or hogshead shall be admitted into any warehouse unless it bear the marks and numbers specified in, and otherwise correspond with, the pass for its admission.

If the goods be found to correspond with the pass, the warehouse-keeper shall certify to that affect on the pass, and the warehousing of such goods shall be deemed to have been completed.

If the goods do not so correspond, the fact shall be reported by the warehouse-keeper for the orders of the Customs-collector, and the goods shall either be returned to the Custom-house in charge of an officer of Customs or kept in deposit pending such orders, as the warehouse-keeper deems most convenient.

If the quantity or value of any goods has been erroneously stated in the bill of entry, the error may be rectified at any time before the warehousing of the goods is completed, and not subsequently.

95. Except as provided in section 100, all goods shall be warehoused in the packages, butts, casks or hogsheads in which they have been imported.

96. Whenever any goods are lodged in a public warehouse or a licensed private warehouse, the warehouse-keeper, or, in the case of the Bengal Bonded Warehouse Association, the Secretary of the said Association, shall deliver a warrant signed by him as such to the person lodging the goods.

Such warrant shall be in the Form B hereto annexed, and shall be transferable by endorsement; and the endorsee shall be entitled to receive the goods specified in such warrant on the same terms those on which the person who originally lodged the goods would have been entitled to receive the same.

The Local Government may by notification in the local official Gazette exempt salt and salted fish from the operation of this section and may in like manner cancel such exemption.

Rules relating to goods in a warehouse.

97. The Customs-collector or any officer deputed by him for the purpose, shall have access to any private warehouse licensed under this Act.

98. The Customs-collector may at any time by order in writing direct that any goods or packages lodged in any warehouse shall be opened, weighed or otherwise examined; and after any goods have been so opened or examined, may cause the same to be sealed or marked in such manner as he thinks fit.

When any goods have been so sealed and marked after examination, they shall not be again opened without the permission of the Customs-collector; and when any such goods have been opened with such permission, the packages shall, if he thinks fit, be again sealed or marked as before.

99. Any owner of goods lodged in a warehouse shall, at any time within the hours of business, have access to his goods in presence of an officer of Customs, and an officer of Customs shall, upon application for the purpose being made in writing to the Customs-collector, be deputed to accompany such owner.

When an officer of Customs is specially employed to accompany such owner, a sum sufficient to meet the expense thereby incurred shall, if the Customs-collector so require, be paid by such owner to the Customs-collector, and such sum shall, if the Customs-collector so direct, be paid in advance.

100. With the sanction of the Customs-collector, and after such notice given, and under such rules and conditions as the Chief Customs-Authority from time to time prescribes, any owner of goods may, either before or after warehousing the same,—

(a) sort, separate, pack and repack the goods and make such alterations therein as may be necessary for the preservation, sale, shipment or disposal thereof (such goods to be repacked in the packages in which they were imported, or in such other packages as the Customs-collector permits);

(b) fill up any casks of wine, spirit or beer from any casks of the same secured in the same warehouse;

(c) mix any wines or spirit of the same sort secured in the same warehouse, crasing from the cask all import-brands, unless the whole of the wine or spirit so mixed be of the same brand;

(d) bottle off wine or spirit from any casks;

(e) take such samples of goods as may be allowed by the Customs-collector with or without entry for home consumption, and with or without payment of duty, except such as may eventually become payable on a deficiency of the original quantity.

After any such goods have been so separated and repacked in proper or approved packages, the Customs-collector may, at the request of the owner of such goods, cause or permit any refuse, damaged, or surplus goods remaining after such separation or repacking (or, at the like request, any goods which may not be worth the duty) to be destroyed, and may remit the duty payable hereon.

101. If goods be lodged in a public warehouse, the owner shall pay monthly, on receiving a bill or written demand for the same from the Customs-collector or other officer deputed by him in that behalf, rent and warehouse-dues at such rates as the Chief Customs-Authority or such officer of customs as such Authority from time to time appoints in this behalf may fix.

A table of the rates of rent and warehouse, dues so fixed shall be placed in a conspicuous part of such warehouse.

If any bill for rent or warehouse-dues presented under this section is not discharged within ten days from the date of presentation, the Customs-collector may, in the discharge of such demand (any transfer or assignment of the goods notwithstanding) cause to be sold by public auction, after due notice in the local official Gazette, such sufficient portion of the goods as he may select.

Out of the proceeds of such sale the Customs-collector shall first satisfy the demand for the discharge of which the sale was ordered, and shall then pay over the surplus (if any) to the owner of the goods:

Provided that the application for such surplus be made within one year from the date of the sale of the goods, or that sufficient cause be shown for not making it within such period.

102. No warehoused goods shall be taken out of any warehouse, except on clearance for home-consumption or shipment, or for removal to another warehouse or as otherwise provided by this Act.

Goods not to be taken out of warehouse, except as provided by this Act.

103. Any goods warehoused may be left in the warehouse in which they are deposited or in any warehouse to which they may in manner hereinafter provided be removed till the expiry of three years after the date of the bond executed in relation to such goods under section 92. The owner of any goods remaining in a warehouse on the expiry of such period shall clear the same for home-consumption or shipment in manner hereinafter provided :

Period for which goods may remain warehoused under bond.

Provided that when the license for any private warehouse is cancelled, and the Customs-collector gives notice of such cancellation to the owner of any goods deposited in such warehouse, such owner shall in manner hereinafter provided, and within seven days from the date on which such notice is given, remove such goods to sumption or shipment.

Goods in private warehouse on cancellation of license.

Of the removal of goods from one warehouse to another.

104. Any owner of goods warehoused under this Act may, at any time within three years from the date of the bond executed in respect of such goods under section 92, and with the permission of the Chief Customs-Officer, and on such conditions and after giving such security (if any) as such officer directs, remove goods from one warehouse to another warehouse in the same Port.

Power to remove goods from one warehouse to another in same Port.

When any owner desires so to remove any goods, he shall apply for permission to do so in such form as the Chief Customs-Authority from time to time prescribes.

105. Any owner of goods warehoused at any warehousing Port may, from time to time, within the said period of three years remove the same by sea or by inland carriage, in order to be re-warehoused at any other warehousing Port.

Power to remove goods from one port to another.

When any owner desires so to remove any goods for such purpose, he shall apply to the Chief Customs-Officer, stating the particulars of the goods to be removed, and the name of the Port to which it is intended that they shall be removed, together with such other particulars, and in such manner and form, as the Chief Customs-Authority from time to time prescribes.

Procedure.

106. When permission is granted for the removal of any goods from one warehousing Port to another under section 105; an account containing the particulars thereof shall be transmitted by the proper officer of the Port of removal to the proper officer of the Port of destination; and the person requiring the removal shall Transmission of account of goods to officers at Port of destination.

Bond for due arrival before such removal enter and rewarehousing. into a bond, with one sufficient surety, in a sum equal at least to the duty chargeable on such goods, for the due arrival and rewarehousing thereof at the Port of destination within such time as the Chief Customs-Authority directs.

Such bond may be taken by the proper officer, either at the Port of removal or at the Port of destination, as best suits the convenience of the owner.

If such bond is taken at the Port of destination, a certificate thereof, signed by the proper officer of such Port, shall, at the time of the removal of such goods, be produced to the proper officer at the Port of removal; and such bond shall not be discharged unless such goods are produced to the proper officer, and duly re-warehoused at the Port of destination within the time allowed for such removal, or are otherwise accounted for to the satisfaction of such officer; nor until the full duty due upon any deficiency of such goods, not so accounted for, has been paid.

107. The Chief Customs-Authority may permit any person desirous of removing warehoused goods to enter into a general bond, with such sureties, in such amount, and under such conditions, as the Chief Customs-Authority approves, for the removal, from time to time, of any goods from one warehouse to another, either in the same or in a different Port, and for the due arrival and re-warehousing of such goods at the Port of destination within such time as such Authority directs.

Remover may enter into a general bond.

108. Upon the arrival of warehoused goods at the Port of destination, they shall be entered and warehoused in like manner goods are entered and warehoused on the first importation thereof, and under the laws and rules, in so far as such laws and rules are applicable, which regulate the entry and warehousing of such last-mentioned goods.

Goods on arrival at Port of destination to be entered in like manner as on first importation.

109. Every bond executed under section 92 in respect of any goods shall, unless the Chief Officer of Customs in any case deems a fresh bond to be necessary, continue in force, notwithstanding the subsequent removal of such goods to another warehouse or warehousing port.

Bond under section 92 to continue in force notwithstanding removal.

Clearance for home-consumption or shipment.

110. Any owner of goods warehoused may, at any time within three years from the date of the bond executed under section 92 in respect of such goods, clear such goods for home-consumption by paying (a) the duty assessed on such goods under section 87, or where the duty on such goods is altered under the provisions hereinafter contained, such altered duty; and (b) all rent, penalties, interest and other charges payable to the Customs-collector in respect of such goods.

Clearance of bonded goods for home-consumption.

111. Any owner of goods warehoused may, at any time within three years from the date of the bond executed under section 92, in respect of such goods clear such goods for shipment to a Foreign Port on payment of all rent, penalties.

Clearance of same for shipment to Foreign Port.

interest and other charges payable as aforesaid and without payment of import duty on the same :—

Provided that the Governor General in Council may prohibit the shipment for exportation to any specified foreign port of warehoused goods in respect of which payment of drawback or transshipment has been prohibited under section 49 or 184 respectively.

112. Provisions and stores warehoused at the time of importation may within the said period of three years be shipped without payment of duty for use on board of any vessel proceeding to a Foreign Port.

Clearance of same for shipment as provisions, &c., on vessels proceeding to Foreign Ports.

113. Application to clear goods from any warehouse for home-consumption or for shipment shall be made in such form as the Chief Customs-Authority from time to time prescribes.

Form of application for clearance of goods.

Such application shall ordinarily be made to the Customs-collector at least twenty-four hours before it is intended so to clear such goods.

114. If any goods upon which duties are leviable ad valorem or on a tariff valuation receive damage through unavoidable accident after they have been entered for warehousing and assessed under section 87, and before they are cleared for home-consumption, they shall, if the owner so desires, be re-assessed for duty according to their actual value, and a new bond for the same may, at the option of the owner, be executed for the unexpired term of warehousing.

Re-assessment of warehoused goods when damaged.

115. If after any goods entered for warehousing have been assessed under section 87, any alteration is made in the duty leviable upon such goods or in the tariff valuation (if any) applicable thereto, such goods shall be re-assessed in accordance with the second proviso to section 37.

Re-assessment on alteration of duty or tariff valuation.

116. If it appear at the time of clearing any wine, spirit, beer or salt from any warehouse for home consumption that there exists a deficiency not otherwise accounted for to the satisfaction of the Customs-collector, an allowance on account of ullage and wastage shall be made in adjusting the duties thereon, as follows (namely),

(a) upon wine, spirit and beer in cask to an extent not exceeding the rates specified below, or such other rates as may from time to time be prescribed in this behalf by the Local Government and notified in the official Gazette :

For any time not exceeding 6 months	..	2½ per cent.
Exceeding 6 months and not exceeding 12 "	..	5 "
Exceeding 12 months and not exceeding 18 "	..	7½ "
Exceeding 18 months and not exceeding 2 years	..	10 "
Exceeding 2 years and not exceeding 3 "	..	12½ "

(b) in the case of salt warehoused in a public ware house, only the amount actually cleared shall be charged with Customs-duties ;

(c) in the case of salt warehoused in a private ware house, wastage shall be allowed at such rate as may be prescribed from time to time by the Local Government and notified in the local official Gazette.

117. When any wine, spirit, beer or salt lodged in a warehouse is found to be deficient at the time of the delivery therefrom, and such deficiency is proved to be due solely to ullage or wastage, the Chief Customs-Authority may direct, in respect of any such article, that allowance be made in any special case for a rate of ullage or wastage exceeding that contemplated in section 116.

Further special allowance.

Of the forfeiture and discharge of the bond.

118. If any warehoused goods are removed from the warehouse in contravention of section 102; or if any such goods have not been removed from the warehouse at the expiration of the time during which such goods are permitted by section 103 to remain in such warehouse ; or

When goods are improperly removed from warehouses or allowed to remain beyond time fixed.

if any goods in respect of which a bond has been executed under section

92 and which have not been cleared for home-consumption, or shipment or removed under this Act, are lost or destroyed otherwise than as provided in section 100 or as mentioned in section 122, or are not accounted for to the satisfaction of the Customs-collector, or if any such goods have been taken under section 100 as samples without payment of duty, the Customs-collector may thereupon demand, and the owner of such goods shall forthwith pay, the full amount of duty chargeable on account of such goods, together with all rent, penalties, interest and other charges payable to the Customs-collector on account of the same.

Collector may demand duty, &c.

119. If any owner fails to pay any sum so demanded, the Customs-collector may forthwith either proceed upon the bond executed under section 92, or cause such portion as he thinks fit of the goods (if any) in the warehouse on account of which the amount is due, to be detained with a view to the recovery of the demand ;

and if the demand be not discharged within ten days from the date of such detention (due notice thereof being given to the owner), the goods so detained may be sold by public auction duly advertised in the local official Gazette.

The net proceeds of any sale so made of goods so detained shall be written off upon the bond in discharge thereof to the amount received, and if any surplus be obtained from such sale, beyond the amount of the demand, such surplus shall be paid to the owner of the goods : Provided that application for the same be made within one year from the sale, or that sufficient cause be shown for not making the application within such period.

No transfer or assignment of the goods shall prevent the Customs-collector from proceeding against such goods in the manner above provided, for any amount due thereon.

120. When any warehoused goods are taken out of any warehouse, the Customs-collector shall cause the fact to be noted on the back of the bond.

Noting removal of goods.

Every note so made shall specify the quantity and description of such goods, the purposes for which they have been removed, the date of removal, the name of the person removing them, the number and date of the shipping bill under which they have been taken away if removed for exportation by sea, or of the bill of entry if removed for home-consumption, and the amount of duty paid (if any).

121. A register shall be kept of all bonds entered into for Customs-and when all amounts due on account of such goods have been paid, the Customs-collector shall cancel such bond as discharged in full, and shall on demand deliver it, so cancelled, to the person who has executed or who is entitled to receive it.

Miscellaneous.

122. If any goods in respect of which a bond

CHAPTER XII.

TRANSHIPMENT.

128. In the Ports of Calcutta, Madras,

Power to permit transshipment without payment of duty.

Bombay, Kárwár, Karáchi, Aden, Rangoon, Maulmain, Akyab, Chittagong, and such other ports as the Governor or General in Council may from time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct in this behalf, the Customs-collector may, on application by the owner of any goods imported into such Port, and specially and distinctly manifested at the time of importation as for transshipment to some other Customs or Foreign Port, grant leave to tranship the same without payment of the duty, (if any) leviable, at the Port of transshipment, and without any security or bond for the due arrival and entry of the goods at the Port of destination.

In any Customs-port other than a Port in which the preceding clause may for the time being be in force, the Customs-collector may, on application by the owner of any goods so imported and manifested, grant leave for transshipment without payment of the duty (if any) leviable at such Port; provided that, where the goods so transhipped are dutiable, and are to be removed to some other Customs-port, the applicant shall enter into a bond, with such security as may be required of him, in a sum equal at least to the duty chargeable on such goods, for the due arrival and entry thereof at the Port of destination within such time as such Customs-collector directs.

129. An officer of Customs shall, in every case, be deputed free of charge to superintend the removal of transhipped goods from vessel to vessel.

Superintendence of transshipment.

130. The powers conferred on the Customs-collector by section 128 shall be exercised, and the transshipment shall be performed, subject to such rules as may from time to time be made by the Local Government.

No rules made under this section shall come into force until after the expiry of such reasonable time from the date of the publication of the same as the Local Government may in each case ap-

131. All goods transhipped under the second

Entry and warehousing, on arrival, of goods transhipped under section 128, clause 2.

clause of section 128 for removal to a Customs-port shall on their arrival at such Port be entered in like manner as goods are entered on the first importation thereof, and under the laws and rules, in so far as such laws and rules can be made applicable, which regulate the entry of such last-mentioned goods.

132. If two or more vessels belonging wholly

Transshipment of provisions and stores from one vessel to another of same owner without payment of duty.

or in part to the same owner be at any Customs-port at the same time, any provisions and stores in use or ordinarily shipped for use on board may, at the discretion of the Customs-collector, be transhipped from one such vessel to any other such vessel without payment of import-duty.

133. A transshipment-fee on any goods or class of Levy of transshipment-fee.

goods transhipped under this Act, may be levied at such rates, on each bale or package, or according to weight, measurement, quantity, or number, and under such rules as the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council, may from time to time by notification in the local official Gazette prescribe for each port.

134. The Governor General in Council may from

Power to prohibit transshipment.

time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India, prohibit, at any specified

Port, or at all Ports, the transshipment, of any specified class of goods, generally or when destined for any specified ports, or prescribe any special mode of transshipping any specified class of goods.

No goods to be transhipped except as provided.

135. Except as provided in this Act, no goods shall be transhipped at any Port or place in British India.

CHAPTER XIII.EXPORTATION OF SHIPMENT, AND RE-LANDING.*136. Except with the written permission of the

No goods to be shipped, &c., till entry outwards of vessel.

Customs-collector, no goods other than passengers' baggage, or ballast urgently required for a vessel's safety shall be shipped or water-borne to be shipped in any vessel in a Customs-port until an order has been obtained under section 61 for entry outwards of such vessel.

When such order has been obtained, the export cargo of such vessel may be shipped, subject to the provisions next hereinafter contained.

137. Unless the Chief Customs-Authority shall,

Charges for shipment.

in the case of any Customs-port or wharf, or of any class of goods, otherwise direct by notification in the local official Gazette, no goods, except passengers' baggage, shall be shipped or water-borne to be shipped for exportation, until—

(a) the owner has delivered to the Customs-collector, or other proper officer, a shipping-bill of such goods in duplicate in such form and containing such particulars in addition to those specified in section 29 as may from time to time be prescribed by the Chief Customs-Authority ;

(b) such owner has paid the duties (if any) payable on such goods ; and

(c) such bill has been passed by the Customs-collector.

138. Before any warehoused goods or goods

Bond required in certain cases before exportation.

subject to excise-duties, goods entitled to drawback of Customs-duties on exportation or goods exportable only under particular rules or restrictions, are permitted to be exported, the owner shall, if required so to do, give security by bond in such sum, not exceeding twice the duty leviable on such goods, as the Customs-collector directs, with one sufficient surety, that such goods shall be duly shipped, exported and landed at the place for which they are entered outwards, or shall be otherwise accounted for to the satisfaction of such officer.

139. When goods are cleared for shipment

Additional charge on goods cleared for shipment after port-clearance granted.

on a shipping-bill presented after port-clearance has been granted, the Customs-collector may, if he thinks fit, levy, in addition to any duty to which such goods are ordinarily liable, a charge not exceeding—

(a) in the case of goods liable to duties on fixed tariff valuations, one per cent. on the tariff value ;

(b) in the case of all other goods, one per cent. on the market value.

Nothing in this section shall apply to any shipment of treasure or opium.

140. If any goods mentioned in a shipping-bill

Notice of non-shipment or re-landing, and return of duty thereon.

or manifest be not shipped, or be shipped and afterwards

re-landed, the owner shall, before the expiration of five clear working days after the vessel on which such goods were intended to be shipped, or from which they were re-landed, has left the Port, give information of such short-shipment or re-landing to the Customs-collector.

Upon an application being made to the Customs-collector, any duty levied upon goods not shipped, or upon goods shipped and afterwards re-landed, shall be refunded to the person on whose behalf such duty was paid : Provided that no such refund shall be allowed unless information has been given as above required.

141. If, after having cleared from any Customs-

Goods re-landed or transhipped from a vessel returning to Port, or putting into another Port.

port any vessel, without having discharged her cargo, returns to such Port, or puts into any other Customs-port, any owner of goods in such vessel, if he desires to land or tranship the same or any portion thereof for re-export, may, with the consent of the Master, apply to the Customs-collector in that behalf.

The Customs-collector, if he grant the application, shall thereupon send an officer of Customs to watch the vessel, and to take charge of such goods during such re-landing or transhipment.

Such goods shall not be allowed to be transhipped or re-exported free of duty by reason of the previous settlement of duty at the time of first export, unless they are lodged and remain until the time of re-export, under the custody of an officer of Customs, in a place appointed by the Customs-collector, or are transhipped under such custody.

All expenses attending such custody shall be borne by the owner.

142. In either of the cases mentioned in section

Vessel returning to port may enter and land goods under import-rules. 141, the Master of the vessel may enter such vessel inwards, and any owner of goods therein may, with the consent of the Master, land the same under the rules herein contained for the importation of goods.

In every such case, any export-duty levied shall be refunded to, and any amount paid in drawback shall be recovered from, such owner.

143. The Customs-collector may, on applica-

Relanding of cargo during repairs tion by the Master of any vessel, which is obliged before completing her voyage to put into any Customs-port for repairs, permit him to land the cargo, or any portion thereof, and to place it in the custody of an officer of Customs during such repairs, and to re-ship and export the same free of duty.

All expenses attending such custody shall be borne by the Master.

CHAPTER XIV.

SPIRIT.

Exportation of spirit under bond for excise-duty.

144. The Chief Customs-Authority may from Rules for removal of spirit from distillery without payment of duty, for exportation.

time to time make rules prescribing the conditions on which spirit manufactured in British India may be removed from any licensed distillery for exportation without payment of excise-duty.

The person so removing any such spirit shall execute a bond with one or more sureties, in the form marked C hereto annexed, or (when such form is inapplicable or insufficient) in such other form as the said Authority from time to time prescribes, conditioned that such duty shall be paid on all such spirit as is

(a) not exported within four months from the date of the bond, or

(b) exported to a Customs-port unless the payment of excise-duty as provided by this chapter in respect thereof at the port of destination is within six months from the date of the bond proved to the satisfaction of the proper officer.

The Chief Officer of Customs of the port of exportation may, on sufficient cause shown, extend for a further term not exceeding four months the period allowed for the exportation of any such spirit, or for the production of such proof that duty has been paid.

145. Spirit intended for exportation under bond

Spirit for export to be taken direct from distillery to Customs-house under pass.

for the excise-duty shall be taken from the distillery direct to the Customs-house, under passes to be granted for that purpose by the officers of Excise.

146. Spirit brought to the Customs-house for Gauging and proving of spirits.

exportation under bond for the excise-duty shall, previous to shipment, be gauged and proved by an officer of Customs, and the quantity of spirit for which credit is to be given in the settlement of any bond shall be determined in the same manner.

147. Excise-duty shall be recoverable previous

Duty to be recovered on any deficiency in spirit under bond. to shipment upon the excess (if any) of the quantity of spirit passed from a distillery over the quantity ascertained by gauge and proof at the Customs-house, less an allowance for ullage and wastage at such rates as are from time to time prescribed by the Local Government and notified in the local official Gazette.

148. Spirit exported under bond for excise-

Duty on spirit exported under bond from Indian Port to another. duty from any Customs-port to any other Customs-port, shall be charged at the Port of importation with excise-duty at the ordinary rate to which spirit of the like kind and strength is liable at such Port.

149. Spirit brought to the Customs-house for Removal for local consumption of spirit intended for exportation. exportation under bond for the excise-duty may, on payment of such duty, be removed for local consumption under passes to be granted for that purpose by the officers of Excise.

Credit for every such payment shall be given in discharge of the bond to which it relates.

Drawback of excise duty on export of spirit.

150. A drawback of excise-duty paid on

Drawback of excise-duty on spirit exported. spirit manufactured in British India and exported to any Foreign Port under the provisions of section 138, shall be allowed by the Customs-collector at the Port of exportation:

Provided that the exportation be made within one year from the date of payment of such excise-duty, and that the spirit, when brought to the Customs-house, be accompanied by a pass in which such payment is certified.

Such drawback shall be regulated by the strength and quantity of such spirit as ascertained by gauge and proof by an officer of customs.

Miscellaneous.

151. If spirit manufactured in British India

Differential duty to be levied in certain cases. upon which excise-duty has been paid is exported from one Customs port to another, and the rate of local excise-duty at the port of importation is higher than that already paid upon such spirit, a differential duty shall be charged thereon, at such rate as the Local Government at such Port may by notification in the local official Gazette from time to time prescribe.

152. Rum-shrub, cordial, and other such liquor

Rum-shrub, &c., how charged with duty. prepared in a licensed distillery under the supervision of the surveyor or officer in charge of the distillery shall be charged with excise-duty under this Act according to the quantity of spirit used in its preparation as ascertained by such surveyor or officer.

The provisions of this Act respecting spirit, except such as relate to gauge and proof, shall apply to such liquor.

153. No drawback shall be allowed for any spirit on which duty has been paid, nor shall the duty due on any spirit under bond be remitted, unless the spirit is shipped from the Custom-house, and in a vessel whereon an officer of Customs has been appointed to superintend the receipt of export-cargo.

154. No spirit shipped for exportation shall be re-landed without a special pass from an officer of Excise, in addition to any permission of an officer of Customs which may be required by the law for the time being in force.

155. When by any law for the time being in force a special duty is imposed on spirit rendered unfit for human consumption, the Local Government may from time to time make rules for ascertaining and determining what spirit imported into British India shall be deemed to have been effectually and permanently so rendered unfit, and for causing such spirit to be so rendered, if necessary, by their own officers, and at the expense of the person importing the same, before the Customs-duties leviable thereon are levied.

In the absence of any such rules, or if any dispute arises as to their applicability, the Chief Customs-Officer shall decide what spirit is subject only to the said special duty, and such decision shall be final.

CHAPTER XV. COASTING TRADE.

156. Except as hereinafter provided, nothing in Chapters VII, IX, X, and part of XVII inapplicable to coasting trade, sections 136, 139 and 141 to 143 inclusive of this Act shall apply to coasting vessels or to goods imported or exported in such vessels.

157. The Local Government may, from time to time, make rules consistent with the provisions of this Chapter,

(a) extending any provision of the Chapters and Sections mentioned in section 156 with or without modification to any coasting vessels or to any goods imported or exported in such vessels;

(b) exempting any such vessels or goods from any of the other provisions of this Act except those contained in this Chapter;

(c) prescribing the conditions on which goods, or any specified class of goods, may be (1) carried in a coasting vessel, whether shipped at a Foreign Port, or at a Customs-port, or at a place declared under section 12 to be a port; (2) shipped in a coasting vessel before all dutiable goods and goods brought in such vessel from a Foreign Port have been unladen;

(d) prohibiting the conveyance of any specified class of goods generally, or to or between specified Ports in a coasting vessel;

158. Before any coasting vessel departs from the port of lading or when there are more ports of lading than one, the first port of lading, the Master shall fill in, sign and deliver to the

Customs-collector a manifest in duplicate containing a true specification of all goods to be carried in such vessel, in such form, and accompanied by such shipping-bills or other documents as may from time to time be prescribed by the Chief Customs-Authority

If the Customs-collector sees no objection to the departure of the vessel, he shall retain the duplicate and return the original manifest dated and signed by him together with its accompaniments; and such manifest shall be the port-clearance of the vessel unless, under the general orders of the Chief Customs-Authority, a separate port-clearance be prescribed.

159. Within twenty-four hours after the arrival of any coasting vessel at any Customs-port, whether intermediate or final, and before any goods are there discharged, the manifest, together with the other documents referred to in section 158, shall be delivered to the Customs-collector, who shall note on the manifest the date of delivery.

If the vessel has touched at any Foreign Port between such Port of arrival and her last preceding Customs-port of departure, the Master shall append to the manifest a declaration to that effect, and shall also indicate on the manifest the portions (if any) of the cargo therein described which have been discharged, and subjoin thereto a true specification of all goods shipped at such Port.

If the Customs-port of arrival be an intermediate Port, and a portion only of the cargo is to be discharged thereat, the Master shall likewise so deliver an extract from the manifest signed by him, relating to such portion, and the Customs-collector shall, after verifying such extract, return to him the original manifest and all documents accompanying it except those relating to such portion.

If in any case the cargo actually on board any coasting vessel on her arrival at any Customs-port does not, owing to short-shipment, re-landing, or other cause, correspond with the specification thereof in the manifest returned to the Master under the second clause of section 158, such Master shall, before delivery of such manifest under this section, note thereon the particulars of the difference.

The Customs-collector, when satisfied with the manifest and other documents, shall grant an order to break bulk.

160. Before any coasting vessel departs from any Customs-port at which she has touched during her voyage, the Master shall re-deliver the original manifest to the Customs-collector, after indicating thereon the portions (if any) of the cargo therein described which have been discharged, and subjoining thereto a true specification of all goods shipped at such Port. He shall also deliver a duplicate, signed by him, of the specification so subjoined.

If the Customs-collector sees no objection to the departure of the vessel, he shall proceed as prescribed in the second clause of section 158.

161. The Customs-collector may, for sufficient reason, refuse port-clearance to any coasting vessel declared to be bound to, or about to touch at, any Customs-port, unless the owner or Master gives a bond with such security as the Customs-collector deems sufficient for the production to the Customs-collector of a certificate from the proper officer of the Port to which such vessel is said to be bound, of her arrival at such Port within a reasonable time to be prescribed in each case by the Customs-collector.

162. When permission has been granted by the Customs-collector for the discharge of cargo from any coasting vessel—

(a) if the vessel has not touched at any intermediate Foreign Port in the course of her voyage, and has not on board any dutiable goods, the cargo may be forthwith landed and removed by the owner, without entry thereof at the Custom-house and clearance for home-consumption, but subject to such general check and control as the Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time by rules prescribe;

(b) if the vessel has so touched at any such Port, or has on board any such goods, such vessel shall be subject to all the provisions of Chapter VII of this Act relating to vessels arriving and such goods, and until such goods have been duly discharged all other goods on board shall be subject to the provisions of Chapter IX of this Act relating to goods imported.

163. If any of the goods on board of any coasting vessel be subject to any excise-duty, they shall not be unladen without the permission of the proper officer of Excise.

164. Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, the Chief Customs Authority may authorize the Customs-collector to grant a general pass, on any conditions which such Authority thinks expedient, for the lading and clearance, and for the entry and unlading, of any coasting steam-vessel at any Ports of despatch or destination, or at any intermediate Ports at which she touches for the purpose of receiving goods or passengers.

Such pass shall be valid throughout British India, or for such Ports only as may be specified therein.

Any such general pass may be revoked by order of the Chief Customs-Authority by whom the grant thereof was authorized, by notice in writing under the hand of such Authority, delivered to the Master or to the owner of such steam-vessel, or to any of the crew on board.

165. The Chief Customs-Authority may direct that the Master of any coasting vessel which is square-rigged or propelled by steam shall keep, or cause to be kept, a cargo-book, stating the name of the Master, the vessel, the Port to which she belongs, and the Port to which on each voyage she is bound.

At every Port of lading such Master shall enter, or cause to be entered, in such book the name of such Port, and an account of all goods there taken on board of such vessel, with a description of the packages, and the quantities and descriptions of the goods contained therein or stowed loose, and the names of the respective shippers and consignees, in so far as such particulars are known to him.

At every Port of discharge of any such goods such Master shall enter, or cause to be entered, in such book the respective days on which such goods or any of them are delivered out of such vessel.

The respective times of departure from every Port of lading, and of arrival at every Port of discharge, shall in like manner be duly entered.

Every such Master shall, on demand, produce his cargo-book for the inspection of any officer of Customs, and such officer shall be at liberty to make any note or remark therein.

The Chief Customs-Authority may, in the case of any vessel the Master whereof has been directed to keep a cargo-book under this section, dispense with the manifest required under sections 158, 159 and 160.

166. Any duly empowered officer of Customs may go on board of any coasting vessel in any Port or place in British India, and may at any period of a voyage search any such vessel and examine all goods on board, and all goods then lading or unlading, and may demand the production of any document, which ought to be on board of any such vessel.

The Customs-collector may further require that any such document belonging to any coasting vessel then in Port shall be brought to him for inspection.

CHAPTER XVI.

OFFENCES AND PENALTIES.

167. The offences mentioned in the first column of the following schedule shall be punishable to the extent mentioned in the third column of the same with reference to such offences respectively :

Offences.	Section of this Act to which offence has reference.	Penalties.
1.—Contravening any rule made under this Act.	General	Penalty not exceeding five hundred rupees.
2.—If any goods be landed or shipped, or if an attempt be made to land or ship any goods, or if any goods be brought into any bay, river, creek or arm of the sea, for the purpose of being landed or shipped, at any port or place which, at the date of such landing, shipment, attempt or bringing, is not a Port for the landing and shipment of goods,	11	such goods shall be liable to confiscation.
3.—If any person ship or land goods, or aid in the shipment or landing of goods, or knowingly keep or conceal, or knowingly permit or procure to be kept or concealed, any goods shipped or landed, or intended to be shipped or landed, contrary to the provisions of this Act ; or if any person be found to have been on board of any vessel liable to confiscation on account of the commission of an offence under No. 2 of this section, while such vessel is within any bay, river, creek or arm of the sea which is not a port for the landing or shipment of goods,	General 11	such person shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding one thousand rupees.
4.—If any vessel which has been within the limits of any Port in British India with cargo on board, be afterwards found in any port, bay, river, creek or arm of the sea in British India, light or in ballast, and if the Master be unable to give a due account of the Customs-port where such vessel lawfully discharged her cargo,	11	such vessel shall be liable to confiscation.
5.—If any goods are put, without the authority of the proper officer of Customs, on board of any tug-steamer or pilot-vessel from any sea-going vessel inward-bound ; or if any goods are put, without such authority, out of any tug-steamer or pilot-vessel for the purpose of being put on board of any such vessel outward-bound ; or if any goods on which drawback has been granted are put, without such authority, on board of any tug-steamer or pilot-vessel for the purpose of being re-landed,	11	such goods shall be liable to confiscation, and the Master of every such tug-steamer or pilot-vessel shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding one thousand rupees.

OFFENCES AND PENALTIES—contd.

Offences.	Section of this Act to which offence has reference.	Penalties.
6.—If any vessel arriving at, or departing from, any Customs-port fails, when so required under section 17, to bring-to at any such station as has been appointed by the Chief Customs-Authority for the boarding or landing of an officer of Customs,	17	the Master of such vessel shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding one thousand rupees.
7.—If any vessel arriving at any Customs-port, after having come to its proper place of mooring or unloading, removes from such place, except with the authority of the Conservator, obtained in accordance with the provisions of the Indian Ports Act, 1875, or other lawful authority, to some other place of mooring or unloading, or if any vessel not brought into Port by a Pilot be not anchored or moored in accordance with any direction of the Chief Customs-Authority under section 17,	17	the Master of such vessel shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five hundred rupees, and the vessel, if not entered, shall not be allowed to enter until the penalty is paid.
8.—If any goods, the importation or exportation of which is for the time being prohibited or restricted by or under Chapter IV of this Act, be imported into or exported from British India contrary to such prohibition or restriction; or if any attempt be made so to import or export any such goods; or if any such goods be found in any package produced to any officer of Customs as containing no such goods; or if any such goods, or any dutiable goods be found either before or after landing or shipment to have been concealed in any manner on board of any vessel within the limits of any port in British India; or if any goods, the exportation of which is prohibited or restricted as aforesaid, be brought to any wharf in order to be put on board of any vessel for exportation contrary to such prohibition or restriction,	18 & 19	such goods shall be liable to confiscation; and any person concerned in any such offence shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding three times the value of the goods, or not exceeding one thousand rupees.
9.—If upon an application to pass any goods through the Custom-house, any person not being the owner of such goods, and not having proper and sufficient authority from the owner, subscribes or attests any document relating to any goods on behalf of such owner,	General	such person shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding one thousand rupees.

OFFENCES AND PENALTIES—contd.

Offences.	Section of this Act to which offence has reference.	Penalties.
10.—If any goods, on the entry of which for re-export drawback has been paid, are not duly exported or are unshipped or relanded at any Customs-port (not having been duly relanded or discharged under the provisions of this Act).	42 & 43	such goods, together with any vessel used in so unshipping or relanding them, shall be liable to confiscation ; and the Master of the vessel from which such goods are so unshipped or relanded, and any person by whom or by whose orders or means such goods are so unshipped or relanded, or who aids or is concerned in such unshipping or relanding, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding three times the value of such goods, or not exceeding one thousand rupees.
11.—If any wine, spirit, provisions or stores be not laden on board of the vessel on board of which they should under the provisions of section 45, 46, 47 or 48 be laden, or be unladen from such vessel without the permission of the proper officer of Customs,	44 to 48	such wine, spirit, provisions or stores shall be liable to confiscation.
12.—If any goods be entered for drawback, which are of less value than the amount of the drawback claimed,	50	such goods shall be liable to confiscation.
13.—If, in any river, or Port wherein a place has been fixed under section 53 by the Local Government, any vessel arriving passes beyond such place, before delivery of a manifest to the pilot, officer of Customs, or other person duly authorized to receive the same, or	53	the Master of such vessel shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding one thousand rupees.
14.—If the Master of any vessel arriving which remains outside or below any place so fixed wilfully omits, for the space of twenty-four hours after anchoring, to deliver a manifest as required by this Act.		such Master shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding one thousand rupees.
15.—If, after any vessel arriving has entered any Customs-port in which a place has not been fixed under section 53, the Master of such vessel wilfully omits, for the space of twenty-four hours after anchoring, to deliver a manifest as required by this Act.	54	ditto ditto.
16.—If any manifest delivered under section 53, 54, 60, 63 or 66 is not signed by the person delivering the same and is not in the form or does not contain the particulars required by section 55 or 63, as the case may be, in so far as such particulars are applicable to the ship, cargo and voyage ; or if any manifest so delivered does not contain a specification true to the best of such person's knowledge of all goods imported or to be exported in such vessel,	55 & 63	the person delivering such manifest shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding one thousand rupees.

OFFENCES AND PENALTIES—contd.

Offences.	Section of this Act to which offence has reference.	Penalties.
17.—If any goods entered in the import manifest of a vessel are not found on board of the vessel; or if the quantity so found is short, and if such deficiency is not accounted for to the satisfaction of the officer in charge of the Custom-house;	55 & 64	the Master of such vessel shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding twice the amount of duty chargeable on the missing or deficient goods, if they be dutiable and the duty leviable thereon can be ascertained, or otherwise to a penalty not exceeding five hundred rupees for every missing or deficient package or separate article.
18.—If any person required by this Act to receive a manifest from any Master of a vessel, refuses so to do, or fails to countersign the same or to enter thereon the particulars referred to in section 56,	53, 54 & 56	such person shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five hundred rupees.
19.—If bulk be broken in any vessel previous to the grant by the Customs-collector, of an order for entry inwards or a special pass permitting bulk to be broken,	57 & 59	the Master of such vessel shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding one thousand rupees.
20.—If any bill of lading or copy required under section 58 is false and the Master is unable to satisfy the Customs-collector that he was not aware of the fact; or if any such bill or copy has been altered with fraudulent intent; or if the goods mentioned in any such bill or copy have not been bona fide shipped as shewn therein; or if any such bill of lading or any bill of lading of which a copy is delivered, has not been made previously to the departure of the vessel from the place where the goods referred to in such bill of lading were shipped; or if any part of the cargo has been staved, destroyed or thrown overboard; or if any package has been opened, and such part of the cargo or such package be not accounted for to the satisfaction of the Customs-collector,	58	the Master of the vessel shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding one thousand rupees.
21.—If any Master of a vessel attempts to depart without a port-clearance,	62	such Master shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five hundred rupees.
22.—If any vessel actually departs without a port-clearance,	62	the Master of such vessel shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding one thousand rupees.
23.—If any pilot takes charge of any vessel proceeding to sea, notwithstanding that the Master of such vessel does not produce a port-clearance,	62	such pilot, on conviction before a Magistrate, shall be liable to fine not exceeding one thousand rupees.
24.—If any Master of a vessel refuses to receive on board an officer of Customs deputed under section 67,	68	such Master shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five hundred rupees for each day during which such officer is not received on board; and the vessel

166. The confiscation of any goods under this Act includes any package in which they are found, and all the other contents thereof.

Every vessel, cart or other means of conveyance, and every horse or other animal used in the removal of any goods liable to confiscation under this Act shall in like manner be liable to confiscation.

The confiscation of any vessel under this Act includes her tackle, apparel and furniture.

CHAPTER XVII.

PROCEDURE RELATING TO OFFENCES, APPEALS, &c.

169. Any officer of Customs duly employed in the prevention of smuggling may search any person on board of any vessel in any Port in British India, or any person who has landed from any vessel :

Provided that such officer has reason to believe that such person has dutiable or prohibited goods secreted about his person.

170. When any officer of Customs is about to search any person under the provisions of section 169, such person may require the said officer to take him, before the nearest Magistrate or Customs-collector.

If such requisition be made, the officer of Customs may detain the person making it until he can bring him before the nearest Magistrate or Customs-collector.

The Magistrate or Customs-collector before whom any person is so brought shall, if he see no reasonable ground for search, forthwith discharge such person; but if otherwise, shall direct that the search be made.

A female shall not be searched by any but a female.

171. Any duly empowered officer of Customs or other person duly employed for the prevention of smuggling, may stop and search for smuggled goods any vessel, cart or other means of conveyance; provided that he has reason to believe that smuggled goods are contained therein:

172. Any Magistrate may, on application by a Customs-collector, stating his belief that dutiable or prohibited goods are secreted in any place within the local limits of the jurisdiction of such Magistrate, issue a warrant to search for such goods.

Such warrant shall be executed in the same way, and shall have the same effect, as a search-warrant issued under the law relating to Criminal Procedure.

173. Any person against whom a reasonable suspicion exists that he has been guilty of an offence under this Act, may be arrested in any place, either upon land or water, by any officer of Customs or other person duly employed for the prevention of smuggling.

174. Every person arrested on the ground that he has been guilty of an offence under this Act, shall forthwith be taken before the nearest Magistrate or Customs-collector.

175. When any such person is taken before a Magistrate, such Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, either commit him to gaol or order him to be kept in the custody of the Police for such time as is necessary to enable such Magistrate to communicate with the proper officers of Customs:

Provided that any person so arrested, committed, or kept, shall be released on giving security to the satisfaction of the Magistrate to appear at such time and place as such Magistrate appoints in this behalf.

176. If any person liable to be arrested under this Act, is not arrested at the time of committing the offence for which he is so liable, or after arrest, makes his escape, he may at any time afterwards be arrested and taken before a Magistrate, to be dealt with as if he had been arrested at the time of committing such offence.

177. When any person employed on the crew of any of the ships of Her Majesty's Navy, Indian Marine or Marine Survey is arrested under this Act, the arresting officer shall forthwith give notice thereof to the commanding officer of the ship, who shall thereupon place such person in security on board of such ship, until the arresting officer has obtained a warrant from a Magistrate for bringing up such person to be dealt with according to law.

The Magistrate shall grant such warrant upon complaint made to him by the arresting officer, stating the offence for which the person is detained.

178. Any thing liable to confiscation under this Act may be seized in any place, either upon land or water, by any officer of Customs or other person duly employed for the prevention of smuggling.

179. All things seized on the ground that they are liable to confiscation under this Act shall, as soon as conveniently may be, be delivered into the care of any Customs officer authorized to receive the same.

If there be no such officer at hand, all such things shall be carried to and deposited at the Custom-house nearest to the place of seizure.

If there be no Custom-house within a convenient distance, such things shall be deposited at the nearest place appointed by the Chief Customs-Authority for the deposit of things so seized.

180. When any things liable to confiscation under this Act are seized by any Police-officer on suspicion that they have been stolen, he may carry them to any Police-station or Court at which a complaint connected with the stealing or receiving of such things has been made, or an enquiry connected with such stealing or receiving is in progress, and there detain such things until the dismissal of such complaint or the conclusion of such enquiry or of any trial thence resulting.

In every such case the Police-officer seizing the things shall send written notice of their seizure and detention to the nearest Custom-house; and immediately after the dismissal of the complaint or the conclusion of the enquiry or trial, he shall cause such things to be conveyed to, and deposited at, the nearest Custom-house, to be there proceeded against according to law.

181. When any thing is or seized, or any person is arrested, under this Act, the officer or other person making such seizure or arrest shall, on demand of the person in charge of the thing so seized, or of the person so arrested, give him a statement in writing of the reason for such seizure or arrest.

182. In every case except the cases mentioned in section 167, Nos. 26, 72 and 74 to 76 both inclusive, in which, under this Act, any thing is liable to confiscation or to increased rates of duty; or any person is liable to a penalty, such confiscation, increased rate of duty or penalty may be adjudged—

(a) without limit, by a Deputy Commissioner or Deputy Collector of Customs, or a Customs-collector;

(b) up to confiscation of goods not exceeding two hundred and fifty rupees in value, and imposition of penalty or increased duty not exceeding one-hundred rupees by an Assistant Commissioner or Assistant Collector of Customs;

(c) up to confiscation of goods not exceeding fifty rupees in value, and imposition of penalty or increased duty not exceeding ten rupees, by such other subordinate officers of Customs as the Local Government may, from time to time, empower in that behalf in virtue of their office:

Provided that the Local Government may, in the case of any officer, performing the duties of a Customs-collector, limit his powers to those indicated in clause (b) or in clause (c) of this section, and may confer on any officer by name, or in virtue of his office, the powers indicated in clauses (a), (b) or (c) of this section.

183. Whenever confiscation is authorized by this Act, the officer adjudging it shall give the owner of the goods an option to pay in lieu of confiscation such fine as the officer thinks fit.

184. When anything is confiscated under section 182, such thing shall thereupon vest in Her Majesty.

The officer adjudging confiscation shall take and hold possession of the thing confiscated, and every officer of Police, on the requisition of such officer, shall assist him in taking and holding such possession.

185. If any vessel actually departs without a port-clearance, or after failing to bring-to when required at any station appointed under section 17, the penalty to which the Master of such vessel is liable may be adjudged by the Chief Customs Officer of any Customs-port to which such vessel proceeds, or in which she is, and in the case of Aden, by such officer as the Governor of Bombay in Council appoints in this behalf.

A certificate of such departure or failure to bring-to when required, purporting to be signed by the Chief Customs Officer of the Port from which the vessel is stated to have so departed, shall be prima facie proof of the fact so certified.

186. The award of any confiscation, penalty or increased rate of duty under this Act by an officer of Customs shall not prevent the infliction of any punishment to which the person affected thereby is liable under any other law.

187. All offences against this Act, other than those cognizable under section 182 by officers of Customs may be tried summarily by a Magistrate.

188. Any person deeming himself aggrieved by any decision or order passed by an officer of customs under this Act may, within three months from the date of such decision or order, appeal therefrom to the Chief Customs-Authority, or, in such cases as the Local Government directs, to any officer of Customs not inferior in rank to a Customs Collector and empowered in that behalf by name or in virtue of his office by the Local Government.

Such authority or officer may thereupon make such further enquiry and pass such order as he thinks fit, confirming, altering or annulling the decision or order appealed against :

Provided that no such order in appeal shall have the effect of subjecting any person to any greater confiscation, penalty or rate of duty than has been adjudged against him in the original decision or order.

Every order passed in appeal under this section shall, subject to the power of revision conferred by section 191, be final.

189. Where the decision or order appealed against relates to any duty or penalty leviable in respect of any goods, the owner of such goods, if desirous of appealing against such decision or order, shall, pending the appeal, deposit in the hands of the Customs-collector at the Port where the dispute arises the amount demanded by the officer passing such decision or order.

When delivery of such goods to the owner thereof is withheld merely by reason of such amount not being paid, the Customs-collector shall upon such deposit being made cause such goods to be delivered to such owner.

If upon any such appeal it is decided that the whole or any portion of such amount was not leviable in respect of such goods, the Customs-collector shall return such amount or portion (as the case may be) to the owner of such goods on demand by such owner.

190. If, upon consideration of the circumstances under which any penalty, increased rate of duty or confiscation has been adjudged under this Act by an officer of Customs, the Chief Customs-Authority is of opinion that such penalty, increased rate or confiscation ought to be remitted in whole or in part, or commuted, such Authority may remit the same or any portion thereof, or may, with the consent of the owner of any goods ordered to be confiscated, commute the order of confiscation to a penalty not exceeding the value of such goods.

191. The Local Government may on the application of any person aggrieved by any decision or order passed under this Act by any officer of Customs or Chief Customs-Authority, and from which no appeal lies, reverse or modify such decision or order.

192. When any fine, penalty or increased rate of duty is leviable under this Act, the goods in respect of which such fine, penalty or rate is leviable shall not be removed by the owner until such fine, penalty or rate is paid.

If any person has become liable to any such fine, penalty or rate in respect of any goods, the Customs-collector may detain any other goods belonging to such person passing through the custom-house until such fine, penalty or rate is paid.

193. When a penalty or increased rate of duty is adjudged against any person under this Act by any officer of Customs, such officer, if such penalty or increased rate be not paid, may levy the same by sale of any goods of the said person which may be in his charge, or in the charge of any other officer of Customs.

When an officer of Customs who has adjudged a penalty or increased rate of duty against any person under this Act is unable to realize the unpaid amount thereof from such goods, such officer may notify in writing to any Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such person or any goods belonging to him may be, the name and residence of the said person and the amount of penalty or increased rate of duty unrecovered; and such Magistrate shall thereupon proceed to enforce payment of the said amount in like manner as if such penalty or increased rate had been a fine inflicted by himself.

CHAPTER XVIII.

MISCELLANEOUS.

194. Any officer of Customs may open any package, and examine any goods brought by sea to, or shipped or brought for shipment at, any Customs-port.

195. The Customs-collector may, on the entry or clearance of any goods, or at any time while such goods are being passed through the Custom-house, take samples of such goods, for examination or for ascertaining the value thereof on which duties are payable, or for any other necessary purpose.

Every such sample shall, if practicable, be at the option of the owner either restored to him, or sold and the proceeds accounted for to him.

196. The unshipping, carrying, shipping and landing of all goods, and the bringing of them to the proper place for examination or weighing, and the putting of them into and out of the scales, and the opening, unpacking, bulking, sorting, lotting, marking and numbering of goods, operations are necessary or permitted, and the removing of goods to, and the placing of them in, the proper place of deposit, shall be performed by or at the expense of the owner of such goods.

197. No owner of goods shall be entitled to claim from any officer of Customs compensation for any loss or damage occurring to such goods at any time while they remain or are lawfully detained in any Custom-house, or on any Custom-house wharf, or under charge of any officer of Customs, unless it be proved that such loss or damage was occasioned by the neglect or wilful act of such officer of Customs.

198. No proceeding other than a suit shall be commenced against any person for anything purporting to be done in pursuance of this Act without giving to such person a month's previous notice in writing of the intended proceeding, and of the cause thereof; or after the expiration of three months from the limitation of such cause.

199. The Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time fix the period after the expiration of which goods left on any Custom-house wharf, or other authorized landing place or part of the Custom-house premises, shall be subject to payment of fees, and the amount of such fees.

200. A duplicate of any certificate, manifest, bill or other Custom-house document may, on payment of a fee not exceeding ten rupees, be furnished, at the discretion of the Customs-collector, to any person applying for the same, if the Customs-collector is satisfied that no fraud has been committed or is intended by the applicant.

201. Except in the cases provided for by sections 36, 55, 63 and 94, the Customs-collector may in his discretion, upon payment of one rupee, authorize any document, after it has been entered and recorded in the Custom-house, to be amended.

202. No person authorized to act as an agent for the transaction of any business relating to the entrance or clearance of any vessel, or the import or export of goods or baggage, shall so act in any Custom-house, unless such authorization is approved by the Customs-collector.

Such officer may require any person so authorized to give a bond with sufficient security, in any sum not exceeding five thousand rupees, for his faithful behaviour as regards the Custom-house regulations and officers.

Such officer may, in case of misbehaviour of the person so authorized, suspend or withdraw such approval, but an appeal against every such suspension or withdrawal shall lie to the Chief Customs-Authority, whose decision thereon shall be final.

Every appeal under this section shall be made within one month of the suspension or withdrawal.

203. When any person applies to any officer of Customs for permission to transact any specified business with him on behalf of any other person, such officer may require the applicant to produce a written authority from the person on whose behalf such business is to be transacted, and in default of the production of such authority may refuse such

The clerk, servant, or agent, of any person or mercantile firm, may transact business generally at the Custom-house on behalf of such person or firm: Provided that the Customs-collector may refuse to recognize such clerk, servant or agent unless such person or a member of such firm identifies such clerk, servant or agent to the Customs-collector as empowered to transact such business, and deposits with the Customs-collector an authority in writing duly signed, authorizing such clerk, servant or agent to transact such business on behalf of such person or firm.

204. All rules made under this Act shall be notified in the official Gazette, and shall thereupon have the force of law.

All such rules for the time being in force shall be collected, arranged and published at intervals not exceeding two years, and shall be sold to the public at a reasonable price.

205. Any notification made by any authority under powers conferred by this Act, may be cancelled in like manner by the same authority.

206. If in any case relating to the removal of goods from a warehouse without payment of duty, the person offending be an officer of Customs not acting in execution of his duty, and be prosecuted to conviction by the owner of such goods, no duty shall be payable in respect of such goods. For any damage so occasioned by such officer, the Customs-collector shall, with the sanction of the Chief Customs-Authority, make due compensation to such owner.

207. Nothing in this Act shall affect any law for the time being in force relating to the Commissioners for making improvements in the Port of Calcutta or the Trustees of the Port of Bombay respectively.

[Third Publication.]

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 14th March 1878, and is, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons, hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT No. IX OF 1878.

An Act for the better Control of Publications in Oriental languages.

WHEREAS certain publications in oriental languages printed or circulated in British India have of late contained matter likely to excite disaffection to the Government established by law in British India, or antipathy between persons of different races, castes, religions, or sects in British India, or have been used as means of intimidation or extortion :

And whereas such publications are read by and disseminated amongst large numbers of ignorant and unintelligent persons, and are thus likely to have an influence which they otherwise would not possess ; and whereas it is accordingly necessary for the maintenance of the public tranquillity and for the security of Her Majesty's subjects and others to confer on the executive Government power to control the printing and circulation of such publications : It is hereby enacted as follows :—

1. This section and sections eleven to sixteen both inclusive apply to the whole of British India ; the other sections of this Act apply only to those parts of British India to which they may from time to time be extended by the Governor General in Council by a notification in the Gazette of India.

Interpretation clause.

2. In this Act—

'Newspaper' means any periodical work containing public news, or comments on public news, printed wholly or partially in any oriental language, and includes two or more copies of a newspaper bearing the same name, whether published on the same day or on different days, and also includes any series of newspapers, whether printed on one day or different days, or with one name or with different names ; and

'Print,' 'printed' and 'printer' apply not only to printing, but also to lithography, engraving and photography.

3. Any Magistrate of a district or Commissioner of Police in a Presidency town, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any newspaper is printed or published, may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government and subject to the provisions of section five, call upon the printer and publisher of such newspaper to enter into a joint and several bond, or when the printer and publisher of such newspaper are the same person, call upon such person to enter into a bond, binding themselves or himself, as the case may be, in such sum as the Local Government thinks fit, not to—

(a) print or publish in such newspaper any words, signs, or visible representations, likely to excite disaffection to the Government established by law in British India or antipathy between any persons of different races, castes, religions, or sects in British India ; or

(b) use or attempt to use such newspaper

for the purpose of putting any person in fear or causing annoyance to him and thereby inducing him to deliver to any person any property or valuable security, or anything signed or sealed which may be converted into a valuable security, or to give any gratification to any person, or for the purpose of holding out any threat of injury to a public servant, or to any person in whom they or he believe or believes that public servant to be interested, and thereby inducing that public servant to do any act, or to forbear or delay to do any act, connected with the exercise of his public functions.

EXPLANATION.—"Valuable security," "gratification" and "public servant" are used in this section in the senses in which they are respectively used in the Indian Penal Code.

4. When any bond is executed under section three, the said Magistrate or Commissioner may further require the obligor or obligors of the same to deposit the amount thereof in money or the equivalent thereof in securities of the Government of India ; and the money or securities so deposited shall, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained, remain so deposited until fifteen days after the person or persons depositing the same has or have made and subscribed a declaration under Act No. XXV of 1867, section eight.

When such person or persons has or have subscribed such a declaration, and fifteen days have elapsed from the date of subscribing the same, he or they may apply to the said Magistrate or Commissioner for the restoration of the said money or securities, and thereupon such money or securities shall, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained, be restored to such person or persons.

5. When any publisher or printer is called upon by a Magistrate or Commissioner of Police to execute a bond under this Act in respect of any newspaper, the publisher of such newspaper may deliver to such Magistrate or Commissioner an undertaking in writing to the effect that no words, signs, or visible representations shall, during the year next following the date of such undertaking, be printed or published in such newspaper which have not previously been submitted to such officer as the Local Government may appoint in this behalf, by name or in virtue of his office, or which on being so submitted have been objected to by such officer.

When such undertaking has been so delivered, no such bond or deposit shall be required from the publisher or printer of such newspaper during the said year.

6. Whenever it appears to the Local Government that any newspaper printed or published in the territories under its administration, contains any words, signs, or visible representations of the nature described in section three, clause (a), or that any such newspaper has been used or attempted to be used for any purpose described in the same section, clause (b), such Local Government may cause a notice in the form in the schedule hereto annexed, or to the like effect, to be published in the local official Gazette.

7. A true copy of such notice shall be fixed on some conspicuous part of the premises described in the declaration made in respect of the newspaper under the said Act No. XXV. of 1867, section five, and the copy so fixed shall be deemed to have been duly served on the printer and publisher of such paper.

8. If after the publication of such notice and the service thereof, the newspaper in respect of which it has been issued contains any words, signs, or visible representations of the nature described in section three, clause (a), or is used, or attempted to be used, for any purpose described in the same section, clause (b), all printing presses, engines, machinery, types, lithographic stones, paper, and other implements, utensils, plant, and materials used or employed, or intended to be used or employed, in or for the purpose of printing or publishing such newspaper, or found in or about any premises where such newspaper is printed or published, and all copies of such newspaper wherever found, and

any money or securities which the printer or publisher of such newspaper may have deposited under the provisions of section three, shall be liable to be forfeited to Her Majesty.

Provided that the publisher of any newspaper may, on the publication of a notice in respect thereof under section six, and before anything has become liable to forfeiture under this section in respect of such newspaper, deliver to the Magistrate of the District or to the Commissioner of Police in a Presidency town, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such newspaper is published, an undertaking in writing of the nature specified in section five, and, if such Magistrate or Commissioner accepts such undertaking, nothing shall become liable to forfeiture under this section between the date on which such undertaking is so accepted and the end of the period for which it is given.

9. Whenever it appears to the Local Government that any money or security deposited under this Act in respect of any newspaper is liable to be forfeited under section eight, such Local Government may, by a notification in the local official Gazette, declare such money or security to be forfeited;

And whenever it appears to the Local Government that any implements, utensils, plant or materials, used or employed or intended to be used or employed in or for the purpose of printing or publishing any newspaper, or which is or are in or about any premises where such newspaper is printed or published, or any copies of any newspaper, is or are liable to be forfeited under that section,

the Local Government may declare such implements, utensils, plant, materials or copies to be forfeited and may by warrant issued by its authority under the hand of any Magistrate empower any person to seize and take away such implements, utensils, plant, materials, and copies wherever found, and to enter upon any premises

(a) where the newspaper specified in such warrant is printed or published, or

(b) where any such implements, utensils, plant, or materials may be or may be reasonably suspected to be, or

(c) where any copy of such newspaper is sold, distributed, published, or publicly exhibited, or reasonably suspected to be sold, distributed, published, or publicly exhibited, or kept for sale, distribution, publication, or public exhibition, or reasonably suspected to be so kept,

and search for such implements, utensils, plant, materials, and copies.

Every warrant issued under this section, so far as relates to a search, shall be executed in manner provided for the execution of search-warrants under the law relating to criminal procedure for the time being in force.

10. When any book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet, or other document printed wholly or partially in any oriental language in British India contains any words, signs, or visible representations which are of the nature described in section three, clause (a),

or when any such book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet, or other document has been used or attempted to be used for any purpose described in the same section, clause (b), all printing presses, engines, machinery, types, lithographic stones, paper, and other implements, utensils, plant, and materials used or employed in or for the purpose of printing or publishing such book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet, or other document, or found in or about any premises where the same is printed or published, and all copies of such book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet or other document, shall be liable to be forfeited to Her Majesty.

Whenever it appears to the Local Government that anything is liable to be forfeited under this section, the Local Government may declare such thing to be forfeited and may direct any Magistrate to issue a warrant in respect of the same, and thereupon such thing may be searched for, seized, and taken away in manner provided by section nine.

The Local Government may, upon good cause shown, cancel any forfeiture under this section.

11. When any newspaper printed elsewhere than in British India contains any words, signs, or visible representations of the nature described in section three, clause (a), or is used or attempted to be used for any purpose described in the same section, clause (b), all copies of such newspaper, brought into British India, shall be liable to be forfeited to Her Majesty.

Copies of newspaper printed elsewhere, and brought into British India, liable to forfeiture in certain cases.

12. Whenever it appears to the Local Government that any copies of any newspaper in any of the territories under its administration are liable to be forfeited under section eleven, such Local Government may declare all copies of such newspaper wherever found to be forfeited and may by warrant issued by its authority under the hand of any Magistrate, empower any person to seize and take away all copies of such newspaper wherever found, and to enter upon any premises where any copy of such newspaper is sold, distributed, published, or publicly exhibited, or reasonably suspected to be sold, distributed, published, or publicly exhibited, or kept for sale, distribution, publication, or public exhibition, or reasonably suspected to be so kept ; and search for all copies of such newspaper.

Every warrant issued under this section shall, so far as relates to a search, be executed in manner provided for the execution of search-warrants under the law relating to criminal procedure for the time being in force.

13. Any person feeling aggrieved by the issue of any notification under section nine or by any declaration made or anything done in the execution of a warrant issued under that section, or under section ten or section twelve, may, within three months from the date of the notification or declaration or the doing of the thing complained of (as the case may be), appeal to the Governor General in Council; and the Governor General in Council shall take such appeal into consideration, and the order passed by him thereon shall be final and conclusive.

14. The Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct that any newspapers printed at any place beyond the limits of British India, or any books, pamphlets, placards, broadsheets, or other documents printed wholly or partially in any oriental language at any such place, shall not be brought into, or circulated, distributed, or publicly exhibited, or sold, or kept for circulation, distribution, public exhibition, or sale, in British India.

Whoever, in contravention of any direction under this section, brings any such newspaper, book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet, or other document into British India, or circulates, distributes, publishes, exhibits, or sells the same, or keeps the same for circulation, distribution, exhibition, or sale, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both ;

and all copies of such newspaper, book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet, or other document found in British India shall be forfeited to Her Majesty.

Whenever it appears to any Magistrate of a district or to any Commissioner of Police in a Presidencym town that anything within the local limits of his jurisdiction is forfeited under this section, he may issue a warrant to search for and seize the same, and such warrant shall be executed in manner provided for the execution of search-warrants under the law relating to criminal procedure for the time being in force.

15. When any declaration has been made under section nine, section ten, or section twelve, in respect of any newspaper, book, pamphlet, placard, broadsheet, or other document, or any notification has been issued in respect of the same under section fourteen, any officer of the Postal Department empowered in this behalf by the Governor General in Council, by name or in virtue of his office, may search or cause search to be made for any copies of the same in the custody of that Department, and shall deliver all such copies found to such officer as the Governor General in Council may appoint in this behalf by name or in virtue of his office.

16. Every notification and declaration of forfeiture purporting to be issued or made under this Act shall, as against all persons, be conclusive evidence that the forfeiture therein referred to has taken place; and no proceeding purporting to be taken under this Act, or in execution of a warrant issued under this Act, shall be called in question by any Court of civil or criminal jurisdiction; and no Civil or Criminal proceeding shall be instituted against any person for anything purporting to be done under this Act or in execution of any such warrant, or for the recovery of any property purporting to be seized under this Act.

17. Any publisher or printer of a newspaper required to execute a bond or make a deposit under section three or section four, and publishing or printing such newspaper without having complied with such requisition, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

18. When any publisher of a newspaper has given an undertaking under section five or section eight, and during the period for which such undertaking is given, any words, signs, or visible representations which have not been submitted to the officer appointed under section five, or which on being so submitted have been objected to by him, are printed or published in such newspaper, such publisher and the printer of such newspaper, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

19. Any portion of this Act which has been extended to any part of British India under section one shall cease to be in force in such part whenever the Governor General in Council, by notification in the Gazette of India, so directs, but may be again extended to such part by a like notification.

20. Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to prevent any person from being prosecuted under any other law for any act or omission which constitutes an offence against this Act.

Power of postal authorities to seize newspapers, books, &c.

Jurisdiction barred.

Penalty for printing or publishing without executing bond or making deposit.

Penalty for breach of an undertaking under section 5 or section 8.

Power to remove territory from operation of Act, and again extend Act.

Operation of other laws not barred.

SCHEDULE.

FORM OF NOTICE UNDER SECTION 6.

WHEREAS a certain newspaper (state name of newspaper) contains words, signs, or visible representations (as the case may be) of the nature described in section 3, clause (a), of Act No. IX of 1878 [or is used for a purpose mentioned in section 3 of Act No. IX of 1878, clause (b), or Whereas an attempt has been made to use a certain newspaper (state name of newspaper) for a purpose, &c.]

This is to give notice to all whom it may concern, and to give all such persons warning, according to the provisions of section 6 of the said Act No. IX of 1878.

This day of 187 .

A. B.
Secretary to { the Government of the Chief Commissioner of

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

1. The main object of this Bill is to place newspapers which are published in the vernacular languages of India under better control, and to furnish the Government with more effective means than are provided by the existing law, of punishing and repressing seditious writings which are calculated to produce disaffection towards the Government in the minds of the ignorant and unenlightened masses. Another object is to prevent unscrupulous native editors using their papers as a means of intimidation or extortion.

2. As regards the latter of these objects, it is enough to state that the Government is informed on reliable authority that certain vernacular papers have from time to time been used as a means of intimidating, and extorting money from, our feudatories and native employés. As regards the former and more important object, a fuller statement of the reasons which have led to the introduction of this Bill seems desirable.

3. That a section of the vernacular Press has of late years assumed an attitude of fixed hostility to the Government; that it does not confine itself to criticising particular measures or the acts of individual officers on their merits, but attacks the very existence of British rule in India; and that the evil has been steadily growing and has now attained a magnitude which calls for the application of some strong means of repression, are facts patent to all who read the native papers.

4. The necessity for immediate action has been pressed on the Government of India from many quarters; and those most competent to form an opinion on such a point have advised that the existing law does not furnish a sufficient remedy, and that fresh legislation is accordingly necessary.

5. The only question has been as to the form which such legislation should assume, or, to speak more precisely, whether the object in view could be attained by any mere amendment of the general criminal law, or whether some measure of a special nature is required.

The Government of India have come to the conclusion that a special measure is necessary, and they have been led to this conclusion chiefly by two considerations:

6. In the first place, the object in view is simply to repress an evil which is altogether of a special and limited nature, and for the existence of which a small and strictly defined class of persons is answerable. It is not in any way necessary for that object to expand the general law relating to State offences, or to render that law more stringent. To do so would be to inflict an unmerited hardship on a large number of Her Majesty's subjects.

7. Secondly (and this seems to put the necessity of a special law, as distinguished from any mere amendment of the general law, beyond a doubt), the ordinary criminal law confines itself to imposing penalties for offences already committed, whereas the particular offence to be dealt with here is of such a nature that it is not enough that it should be punished when committed. Its commission must be prevented, and this can be done only under a special procedure devised expressly for that purpose.

8. The Bill now introduced is restricted in its operation to publications in oriental languages. Its chief provisions will take effect only in those parts of British India to which they may be specially extended by the Governor General in Council, and will cease to have effect in those parts whenever the Governor General in Council so directs.

9. The system of check it establishes in the case of newspapers in oriental languages published in British India is as follows:

First.—The Magistrate may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, require the printer or publisher of any such newspaper to enter into a bond binding himself not to print or publish in such newspaper anything likely to excite feelings of disaffection to the Government or antipathy between persons of different races, castes, religions or sects, and not to use such paper for purposes of extortion. The Magistrate may further require the amount of this bond to be deposited in money or securities.

Secondly.—If any newspaper (whether a bond has been taken in respect of it or not) at any time contains any matter of the description just mentioned, or is used for purposes of extortion, the Local Government may warn such newspaper by a notification in the Gazette, and if, in spite of such warning, the offence is repeated, the Local Government may then issue its warrant to seize the plant, &c., of such newspaper, and when any deposit has been made may declare such deposit forfeited.

Thirdly.—As the provisions regarding the deposit of security and the forfeiture of the deposit would, perhaps, be found to press unduly on some of the less wealthy newspaper proprietors, clauses have been inserted enabling the publisher of a newspaper to take his paper out of the operation of this portion of the Act for such time as he pleases by undertaking to submit his proofs to an officer appointed by the Government before publication, and to publish nothing which such officer objects to.

Any publisher may, if he chooses, do this at the time when he is called upon to deposit security; and if he does so, no security can be demanded from him.

Again, if he does not choose to avail himself of this provision at that stage, he may subsequently, in the event of a warning being issued against him, offer such an undertaking, and if the Magistrate accepts it, the proceedings are at an end.

• 10. As regards books, pamphlets, &c., printed in British India, containing matter of the description above referred to or used for purposes of extortion, the Bill gives the Local Government a power to seize them and the presses at which they are printed.

11. Newspapers and books published out of British India but circulated in British India remain. And in regard to them the Bill provides—first, that if they contain matter of the nature already referred to or are used for purposes of extortion, the Local Government may seize them; and secondly, that the Governor General in Council may prohibit their importation altogether.

12. The only other points calling for special notice are that an appeal is given to the Governor General in Council against anything done by a Local Government or any inferior authority; that declarations of forfeitures and other proceedings under the Act are made final and conclusive, subject only to such appeal; and that penalties are provided for printing or publishing a newspaper without executing a bond or making a deposit after such bond or deposit has been required, and for breach of an undertaking to submit proofs to a Government officer.

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 15th March 1878, and is hereby promulgated for general information:—

ACT No. X OF 1878.

An Act for the levy of Additional Rates on land in the Central Provinces.

WHEREAS, in order to defray the expenditure incurred and to be incurred for the relief and prevention of famine, it is necessary to make a permanent increase to the annual revenues; and it is therefore expedient to provide, in the territories administered by the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, for the levy of additional rates on land; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

I. This Act may be called "The Central Provinces Additional Rates Act, 1878."

Short title.

It extends only to the territories administered by the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces;

Local extent.

And it shall come into force on such date as the Governor General in Council by notification in the Gazette of India directs.

2. Every estate shall be liable, in addition to the rates and cesses payable under any settlement for the time being in force, to the payment of such further rate not exceeding one per cent. on its annual value, as the Chief Commissioner, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, from time to time imposes.

"Annual value" means

(1) in cases in which the settlement of the land-revenue is liable to periodical revision, double the amount of the land-revenue for the time being assessed on the estate;

(2) in cases in which such settlement is not liable to such revision, or in which the land-revenue has been wholly or in part, released, compounded for, redeemed or assigned, double the amount which, if the settlement were liable to such revision and an assessment at full rates were made, would be assessed as land-revenue on the estate.

3. All sums due on account of any rate imposed under this Act shall be recoverable as if they were arrears of land-revenue, due in respect of the land on account of which the rate is payable.

4. The proceeds of all rates levied under this Act shall be carried to the credit of the Local Government.

Rates to be credited to Local Government.

5. From the sums so credited the Chief Commissioner shall from time to time appropriate such amount as the Governor General in Council may direct, for the purpose of increasing the revenues available for defraying the expenditure incurred or to be incurred for the relief and prevention of famine in the said territories: or if the Governor General in Council so directs, in any other part of British India.

The residue of the said sums after such appropriation may be applied by the Chief Commissioner, subject to the control of the Governor General in Council, to such local works likely to promote the public health, comfort or convenience as the Chief Commissioner thinks fit.

6. The Chief Commissioner, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may by notification in the Local Gazette from time to time—

(a) determine by what instalments and at what times any rate under this Act shall be payable, by whom it shall be assessed, collected and paid, and what portion (if any) thereof, paid by any person in respect of an estate, may be recovered by such person from any other persons having any interest in such estate;

(b) make rules consistent with this Act for the guidance of officers in matters connected with its enforcement;

(c) exempt wholly or in part any portion of the said territories from the operation of this Act, or exempt any estate from liability to pay the whole or any part of any rate under this Act, and cancel any exemption under this clause;

(d) direct fresh measurements of estates liable to pay rates under this Act, and vary the assessments accordingly.

THE FIRST SCHEDULE.

THE SECOND SCHEDULE.

An Act to consolidate and amend the law relating to Arms, Ammunition and Military Stores.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to arms, ammunition and military stores; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Preamble.

I.—Preliminary.

1. This Act may be called "The Indian Arms Act, 1878"; and it extends to the whole of British Short title.

Local extent.

India.

Savings.

But nothing herein contained shall apply to—

(a) arms, ammunition or military stores on board any sea-going vessel and forming part of her ordinary armament or equipment, or

(b) the manufacture, conversion, sale, import, export, transport, bearing or possession of arms, ammunition or military stores by order of the Government, or by a public servant or a volunteer enrolled under the Indian Volunteers Act, 1869, in the course of his duty as such public servant or volunteer.

2. This Act shall come into force on such day as the Governor General in Council by notification in the Gazette of India appoints.

Commencement.

3. On and from that day the enactments mentioned in the first schedule hereto annexed shall be repealed to the extent specified in the third column of the said schedule. But all authorities and permissions given, licenses and exemptions granted, orders and appointments made, notifications published, and rules, conditions, and forms prescribed under any enactment hereby repealed shall be deemed to be respectively given, granted, made, published and prescribed under this Act.

Repeal of enactments.

And all such authorities, permissions, licences and exemptions shall, except as otherwise provided by this Act, continue in force for the periods for which they may have been given or granted respectively, or, where no such period is expressly fixed, for one year from the date on which this Act comes into force, and shall then cease to have effect.

4. In this Act unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context—

Interpretation-clause.

"Cannon" includes also all howitzers, mortars wall pieces, mitrailleuses and other ordnance and machine-guns, all parts of the same, and all carriages, platforms, and appliances for mounting, transporting and serving the same:

"Arms" includes fire-arms, bayonets, swords, daggers, spears, spear-heads and bows and arrows, also cannon and parts of arms, and machinery for manufacturing arms:

"Ammunition" includes also all articles specially designed for torpedo service and submarine mining, rockets, gun-cotton, dynamite, lithofracteur and other explosive or fulminating material, gunflints, gunwads, percussion caps, fuses, and friction tubes, all parts of ammunition and all machinery for manufacturing ammunition, but does not include lead, sulphur or saltpetre:

"Military stores" in any section of this Act as applied to any part of British India means any military stores to which the Governor General in Council may from time to time by notification in the Gazette of India specially extend such section in such part, and includes also all lead, sulphur, saltpetre and other material to which the Governor General in Council may from time to time so extend such section.

"License" means a license granted under this Act, and "licensed" means holding such license:

II.—Manufacture, Conversion and Sale.

5. No person shall manufacture, convert, or sell, or keep, offer or expose for sale, any arms, ammunition or military stores except under a license and in the manner and to the extent permitted thereby.

Unlicensed manufacture, conversion and sale prohibited.

Nothing herein contained shall prevent any person from selling any arms or ammunition which he lawfully possesses for his own private use to any person who is not by any enactment for the time being in force prohibited from possessing the same; but every person so selling arms or ammunition to any person other than a person entitled to possess the same by reason of an exemption under section twenty-seven of this Act shall, without unnecessary delay, give to the Magistrate of the district or to the officer in charge of the nearest police-station notice of the sale and of the purchaser's name and address.

III.—Import, Export and Transport.

6. No person shall bring or take by sea or by land into or out of British India any arms, ammunition or military stores except under a license and in the manner and to the extent permitted by such license.

Unlicensed importation and exportation prohibited.

Nothing in the first clause of this section extends to arms (other than cannon) or ammunition imported or exported in reasonable quantities for his own private use by any person lawfully entitled to possess such arms or ammunition; but the Collector of Customs or any other officer empowered by the Local Government in this behalf by name or in virtue of his office may at any time detain such arms or ammunition until he receives the orders of the Local Government thereon.

Explanation.—Arms, ammunition and military stores taken from one part of British India to another by sea or across intervening territory not being part of British India are taken out of and brought into British India within the meaning of this section.

7. Notwithstanding anything contained in the Sea-customs Act, 1878, no arms, ammunition or military stores shall be deposited in any warehouse licensed under section 16 of that Act without the sanction of the Local Government.

Sanction of local Government required to warehouse of arms, &c.

8. In lieu of the duties imposed by the Indian Tariff Act, 1875, upon the articles mentioned in the second schedule hereto annexed when imported by sea, there shall be levied and collected, in every part of British India, upon the same articles the duties specified in the same schedule:

Levy of duties on arms, &c., imported by sea.

Provided that no duty in excess of ten per cent. ad valorem shall be levied upon any of the said articles imported in reasonable quantity for his own private use by any person lawfully entitled to possess the same:

Provided also that when any articles which have been otherwise imported and upon which duty has been levied or is leviable under this section are purchased retail from the importer by a person lawfully entitled as aforesaid, in reasonable quantity for his own private use, the importer may apply to the Customs-collector for a refund or remission (as the case may be) of so much of the duty thereon as is in excess of ten per cent. ad valorem; and if such collector is satisfied as to the identity of the articles, and that such importer is in other respects entitled to such refund or remission, he shall grant the same accordingly.

9. The Governor General in Council may from time to time by notification in the Gazette of India direct that duties not exceeding those specified in the second schedule hereto annexed shall be levied upon any articles mentioned in that schedule and brought by land into any part of British India; and may in like manner cancel any such notification.

10. The Governor General in Council may from time to time by notification in the Gazette of India—
Power to prohibit transport.
 (a) regulate or prohibit the transport of any description of arms, ammunition or military stores over the whole of British India or any part thereof, either altogether or except under a license and to the extent and in the manner permitted by such license, and

(b) cancel any such notification.

Explanation.—Arms, ammunition or military stores transhipped at a port in British India are transported within the meaning of this section.

11. The Local Government with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council may, at any places along the boundary line between British India and Foreign territory and at such distance within such line as it deems expedient, establish searching posts at which all vessels, carts and baggage animals and all boxes, bales and packages in transit may be stopped and searched for arms, ammunition and military stores by any officer empowered by such Government in this behalf by name or in virtue of his office.

12. When any person is found carrying or conveying any arms, ammunition or military stores, whether covered by a license or not, in such manner or under such circumstances as to afford just grounds of suspicion that the same are being carried by him with intent to use them, or that the same may be used, for any unlawful purpose, any person may without warrant apprehend him and take such arms, ammunition or military stores from him.

Any person so apprehended and any arms, ammunition or military stores so taken by a person not being a Magistrate or Police-officer shall be delivered over as soon as possible to a Police-officer.

All persons apprehended by, or delivered to, a Police-officer and all arms and ammunition seized by or delivered to any such officer under this section shall be taken without unnecessary delay before a Magistrate.

IV.—Going armed and possessing Arms, &c.

13. No person shall go armed with any arms except under a license and to the extent and in the manner permitted thereby.

Any person so going armed without a license or in contravention of its provisions may be punished by any Magistrate, Police-officer or other person empowered by the Local Government in this behalf by name or by virtue of his office.

14. No person shall have in his possession or under his control any arms, ammunition or military stores except under a license and to the extent permitted thereby.

During the three months next following the date on which this Act comes into force nothing in the former part of this section shall apply to the possession by any person of any fire-arms, ammunition or military stores in any place to which section 32, clause 2, of Act No. XXXI of 1860 does not apply at such date.

Any person having within the said period of three months any fire-arms, ammunition or military stores in his possession in any such place may, and any person having at the expiry of the same period any fire-arms, ammunition or military stores in his possession in any such place without a license shall, deposit the same with the officer in charge of the nearest police-station.

If the owner of any thing deposited under this section does not within the year next following the date on which this Act comes into force, obtain a license authorizing him to possess such thing and apply for delivery of the same, such thing shall be forfeited to Her Majesty.

15. In any place to which section 32, clause 2 of Act No. XXXI of 1860, applies at the time this Act comes into force or to which the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may by notification in the local official Gazette specially extend this section, no person shall have in his possession any arms of any description, except under a license and in the manner and to the extent permitted thereby.

16. Any person possessing arms, ammunition or military stores, the possession whereof by him has, in consequence of the cancellation or expiry of a license or by the issue of a notification under section fifteen become unlawful, shall deposit the same without unnecessary delay with the officer in charge of the nearest police-station.

If the owner of any thing deposited under this section does not within three years from the date on which such thing is so deposited produce a license authorising him to possess the same and apply for delivery of the same, such thing shall be forfeited to Her Majesty.

V.—Licenses.

17. The Governor General in Council may from

Power to make rules as to licenses.

time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India, make rules to determine the officers by whom, the form in which, and the terms and conditions on and subject to which, any license shall be granted; and may by such rules among other matters—

(a) fix the period for which such license shall continue in force

(b) fix a fee payable by stamp or otherwise in respect of any such license granted in a place to which section 32, clause 2, of Act No. XXXI of 1860 applies at the time this Act comes into force, or in respect of any such license other than a license for possession granted in any other place;

(c) direct that the holder of any such license other than a license for possession shall keep a record or account in such form as the Local Government may prescribe of anything done under such license, and exhibit such record or account when called upon by an officer of Government to do so;

(d) empower any officer of Government to enter and inspect any premises in which arms, ammunition or military stores are manufactured or kept by any person holding a license of the description referred to in section five or section six;

(e) direct that any such person shall exhibit the entire stock of arms, ammunition and military stores in his possession or under his control to any officer of Government so empowered, and

(f) require the person holding any license or acting under any license to produce the same, and to produce or account for the arms, ammunition or military stores covered by the same when called upon by an officer of Government so to do.

18. Any license may be cancelled or suspended—

(a) by the officer by whom the same was granted, or by any authority to which he may be subordinate, or by any Magistrate of a district or commissioner of police in a presidency town, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the holder of such license may be, when, for reasons to be recorded in writing, such officer, authority, Magistrate or commissioner deems it necessary for the security of the public peace to cancel or suspend such license; or

(b) by any Judge or Magistrate before whom the holder of such license is convicted of an offence against this Act, or against the rules made under this Act; and the Local Government may at its discretion by a notification in the local official Gazette cancel or suspend all or any licenses throughout the whole or any portion of the territories under its administration.

VI.—Penalties.

19. Whoever commits any of the following offences (namely)—

(a) manufactures, converts or sells, or keeps, offers or exposes for sale any arms, ammunition or military stores in contravention of the provisions of section five;

(b) fails to give notice as required by the same section;

(c) imports or exports any arms, ammunition or military stores in contravention of the provisions of section six;

(d) transports any arms, ammunition or military stores in contravention of a regulation or prohibition issued under section ten;

(e) goes armed in contravention of the provisions of section thirteen;

(f) has in his possession or under his control any arms, ammunition or military stores in contravention of the provisions of section fourteen or section fifteen;

(g) intentionally makes any false entry in a record or account which by a rule made under section seventeen, clause (c), he is required to keep;

(h) intentionally fails to exhibit anything which by a rule made under section seventeen, clause (c), he is required to exhibit; or

(i) fails to deposit arms, ammunition or military stores, as required by section fourteen or section sixteen;

shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

20. Whoever does any act mentioned in clause

For secret breaches of sections 5, 6, 10, 14 and 15. (a), (c), (d) or (f) of section nineteen, in such manner as to indicate an intention that such act may not be known to any public servant as defined in the Indian Penal Code, or to any person employed upon a Railway or to the servant of any public carrier, and whoever, on any search being made under section twenty-five, conceals or attempts to conceal any arms, ammunition or military stores, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years, or with fine, or with both.

21. Whoever, in violation of a condition subject to which a license has

For breach of license. been granted, does or omits to do any act shall, when the doing or omitting to do such act is not punishable under section nineteen or section twenty, be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

22. Whoever knowingly purchases any arms,

For knowingly purchasing arms, &c., from unlicensed person. ammunition or military stores from any person not licensed or authorized under the proviso to section five to sell the same; or delivers any arms, ammunition or military stores into the possession of any person without previously ascertaining that such person is legally authorized to possess the same, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

23. Any person violating any rule made under this Act, and for the violation of which no penalty is provided by this Act, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with both.

Penalty for breach of rule.

24. When any person is convicted of an offence punishable under this Act committed by him in respect of any arms, ammunition or military stores, it shall be in the discretion of the convicting Court or Magistrate, further to direct that the whole or any portion of such arms, ammunition or military stores, and any vessel, cart or baggage animal used to convey the same, and any box, package or bale in which the same may have been concealed, together with the other contents of such box, package or bale, shall be confiscated.

Power to confiscate.

FII.—Miscellaneous.

25. Whenever any Magistrate has reason to believe that any person residing within the local limits of his jurisdiction has in his possession any arms, ammunition or military stores for any unlawful purpose,

Search and seizure by Magistrate.

or that such person cannot be left in the possession of any such arms, ammunition or military stores without danger to the public peace, such Magistrate, having first recorded the grounds of his belief, may cause a search to be made of the house or premises occupied by such person, or in which such Magistrate has reason to believe such arms, ammunition or military stores are or is to be found, and may seize and detain the same, although covered by a license, in safe custody for such time as he thinks necessary.

The search in such case shall be conducted by, or in the presence of, a Magistrate, or by or in the presence of some officer, specially empowered in this behalf by name or in virtue of his office by the Local Government.

26. The Local Government may at any time order or cause to be seized any arms, ammunition or military stores in the possession of any person, notwithstanding that such person is licensed to possess the same, and may detain the same for such time as it thinks necessary for the public safety.

Seizure and detention by Local Government.

27. The Governor General in Council may from time to time by notification published in the Gazette of India—

Power to exempt.

(a) exempt any person by name or in virtue of his office or any class of persons or exclude any description of arms or ammunition or withdraw any part of British India, from the operation of any prohibition or direction contained in this Act; and

(b) cancel any such notification and again subject the persons or things or the part of British India comprised therein to the operation of such prohibition or direction.

28. Every person aware of the commission of any offence punishable under this Act, shall in the absence of reasonable excuse, the burden of proving which shall lie upon such person, give information of the same to the nearest Police-officer or Magistrate, and every person employed upon any railway or by any public carrier shall, in the absence of reasonable excuse, the burden of proving which shall lie upon such person, give information to the nearest Police-officer regarding any box, package or bale, in transit which he may have reason to suspect contains arms, ammunition or military stores in respect of which an offence against this Act has been or is being committed.

29. Where an offence punishable under section nineteen, clause (f), has been committed within three months from the date on which this Act comes into force in any province, district or place to which section 32, clause 2 of Act XXXI of 1860 applies at such date, or where such an offence has been committed in any part of British India not being such a district, province or place, no proceedings shall be instituted against any person in respect of such offence without the previous sanction of the Magistrate of the district or in a presidency town of the commissioner of police.

30. Where a search is to be made under the Code of Criminal Procedure—Searches in the case of offences against section 19, cl.(f), how conducted. Code of Criminal Procedure—trates Act 1877 in the course of any proceedings instituted in respect of an offence punishable under section nineteen, clause (f), such search shall, notwithstanding anything contained in the said Code or Act, be made in the presence of some officer specially appointed by name or in virtue of his office by the Local Government in this behalf, and not otherwise.

31. Nothing in this Act shall be deemed to prevent any person from being prosecuted under any other law for any act or omission which constitutes an offence against this Act or the rules made under it, or from being liable under such other law to any higher punishment or penalty than that provided by this Act: Provided that no person shall be punished twice for the same offence.

32. The Local Government may from time to time by notification in the local official Gazette direct a census to be taken of all fire-arms in any local area, and empower any person by name or in virtue of his office to take such census.

Power to take census of fire-arms.

On the issue of any such notification, all persons possessing any such arms in such area shall furnish to the person so empowered such information as he may require in reference thereto, and shall produce such arms to him if he so requires.

Any person refusing or neglecting to produce any such arms when so required, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with both.

33. No proceeding other than a suit shall be commenced against any person for any thing done in pursuance of this Act, without having given him at least one month's previous notice in writing of the intended proceeding and of the cause thereof, nor after the expiration of three months from the accrual of such cause.

Notice and limitation of proceedings.

BOMBAY AND KARAR.

SUPPLEMENT TO THE GAZETTE OF INDIA, MARCH 23, 1878.

[illegible]

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE, AGRICULTURE, AND COMMERCE.

REPORTS ON THE STATE OF THE SEASON AND PROSPECTS OF THE CROPS
FOR THE WEEK ENDING THE 19th MARCH 1878.

GENERAL REMARKS.—In Madras a little rain is reported from Ganjam, Tinnevely, and Ootacamund; general prospects are said to shew no improvement, and prices continue to rise. The total number on works is 117,908, and on gratuitous relief 116,382, being less than the figures of last week by 4,110 and 16,269 respectively. Showers have fallen in Mysore; prices are nearly stationery; the numbers on works for the week ending the 9th instant were 54,894, and on gratuitous relief 3,532, being 4,092 more and 189 less than in the previous week. No rain has fallen in the Bombay Presidency, where the reaping of the rabi is nearly over. No rain is reported from the Central Provinces, except trifling showers in Sambalpur, Chánda and Saugor; the rabi continues to be harvested; prices are high and are still rising. In Berar the rabi has been reaped. In Central India a shower has fallen at Neemuch; prospects are unchanged. In Rajputana prospects are favourable, but cattle are still dying in the Harowtee States. In Bengal more or less rain is reported from nearly all districts: little has, however, fallen in Behar, Chota Nagpore and the Sonthal Pergunnahs; the rain has been generally beneficial; the rabi is being harvested with a fair outturn, except in parts of the Patna Division. In Assam frequent showers of rain and wind are reported in the Valley districts, and rain in Sylhet; prospects are good. In the North-Western Provinces showers have fallen in most districts, and hail in Bareilly: fine weather has, however, again set in; the harvest is in progress throughout the Benares, Allahabad, and Jhansi Divisions, and the whole of Oudh. In the Punjab showers are reported from Delhi, Umballa, Jullundur, Amritsar, Lahore, and Ráwalpindi: prospects are favourable, and prices are falling in most districts.

Presidency or Province and District.	Rainfall for week preceding.	State of agricultural prospects.
Bengal—(Mar. 21)
Chittagong	Nil	Nights and mornings are cool, days are hot; the rain of last week has benefited the cold-weather crops; pania aus is being transplanted; rice is selling at 10 to 16 seers per rupee.
Noakhully	0.55	Weather daily getting warmer; slight rain fell on the 8th and 10th; the cold-weather crops are progressing favourably; public health is good.
Chittagong Hill Tracts.	Nil	Weather seasonable, cloudy on the 11th; joom-cutting still continues; tobacco leaves are being gathered in small quantities; the lands are being ploughed for aus crop.
Hill Tipperah	2.17	Weather stormy on the 6th, 8th, and 11th; a good deal of rain has fallen; there was hail also on the 8th March; damage has been caused by hail to the mango blossoms; prices have slightly fallen.
Backergunge	1.93	There has been some rain, but not nearly sufficient to permit the beginning of ploughing; food still continues dear, from Rs. 3 to Rs. 3.8 per maund; there has been, and there still is, a serious outbreak of small-pox in the sub-division of Perazapore.
Furzedpore	0.02	Weather generally cloudy, with a breeze from the south; the prospects of the crops have been benefited by the rain which fell during the week in the Madarapore sub-division, and by the previous rain in the head-quarters sub-division; a storm is reported to have occurred at Goalundo on the evening of the 12th instant; there was no rain at Goalundo itself, but rain and hail are believed to have fallen in the neighbourhood; the storm caused some damage to boats on the river, but particulars have not been received; sporadic cases of cholera and some cases of small-pox have been reported, but there is no serious outbreak of sickness.
Madarapore	2.76.
Dacca	0.03	Weather seasonable and getting warm; state and prospects of the crops are favourable; the recent rain has done much good in every way.
Mymensingh	0.24	Weather stormy and showery; ploughing is in progress.
Tipperah	Rain fell on the 6th, 7th, and 8th in the south, and on the 9th and 10th in the centre and west of the district.	There was a heavy thunder-storm on the night of the 9th; boro rice and other crops are thriving; khesari and kalai are being reaped; chillies are being gathered; aus dhán is being transplanted; sugarcane is nearly all cut; rice is being exported to the south and to Náráyananj; the average price of the staple is about Rs. 2-14.
24-Pergunnahs	0.81	Squally weather, with a little rain; the late showers have done good, but rain is still much wanted; some cholera continues; cattle disease is reported from all the thanas of Satkhira.
Jessore	1.43, Jhenidah 8.02, Magoorah 2.00, Bagirhat 1.65.	Weather seasonable; state and prospects of the crops are favourable; the recent rain that fell has done good; sowings of paddy have commenced.
Nudda	0.10	Occasional fogs in the morning; a little rain fell in most parts of the district; there is scarcely anything on the ground now; the rain has been of much service in facilitating cultivation; the fogs have injured the mango blossoms.
Moorsshedabad	0.25	Weather seasonable; the rabi crops are being reaped with every prospect of a fair outturn; cholera still prevails locally in a sporadic form.
Pabna	Slight rain in most parts of the district at the commencement of the week.	Rain too slight to do benefit to the crops; the sky appears now and then cloudy; no change to report in the state and prospects of the crops, but rain is wanted.
Rajshahye	0.001	The heat is daily increasing; the nights are still cool; there have been mists nearly every morning; a very slight fall of rain on the night of the 15th; the cutting of the rabi crops, and the sowings of sesamum and early rice, are going on; a shower of rain would do much good; the price of rice is high; a few cases of cholera occurred in the vicinity of Naubáta.
Bogra	0.74	There was a shower of rain on the night of the 15th, and more is anticipated; the sowing of early rice and jute has commenced in some places; linseed and ganja are being gathered; the latter crop is not very good; some cases of cholera have been reported from Panchabibi station.
Dinapore	0.89	Weather cool; strong east wind blowing; the prospects of the spring crops are good; general health of the district has improved.
Rungpore	0.40	Some slight rain and high easterly winds; state and prospects of the crops continue to be favourable; the tobacco outturn this year is expected to be an average one; cholera still exists in some parts of Okepore and Bhowaniganj thanas; fever is at its minimum.
Cooch Behar	Nil	East winds prevailing; weather cool; the prospects of chaena and kson continue satisfactory; tobacco in places has suffered from the high winds; public health is generally good.

Presidency or Province and District.	Rainfall for week preceding.	State of agricultural prospects.
Bengal—continued.
Jalpaiguri ...	0·90	The weather has been windy and stormy; the present fall of snow on the Bhootan hills seems to have been unusually heavy; there is nothing fresh to report about the crops; the price of rice is rapidly rising all over the district, owing to the increased demand for export.
Darjeeling ...	1·33	Several showers of rain with some hail and a good deal of high wind; the recent rain will be favourable to the approaching rice sowings; there are no crops of importance on the ground now.
Midnapore ...		Weather hot and seasonable; nothing new to report on the state and prospects of the crops.
Howrah ...	0·16	Weather seasonable, with occasional storms in the evening; the slight rain has been beneficial to the few crops on the ground; it seems to have been heavier in Moheshrekha than at head-quarters, and it will facilitate cultivation.
Hooghly ...	0·89	Weather very warm; the land is being ploughed for indigo; sugarcane is being planted; a few cases of cholera and small-pox have been reported from the Hooghly and Chinsurah Municipality; cattle disease has broken out in one village in thana Pundooah.
Burdwan ...	0·92	Pressing of sugarcane is going on; wheat and barley are doing well; cholera and small-pox are prevalent in Cutwa, Raneeunge and Bood-Bood sub-divisions; fever prevails in Jehanabad sub-division; cholera still lingers in Calna sub-division.
Bankura ...	0·46	Weather clear and hot in the early part of the week; a very lowering sky on the 14th, ended on the 15th in thunder showers; no change in the state and prospects of the crops since last week; some cases of cholera, small-pox and measles, and cattle disease are reported.
Beerbhoom ...	0·10	Heavy storms in the north of the district on the 15th; all is well with such crops as are still on the ground.
Sonthal Pergunnahs ...	Nil	Weather warmer, but seasonable; gram and wheat have been fair; moowa in the Godda sub-division has been destroyed by hail; small-pox and cholera are still about.
Bhagalpur ...	0·17	Weather hot, with easterly winds; nights are cool; a shower in the afternoon of the 16th; the harvesting of the rabi crops has commenced; prices are unchanged; health is generally good.
Monghyr ...	0·05	Weather warm, with east winds and rain threatening; the rabi crops are being harvested; the opium is suffering from blight, and its outturn is much reduced.
Purneah ...	0·46	Temperature windy; winds generally easterly; the outturn of the rabi harvest is generally good, and the prospects continue good where the harvest is in progress; rain is required for the bhadoi sowings.
Maldah ...	Nil	Weather fair; the rabi harvest is progressing; in most places the crop seems an excellent one, but along the banks of the Ganges it is not so good; the price of rice is very high for the time of year owing to the demand for export; cholera is prevalent in Manick-chuck and Nawabganj, and cases have also been reported from old Maldah and Gajole.
Durbhunga ...	Nil	Strong east wind prevailing; the weather thus far is unfavourable for indigo, though it is favourable for the rabi harvest which is satisfactorily progressing; there is promise of an excellent mango season.
Mosufferpore ...	Nil	Weather getting warm; west wind prevailing; the rabi crops are being reaped; poppy and tobacco have been much injured by caterpillars in Hajeeapore sub-division.
Saran ...	Sprinkling rain on the morning of the 16th.	Weather cold in the mornings and evenings; seasonably warm at midday; cloudy with high east wind since 14th; the cold-weather crops are still being harvested, and a fair outturn is expected, save in the rakar , which has suffered somewhat from frost; injury has been done to the mango trees by the east wind; poppyheads are still being tapped; prices are stationary; public health is good.
Chumpana ...	0·08	Weather nice and cool; sky overcast, and there was a slight shower of rain on the morning of the 16th; nothing new to report regarding the prospects of the rabi and opium crops; the rabi has commenced to be harvested, and the lancetting of opium is nearly over; grain market is steady.
Patna ...	Nil	Nothing new to report about the state and prospects of the crops.
Gya ...	Slight rain	Weather warm; maximum thermometer in the shade 101·2°; the rabi harvest is going on; injury by insects is still reported; prices show no upward tendency at present.
Shahabad ...	Slight rain	Weather cloudy, with strong east wind; the rabi crops are being harvested; they have, however, been greatly damaged by insects; peas and gram have been cut; prices are still high; public health is good.
Hazribagh ...	Nil	Weather seasonable; no change to report about the crops; prices of food-grains continue to rise.
Lohardugga ...	1·03	There have been three storms of wind from the westward, the last one accompanied with hail and rain; the rabi crops are being harvested; some of them are better than others; the outturn is about 8 annas; moowa promised well till the hail of the 15th; it is not known whether the storm was general; considerable emigration to the Tributary Mehals in the south of the district is going on; prices have not risen since last report.

Presidency or Province and District.	Rainfall for week preceding.	State of agricultural prospects.
Bengal—concluded.
Maubhoom ...	0·06	Weather stormy; bad reports of the condition of the people have been received from the west of the district; the prospects of the mukwa crop have been reported favourable, but heavy storms of wind and rain have very lately occurred, the reports of the effects of which are awaited.
Singhbhoom	Nil	Weather seasonable; a severe storm on the evening of the 14th at Chybnasa, but no damage has been done; nothing to report about the crops; the district is healthy.
Balasore	1·20	Weather foggy in the morning, hot and dry in the day; the few crops on the ground are in fair condition; sporadic deaths from cholera occur.
Cuttack	·23	Weather warm and windy; there was rain in several parts of the district, which has benefited the dalsa and cotton crops; ploughing for next year's crop is going on in those parts.

HOME DEPARTMENT.

NOTIFICATIONS.—PUBLIC.

Fort William, the 29th March 1878.

No. 707.—The following rules for the submission, receipt and transmission of memorials and other papers of the same class, addressed to Her Majesty the Queen,

N. B.—These rules do not in any way affect or supersede orders issued on the same subject by the military authorities for the guidance of the Army.

Empress of India, or to the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for India, by private persons or by officers of all civil departments, are published for general information; and the rules published under Home Department Notifications No. 3742, dated 21st August 1867, and No. 1461, dated 31st July 1877, are cancelled:

I.—No memorial will be received or attended to unless forwarded as hereinafter prescribed.

II.—Every memorial should be accompanied by a letter requesting its transmission to the authority to which it is addressed.

III.—Every memorial addressed to Her Majesty or to the Secretary of State for India should be forwarded through the Local Government under which the writer is residing or is employed.

IV.—Memorials to Her Majesty or to the Secretary of State from persons in the Madras and Bombay Presidencies should be forwarded direct by the Local Government, with a full statement of facts and an expression of opinion, except in the case of memorials which relate to any rule or standing order of the Government of India, or which, if granted, would cause expenditure, for which the Imperial and not the Local Government would be primarily responsible, or which relate to any legislative proceeding of the Governor General in Council. Such memorials should be forwarded with a covering letter containing a full statement of facts and an expression of opinion to the Government of India in the Department having cognizance of the subject-matter of such memorial, by which Department the memorials will be transmitted to the Secretary of State.

V.—Memorials to Her Majesty or to the

* Appeals by private persons from the orders of Lieutenant-Governors lie, in the first instance, to the Governor General in Council. An appeal to the Secretary of State will lie only in the event of an appeal to the Governor General in Council having been rejected.

Secretary of State from persons in Bengal, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, or the Punjab, should be forwarded by the Local Government, with a full statement of facts and an expression of opinion, to the Government of India in the proper Department for transmission to the authority addressed.*

VI.—Memorials to Her Majesty or to the Secretary of State from

† In these minor Administrations, also, appeals by individuals from the orders of the Chief Commissioners, &c., lie, in the first instance, to the Governor General in Council and thereafter to the Secretary of State.

persons in the minor Administrations—the Central Provinces, British Burma, Berar, Mysore, Coorg and Assam—should be forwarded with a full statement of facts and an expression of opinion by the Chief Commissioner, or other officer charged with the administration of the Province, to the Government of India in the proper Department for transmission to the authority addressed.†

VII.—No limit is fixed, to the time within which an appeal from an order of the Governments in India must be preferred to the Home Department, except in the case of appeals from a judicial decision in which the Judge is a political officer, and in which the appeal ordinarily lies to Government in the Political Department. Such appeals‡ must be preferred within a period of twelve months from the date of communication to the persons concerned of the order to which objection is taken.

‡ When a judicial decision of the nature referred to has been communicated to the party or parties concerned before the 31st July 1877, he or they may appeal from such decision within 18 months from that date.

VIII.—Memorials may be transmitted either in manuscript or in print, but must, with all accompanying documents, be properly authenticated by the signature of the memorialist on each sheet.

IX.—Memorials, together with their accompanying documents, should be in English. If the accompanying documents must necessarily be forwarded in the vernacular, an English translation should be appended, which should be attested by the signature of the memorialist.

N.B.—It will be well for the transmitting office to examine such translations, and if they are found to be incorrect or faulty, to notice the fact in sending on the memorial.

X.—It is not necessary that memorials should be forwarded in duplicate or triplicate. The originals will invariably be transmitted to England, a copy being made and retained by the Government of India, if necessary, for record.

XI.—As a general rule, the transmission to England of a memorial duly forwarded through the proper channel will not be delayed by the transmitting Government in India beyond a month after the receipt of such memorial.

XII.—Governments and Administrations in India are vested with discretionary power to withhold the transmission of memorials addressed to

Her Majesty or to the Secretary of State in the following cases:

- 1.—When a memorial is illegible or unintelligible.
- 2.—When a memorial contains disrespectful or improper language.
- 3.—When a second memorial is presented after a decision has already been given by the authority to which it is addressed, and when no new facts or circumstances are adduced which afford grounds for a reconsideration of the case. A memorial addressed to Her Majesty by a person whose appeal to the Secretary of State has already been rejected, shall be held to be a second memorial to the same authority and shall not be transmissible.
- 4.—When a memorial is a mere application for pecuniary assistance by a person manifestly possessing no claim.
- 5.—When a memorial is an application for employment under one of the Governments in India from a person not belonging to the covenanted service.
- 6.—When a memorial is a mere appeal from a judicial decision.
- 7.—When a memorial is addressed by an officer still in the public service and has reference to his prospective claim to pension.

XIII.—The Government of India may withhold the transmission of a memorial addressed to Her Majesty or to the Secretary of State, unless the memorialist has previously memorialised the Government of India and the Local Government concerned on the same subject.

XIV.—A list of memorials withheld under the discretionary power conferred by Rule XII. will be forwarded quarterly to the Government of India in the case of memorials withheld by Local Governments under the same discretionary power, and by the Government of India in the Department concerned to the Secretary of State.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

NOTIFICATIONS.—JUDICIAL.

Fort William, the 25th March 1878.

No. 27J.—The following extract from The London Gazette of the 12th February 1878 is published for general information:—

At the Court at Osborne House, Isle of Wight, the 4th day of February 1878.

PRESENT,

The QUEEN's Most Excellent Majesty.

Lord President.

Lord Privy Seal.

Sir Michael Edward Hicks-Beach, Bart.

Sir Thomas Myddelton-Biddulph.

Whereas by Section 18 of "The Extradition Act, 1870," it is among other things enacted, That if by any law made after the passing of the said Act by the Legislature of any British Possession, provision is made for carrying into effect within such Possession the surrender of Fugitive Criminals who are in, or suspected of being in, such British Possession, Her Majesty may, by the Order in Council applying the said Act in the case of any Foreign State, or by any subsequent Order either—

Suspend the operation within any such British Possession of the said Act, or of any part thereof, so far as it relates to such Foreign State, and so long as such law continues in force there and no longer;—

Or direct that such law or ordinance or any part session, with or without modifications and alterations, as if it were part of the Act:—

And whereas by an Ordinance enacted by the Legislature of Ceylon, the short title of which is, "The Extradition Ordinance, 1877," it is provided that "all powers vested in and acts authorized or required to be done by a Police Magistrate or any Justice of the Peace in relation to the surrender of fugitive Criminals in the United Kingdom under 'The Extradition Acts, 1870 and 1873,' are thereby vested in and may in the Colony be exercised and done by any Police Magistrate in relation to the surrender of Fugitive Criminals under the said Acts."

And whereas it is further provided by the said Ordinance that the said Ordinance shall not come into operation until Her Majesty shall by Order in Council direct that the said Ordinance shall have effect within the Colony as if it were part of "The Extradition Act, 1870," but that the said Ordinance shall thereafter come into operation as soon as such Order in Council shall have been publicly made known in the Colony.

Now, therefore, Her Majesty, in pursuance of "The Extradition Act, 1870," and in exercise of the power in that behalf in the said Act contained, doth by this present Order, by and with the advice of Her Majesty's Privy Council, direct that the said Ordinance shall have effect in the Colony of Ceylon, without modification or alteration, as if it were part of "The Extradition Act, 1870."

And the Right Honourable Sir Michael Edward Hicks-Beach, one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, is to give the necessary directions herein accordingly.

C. L. PEEL.

These arrangements will continue in force till the 25th April.

2. The charge for an Express Carriage Dak from Umballa to Kalka will be Rs. 20. The charge for an Express Tonga Dak from Kalka to Simla will be Rs. 20.

3. From the 1st April three ordinary vans carrying mails will also leave the Umballa Post Office—one in the morning at or about 5 A. M., and two others in the evening at or about 7 P. M. and 9-10 P. M. In each of these vans four seats will be available for passengers (if the weight of the mails admit) at a charge of Rs. 2½ per seat.

4. From the same date, viz., 1st April, two mail tongas will start from Kalka—one at about 3 A. M., and another at about 10-30 A. M. If the weight of mails admit of it, passengers can be accommodated in these tongas at Rs. 5 a seat. Seats in the Mail tongas can be booked only in the Umballa and Kalka Offices.

5. The Tonga Daks are not Government Daks, but those of a private agency called the Mountain Carrying Company, under the management of Mr. Lowrie, and under contract with the Post Office for the conveyance of mails.

TURTON SMITH,

Asst. Dir. Genl. of the Post Office of India.

The 26th January 1878.

The Passenger and Mail Cart Service between Caragola and Siligore, hitherto kept up by the Postal Department, will, in consequence of the opening of the Northern Bengal State Railway, be discontinued from the 1st February 1878.

The 2nd March 1878.

PASSENGER SERVICE.

Messrs. Bird and Company have contracted to carry the Mails between Siliguri and Darjeeling by Tonga.

Passengers are conveyed by these Tongas at the following rates:—

For one seat, a sum not exceeding 8 annas a mile.

For two seats, a sum not exceeding 12 annas a mile.

J. MACFARLAN,

Offg. Post Master General of Bengal.

PASSENGER SERVICE.

Jessore Line.

A carriage line is maintained under contract between Chagdah Station on the Eastern Bengal Railway and Jessore, a distance of 48 miles. The contractor is bound to start one carriage each way daily to meet the up and down Mail Trains, but he is at liberty to make his own charges for the conveyance of passengers.

The 29th March 1878.

THE INDIAN LAW REPORTS.

PUBLISHED UNDER AUTHORITY.

The "Indian Law Reports," published under the authority of the Governor General in Council, will appear in monthly parts, published as soon as possible after the first of each month at Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad, and will comprise four series,—one for the Calcutta High Court, a second for the Madras High Court, a third for the Bombay High Court, and a fourth for the Allahabad High Court. The cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from each High Court will be reported in the Series for that High Court. Cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from Provinces in India not subject to any High Court will be reported in the Calcutta Series. The Parts of each Series can be had separately, or all four Parts can be had stitched into one wrapper at the option of subscribers and purchasers. It will be observed from the following statement of the terms of subscription and sale, that a considerable reduction is allowed to persons taking the complete set:

Terms of subscription, payable annually in advance.

	Without Postage.	With Postage.

Acts of the Governor General's Council assented to by the Governor General.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Third Publication.]

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 15th March 1878, and is hereby promulgated for general information:—

ACT No. X OF 1878.

An Act for the levy of Additional Rates on land in the Central Provinces.

WHEREAS, in order to defray the expenditure incurred and to be incurred for the relief and prevention of famine, it is necessary to make a permanent increase to the annual revenues; and it is therefore expedient to provide, in the territories administered by the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, for the levy of additional rates on land; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. This Act may be called "The Central Provinces Additional Rates Act, 1878:"

It extends only to the territories administered by the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces; and it shall come into force on such date as the Governor General in Council by notification in the Gazette of India directs.

2. Every estate shall be liable, in addition to the rates and cesses payable under any settlement for the time being in force, to the payment of such further rate not exceeding one per cent. on its annual value, as the Chief Commissioner, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, from time to time imposes.

"Annual value" means

(1) in cases in which the settlement of the land-revenue is liable to periodical revision, double the amount of the land-revenue for the time being assessed on the estate;

(2) in cases in which such settlement is not liable to such revision, or in which the land-revenue has been, wholly or in part, released, compounded for, redeemed or assigned, double the amount which, if the settlement were liable to such revision and an assessment at full rates were made, would be assessed as land-revenue on the estate.

3. All sums due on account of any rate imposed under this Act shall be recoverable as if they were arrears of land-revenue due in respect of the land on account of which the rate is payable.

4. The proceeds of all rates levied under this Act shall be carried to the credit of the Local Government.

5. From the sums so credited the Chief Commissioner shall from time to time appropriate such amount as the Governor General in Council may direct, for the purpose of increasing the revenues available for defraying the expenditure incurred or to be incurred for the relief and prevention of famine in the said territories; or if the Governor General in Council so directs, in any other part of British India.

The residue of the said sums after such appropriation may be applied by the Chief Commissioner, subject to the control of the Governor General in Council, to such local works likely to promote the public health, comfort or convenience as the Chief Commissioner thinks fit.

6. The Chief Commissioner, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may by notification in the Local Gazette from time to time--
 Supplementary powers of Chief Commissioner.

(a) determine by what instalments and at what times any rate under this Act shall be payable, by whom it shall be assessed, collected and paid, and what portion (if any) thereof, paid by any person in respect of an estate, may be recovered by such person from any other persons having any interest in such estate;

(b) make rules consistent with this Act for the guidance of officers in matters connected with its enforcement;

(c) exempt wholly or in part any portion of the said territories from the operation of this Act, or exempt any estate from liability to pay the whole or any part of any rate under this Act, and cancel any exemption under this clause;

(d) direct fresh measurements of estates liable to pay rates under this Act, and vary the assessments accordingly.

THE FIRST SCHEDULE.

THE SECOND SCHEDULE.

An Act to consolidate and amend the law relating to Arms, Ammunition and Military Stores.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to arms, ammunition and military stores; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

I.—Preliminary.

1. This Act may be called "The Indian Arms Act, 1878"; and it extends to the whole of British India.

But nothing herein contained shall apply to—Savings.

(a) arms, ammunition or military stores on board any sea-going vessel and forming part of her ordinary armament or equipment, or

(b) the manufacture, conversion, sale, import, export, transport, bearing or possession of arms, ammunition or military stores by order of the Government, or by a public servant or a volunteer enrolled under the Indian Volunteers Act, 1869, in the course of his duty as such public servant or volunteer.

2. This Act shall come into force on such day as the Governor General in Council by notification in the Gazette of India appoints.

3. On and from that day the enactments mentioned in the first schedule hereto annexed shall be repealed to the extent specified in the third column of the said schedule. But all authorities and permissions given, licenses and exemptions granted, orders and appointments made, notifications published, and rules, conditions, and forms prescribed under any enactment hereby repealed shall be deemed to be respectively given, granted, made, published and prescribed under this Act.

And all such authorities, permissions, licenses and exemptions shall, except as otherwise provided by this Act, continue in force for the periods for which they may have been given or granted respectively, or where no such period is expressly fixed, for one year from the date on which this Act comes into force, and shall then cease to have effect.

4. In this Act unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context—

"Cannon" includes also all howitzers, mortars, wall pieces, mitrailleuses and other ordnance and machine-guns, all parts of the same, and all carriages, platforms and appliances for mounting, transporting and serving the same;

"Arms" includes fire-arms, bayonets, swords, daggers, spears, spear-heads and bows and arrows, also cannon and parts of arms, and machinery for manufacturing arms;

"Ammunition" includes also all articles specially designed for torpedo service and submarine mining, rockets, gun-cotton, dynamite, lithofracteur and other explosive or fulminating material, gunflints, gunwads, percussion caps, fuses, and friction tubes, all parts of ammunition and all machinery for manufacturing ammunition, but does not include lead, sulphur or saltpetre:

"Military stores" in any section of this Act as applied to any part of British India means any military stores to which the Governor General in Council may from time to time by notification in the Gazette of India specially extend such section in such part, and includes also all lead, sulphur, saltpetre and other material to which the Governor General in Council may from time to time so extend such section.

"License" means a license granted under this Act, and "licensed" means holding such license.

II.—Manufacture, Conversion and Sale.

5. No person shall manufacture, convert, or sell or keep, offer or expose for sale, any arms, ammunition or military stores except under a license and in the manner and to the extent permitted thereby.

Nothing herein contained shall prevent any person from selling any arms or ammunition which he lawfully possesses for his own private use to any person who is not by any enactment for the time being in force prohibited from possessing the same; but every person so selling arms or ammunition to any person other than a person entitled to possess the same by reason of an exemption under section twenty-seven of this Act shall, without unnecessary delay, give to the Magistrate of the district or to the officer in charge of the nearest police-station notice of the sale and of the purchaser's name and address.

III.—Import, Export and Transport.

6. No person shall bring or take by sea or by land into or out of British India any arms, ammunition or military stores except under a license and in the manner and to the extent permitted by such license.

Nothing in the first clause of this section extends to arms (other than cannon) or ammunition imported or exported in reasonable quantities for his own private use by any person lawfully entitled to possess such arms or ammunition; but the Collector of Customs or any other officer empowered by the Local Government in this behalf by name or in virtue of his office may at any time detain such arms or ammunition until he receives the orders of the Local Government thereon.

Explanation.—Arms, ammunition and military stores taken from one part of British India to another by sea or across intervening territory not being part of British India are taken out of and brought into British India within the meaning of this section.

7. Notwithstanding anything contained in the Sea-customs Act, 1878, no arms, ammunition or military stores shall be deposited in any warehouse licensed under section 16 of that Act without the sanction of the Local Government.

8. In lieu of the duties imposed by the Indian Tariff Act, 1875, upon the articles mentioned in the second schedule hereto annexed when imported by sea, there shall be levied and collected, in every part of British India, upon the same articles the duties specified in the same schedule:

Provided that no duty in excess of ten per cent. ad valorem shall be levied upon any of the said articles imported in reasonable quantity for his own private use by any person lawfully entitled to possess the same:

Provided also that when any articles which have been otherwise imported and upon which duty has been levied or is leviable under this section are purchased retail from the importer by a person lawfully entitled as aforesaid, in reasonable quantity for his own private use, the importer may apply to the Customs-collector for a refund or remission (as the case may be) of so much of the duty thereon as is in excess of ten per cent. ad valorem; and if such collector is satisfied as to the identity of the articles, and that such importer is in other respects entitled to such refund or remission, he shall grant the same accordingly.

9. The Governor General in Council may from time to time by notification in the Gazette of India direct that duties not exceeding those specified in the second schedule hereto annexed shall be levied upon any articles mentioned in that schedule and brought by land into any part of British India, and may in like manner cancel any such notification.

10. The Governor General in Council may from time to time by notification in the Gazette of India—
(a) regulate or prohibit the transport of any description of arms, ammunition or military stores over the whole of British India or any part thereof, either altogether or except under a license and to the extent and in the manner permitted by such license, and

(b) cancel any such notification.

Explanation.—Arms, ammunition or military stores transhipped at a port in British India are transported within the meaning of this section.

11. The Local Government with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council may, at any places along the boundary line between British India and Foreign territory and at such distance within such line as it deems expedient, establish searching posts at which all vessels, carts and baggage animals and all boxes, bales and packages in transit may be stopped and searched for arms, ammunition and military stores by any officer empowered by such Government in this behalf by name or in virtue of his office.

12. When any person is found carrying or conveying any arms, ammunition or military stores, whether covered by a license or not, in such manner or under such circumstances as to afford just grounds of suspicion that the same are being carried by him with intent to use them, or that the same may be used, for any unlawful purpose, any person may without warrant apprehend him and take such arms, ammunition or military stores from him.

Any person so apprehended and any arms, ammunition or military stores so taken by a person not being a Magistrate or Police-officer shall be delivered over as soon as possible to a Police-officer.

All persons apprehended by, or delivered to, a Police-officer and all arms and ammunition seized by or delivered to any such officer under this section shall be taken without unnecessary delay, before a Magistrate.

IV.—Going armed and possessing Arms, &c.

13. No person shall go armed with any arms except under a license and to the extent and in the manner permitted thereby.

Any person so going armed without a license or in contravention of its provisions may be disciplined by any Magistrate, Police-officer or other person empowered by the Local Government in this behalf by name or by virtue of his office.

14. No person shall have in his possession or under his control any cannon or fire-arms, or any ammunition or military stores except under a license and in the manner and to the extent permitted thereby.

During the three months next following the date on which this Act comes into force nothing in the former part of this section shall apply to the possession by any person of any fire-arms, ammunition or military stores in any place to which section 32, clause 2, of Act No. XXXI of 1860 does not apply at such date.

Any person having within the said period of three months any fire-arms, ammunition or military stores in his possession in any such place may, and any person having at the expiry of the same period any fire-arms, ammunition or military stores in his possession in any such place without a license, shall deposit the same with the officer in charge of the nearest police-station.

If the owner of any thing deposited under this section does not within the year next following the date on which this Act comes into force, obtain a license authorizing him to possess such thing and apply for delivery of the same, such thing shall be forfeited to Her Majesty.

15. In any place to which section 32, clause 2 of Act No. XXXI of 1860, applies at the time this Act comes into force or to which the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may by notification in the local official Gazette specially extend this section, no person shall have in his possession any arms of any description except under a license and in the manner and to the extent permitted thereby.

16. Any person possessing arms, ammunition, or military stores, the possession whereof by him has, in consequence of the cancellation or expiry of a license or by the issue of a notification under section fifteen become unlawful, shall deposit the same without unnecessary delay with the officer in charge of the nearest police-station.

If the owner of any thing deposited under this section does not within three years from the date on which such thing is so deposited produce a license authorising him to possess the same and apply for delivery of the same, such thing shall be forfeited to Her Majesty.

V.—Licenses.

17. The Governor General in Council may from time to time, by notification

Power to make rules as to licenses.

in the Gazette of India, make rules to determine the officers by whom, the form, in which, and the terms and conditions on and subject to which, any license shall be granted; and may by such rules among other matters—

(a) fix the period for which such license shall continue in force;

(b) fix a fee payable by stamp or otherwise in respect of any such license granted in a place to which section 32, clause 2, of Act No. XXXI of 1860 applies at the time this Act comes into force, or in respect of any such license other than a license for possession granted in any other place;

(c) direct that the holder of any such license other than a license for possession shall keep a record or account in such form as the Local Government may prescribe of anything done under such license, and exhibit such record or account when called upon by an officer of Government to do so;

(d) empower any officer of Government to enter and inspect any premises in which arms, ammunition or military stores are manufactured or kept by any person holding a license of the description referred to in section five or section six;

(e) direct that any such person shall exhibit the entire stock of arms, ammunition and military stores in his possession or under his control to any officer of Government so empowered, and

(f) require the person holding any license or acting under any license to produce the same, and to produce or account for the arms, ammunition or military stores covered by the same when called upon by an officer of Government so to do.

Cancelling and suspension of license.

18. Any license may be cancelled or suspended—

(a) by the officer by whom the same was granted, or by any authority to which he may be subordinate, or by any Magistrate of a district or commissioner of police in a presidency town, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the holder of such license may be, when, for reasons to be recorded in writing, such officer, authority, Magistrate or commissioner deems it necessary for the security of the public peace to cancel or suspend such license; or

(b) by any Judge or Magistrate before whom the holder of such license is convicted of an offence against this Act, or against the rules made under this Act; and the Local Government may at its discretion by a notification in the local official Gazette cancel or suspend all or any licenses throughout the whole or any portion of the territories under its administration.

VI.—Penalties.

For breach of sections 5, 6, 10, 13 to 17.

19. Whoever commits any of the following offences (namely)—

(a) manufactures, converts or sells, or keeps, offers or exposes for sale any arms, ammunition or military stores in contravention of the provisions of section five;

(b) fails to give notice as required by the same section;

(c) imports or exports any arms, ammunition or military stores in contravention of the provisions of section six;

(d) transports any arms, ammunition or military stores in contravention of a regulation or prohibition issued under section ten;

(e) goes armed in contravention of the provisions of section thirteen;

(f) has in his possession or under his control any arms, ammunition or military stores in contravention of the provisions of section fourteen or section fifteen;

(g) intentionally makes any false entry in a record or account which by a rule made under section seventeen, clause (c), he is required to keep;

(h) intentionally fails to exhibit anything which by a rule made under section seventeen, clause (c), he is required to exhibit; or

(i) fails to deposit arms, ammunition or military stores, as required by section fourteen or section sixteen;

shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

20. Whoever does any act mentioned in clause

For secret breaches of sections 5, 6, 10, 14 and 15.

(a), (c), (d) or (f) of section nineteen, in such manner as to indicate an intention that such act may not be known to any public servant as defined in the Indian Penal Code, or to any person employed upon a Railway or to the servant of any public carrier, and whoever, on any search being made under section twenty-five, conceals or attempts to conceal any arms, ammunition or military stores, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years, or with fine, or with both.

21. Whoever, in violation of a condition subject to which a license has been granted, does or omits to do any act shall, when the doing or omitting to do such act is not punishable under section nineteen or section twenty, be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

22. Whoever knowingly purchases any arms, ammunition or military stores from any person not licensed or authorized under the proviso to section five to sell the same; or delivers any arms, ammunition or military stores into the possession of any person without previously ascertaining that such person is legally authorized to possess the same, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

23. Any person violating any rule made under this Act, and for the violation of which no penalty is provided by this Act, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with both.

Penalty for breach of rule.

24. When any person is convicted of an offence punishable under this Act committed by him in respect of any arms, ammunition or military stores, it shall be in the discretion of the convicting Court or Magistrate further to direct that the whole or any portion of such arms, ammunition or military stores, and any vessel, cart or baggage animal used to convey the same, and any box, package or bale in which the same may have been concealed, together with the other contents of such box, package or bale, shall be confiscated.

Power to confiscate

VII.—Miscellaneous.

25. Whenever any Magistrate has reason to believe that any person residing within the local limits of his jurisdiction has in his possession any arms, ammunition or military stores for any unlawful purpose,

Search and seizure by Magistrate.

or that such person cannot be left in the possession of any such arms, ammunition or military stores without danger to the public peace, such Magistrate, having first recorded the grounds of his belief, may cause a search to be made of the house or premises occupied by such person, or in which such Magistrate has reason to believe such arms, ammunition or military stores are or is to be found, and may seize and detain the same, although covered by a license, in safe custody for such time as he thinks necessary.

The search in such case shall be conducted by, or in the presence of, a Magistrate, or by or in the presence of some officer, specially empowered in this behalf by name or in virtue of his office by the Local Government.

26. The Local Government may at any time order or cause to be seized any arms, ammunition or military stores in the possession of any person, notwithstanding that such person is licensed to possess the same, and may detain the same for such time as it thinks necessary for the public safety.

Seizure and detention by Local Government.

27. The Governor General in Council may from time to time by notification published in the Gazette of India—

Power to exempt.

(a) exempt any person by name or in virtue of his office or any class of persons or exclude any description of arms or ammunition or withdraw any part of British India, from the operation of any prohibition or direction contained in this Act; and

(b) cancel any such notification and again subject the persons or things or the part of British India comprised therein to the operation of such prohibition or direction.

28. Every person aware of the commission of any offence punishable under this Act, shall in the absence of reasonable excuse, the burden of proving which shall lie upon such Information to be given regarding offences.

person, give information of the same to the nearest Police-officer or Magistrate, and every person employed upon any railway or by any public carrier shall, in the absence of reasonable excuse, the burden of proving which shall lie upon such person, give information to the nearest Police-officer regarding any box, package or bale in transit which he may have reason to suspect contains arms, ammunition or military stores in respect of which an offence against this Act has been or is being committed.

29. Where an offence punishable under section nineteen, clause (f), has been committed within three months from the date on which this Act comes into force in any province, district or place to which section 32, clause 2 of Act XXXI of 1860 applies at such date or where such an offence has been committed in any part of British India not being such a district, province or place, no proceedings shall be instituted against any person in respect of such offence without the previous sanction of the Magistrate of the district or in a presidency town of the commissioner of police.

30. Where a search is to be made under the Code of Criminal Procedure or the Presidency Magistrates Act, 1877, in the course of any proceedings instituted in respect of an offence punishable under section nineteen, clause (f), such search shall, notwithstanding anything contained in the said Code or Act, be made in the presence of some officer specially appointed by name or in virtue of his office by the Local Government in this behalf, and not otherwise.

31. Nothing in this Act shall be deemed to prevent any person from being prosecuted under any other law for any act or omission which constitutes an offence against this Act or the rules made under it, or from being liable under such other law to any higher punishment or penalty than that provided by this Act: Provided that no person shall be punished twice for the same offence.

Operation of other laws not barred.

32. The Local Government may from time to time by notification in the local official Gazette direct a census to be taken of all fire-arms in any local area, and empower any person by name or in virtue of his office to take such census.

On the issue of any such notification, all persons possessing any such arms in such area shall furnish to the person so empowered such information as he may require in reference thereto, and shall produce such arms to him if he so requires.

Any person refusing or neglecting to produce any such arms when so required, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with both.

33. No proceeding other than a suit shall be commenced against any person for any thing done in pursuance of this Act, without having given him at least one month's previous notice in writing of the intended proceeding and of the cause thereof, nor after the expiration of three months from the accrual of such cause.

Notice and limitation of proceedings.

ARMS BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir EDWARD BAYLEY presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Arms, Ammunition and Military Stores. He said that as the Bill was one of considerable interest to the public, and as many objections had been made to it in the shape in which it originally stood, by persons of all classes, it might perhaps be advisable to give some sketch of the alterations which the Select Committee had introduced in the Bill with the view of meeting such of those objections as seemed to them valid.

One part of section 5 of the Bill as introduced required all persons, other than licensed vendors, selling arms or ammunition, to give notice in all to the officer in charge of the nearest Police-station. In the new Bill, this notice was now dispensed with where the purchaser was a person exempted under section 27, and it was further provided that notice, where still necessary, should be given to the Magistrate of the district instead of at the Police-station, which, especially in the case of transactions in which Europeans were concerned, might sometimes be more convenient to the parties. As he should have occasion to point out, another provision had been introduced, which, with practically very much less inconvenience and irritation to private parties, secured the objects which it was intended to secure by these provisions of section 5, and they might therefore safely be omitted.

In respect to the duties imposed under section 7 of the Bill, very much comment had been elicited alike from the public Press, the Local Governments, and private persons. The objection commonly taken had been that these would press unfairly upon those who were loyal and well-disposed, and who were desirous to obtain arms, whether for sporting or other legitimate purposes, especially in those districts bordering upon forests or other places infested with wild beasts, and where fire-arms were required as a means of protection for themselves or against the destruction of their crops. Those objections were doubtless well founded, and to meet them the Committee had provided, that when persons exempted or excused themselves imported any fire-arms or purchased them from the importers, they would be entitled to a drawback upon the duty specified in the schedule, which would bring it down to the level of the duty at present in force, and also would not exceed in any one case ten per cent. ad valorem. As a matter of fact, this alteration would produce a slight reduction in the duty now payable upon the higher classes of fire-arms. There was also a provision which was not entirely new, though new to this Bill. It was a section which was inserted with the object partly of drawing attention to the provisions of the Customs Act, and partly with the object of applying them in a slightly modified form to the importation of arms. That was to say, it permitted the conversion of the private shops or offices of an importing firm into bonding warehouses, in which they might store the arms imported, and pay duty upon them only as they were withdrawn for sale. This amendment was introduced to meet an objection which had been made—a legitimate one—by a large firm, that they would otherwise have to pay down on importation a large amount of duty, and, perhaps, it would be a long time before they got any return. This provision would meet that objection.

With regard also to the schedule of dutiable articles, some minor articles had, on reconsideration, been struck out of it, and with regard to all other articles which were the appendages of fire-arms, it was provided that, when they were imported and fitted in the same case as the fire-arms, they would be exempt from the payment of duty.

The next alteration to which SIR EDWARD BAYLEY would refer, was that, while the draft Bill provided for importation by sea, it overlooked the possibility of importation by land. There were several foreign sea-ports on the coast, and this fact made it necessary to introduce provision for importation by land also, and therefore the clause which applied to importation by sea was made to apply also to importation by land.

There was another clause which was new, and which was the only point in which he thought the Select Committee had increased the rigidity of the Bill; but it had been inserted on the special recommendation of the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjáb. The new clause empowered the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council, to appoint searching-places at certain points within our frontier, whenever there was a belief that arms or ammunition were likely to be exported over the frontier.

In section 11 of the Bill there was also a very material alteration. As introduced, the Bill prohibited the possession of arms of any description without a license. In that form it would have been an unnecessarily sweeping measure, and in fact, the form which the original Bill assumed in this respect was due perhaps to an oversight. Under the old law a difference was made, as he had explained before, between certain proclaimed and unproclaimed districts, and that difference was practically swept away by the draft Bill. The Committee had thought it right to restore that distinction so far, that in a district proclaimed the possession of all arms would need to be licensed, but in a dis-strict which was not proclaimed, licenses would only be required for the possession of fire-arms.

There was another difficulty in regard to the disposal of arms which were deposited under sections 11 and 14,—that was to say, arms which came properly into the possession of people, but in which the legal possession of them had ceased and which therefore came under the custody of the Police. It had been provided that they should remain for a year liable to be claimed by the owner in one case, and in another case, which was a more difficult one, for three years. If at the end of that time they were not claimed and legally dealt with, they would be forfeited.

There was another question which was a matter of greater difficulty, and the Committee were unanimous in opinion regarding it. It referred to the levy of fees for licenses to possess, but not for licenses to manufacture or import or transport. On the whole, considering the many difficulties which existed, it was considered advisable that the former class of licenses should be freed from taxation. It was a matter of some difficulty, because it somewhat affected the resources of the Local Governments, which had hitherto derived some revenue from this source. But he thought the arguments which convinced the Committee ought to prevail; the question, however, was one which was open to discussion hereafter.

There was another section also of some degree of stringency which was taken from the Code of Criminal Procedure. Section 28 required information to be given by any person who had a knowledge of any offence committed against the provisions of the proposed Act. A clause to that effect existed in the Criminal Procedure Code, in regard to many offences of a nature parallel to those punishable under this Act, and all that had been done was practically to apply that section to the present law.

Then in section 32 came another new provision, which was intended to take the place of that in section 5 of the draft Bill, which required notices to be given at the Police-office by persons selling arms. The real object of this provision was to enable the Government to know where arms were held, and to detect whether they had been legally imported or otherwise. All that was intended was that persons who possessed arms should be held liable to fill up returns when required to do so. The Committee did not think that that was an unnecessary interference with private convenience; it was a form of enquiry which would give very little trouble, would not be frequently resorted to, and which might be of great use.

Beyond these, there were some minor alterations in the details of the Bill. But they were almost all purely matters of drafting, intended to bring the provisions of the Code into harmony with other enactments, and to make its meaning clear.

Under these circumstances, as almost all the changes which had been made, although of some importance, were in the interests of the public and in the direction of relaxing the stringency of the Bill, the Committee did not consider that it need be republished as altered by them.

INDIAN FOREST BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. HOPE moved that the Reports of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the law relating to the management and preservation of Government forests, to the transit of forest-produce, and to the duty leviable on timber be taken into consideration. He said: "On introducing this Bill above a year ago, I explained the necessity for a new law, but some further exposition may not be out of place. Act VII of 1865, which is the present law, is framed upon the basis that the Government may make into a 'Government forest' any jungly land it pleases, provided that its selection does not abridge or affect any existing rights of individuals or communities. Consequently, if in any instance it was found necessary for Forest purposes to acquire any private land or rights, the Government was left to do so by means of the ordinary law for the acquisition of land for public purposes. Act VII of 1865 was almost immediately found to be more or less unsuitable for the purposes in view, and the Governments of Madras and Bombay have, in consequence, never availed themselves of the power of extending it to their territories, which it conferred upon them.

"In October, 1868, the draft of a new Act, and a memorandum explaining very clearly the defects of the present one, were laid before the Government of India by Mr. Brandis. I am well aware that Mr. Brandis has a reputation quite independent of any praise of mine, but I feel constrained not to allow this occasion to pass without recording, that to his vast knowledge of forest matters, to his sound discretion and his unfailing energy, British India is chiefly indebted for the very great progress in forest conservation which has been made in all the Provinces more directly under the Government of India during the fourteen years for which he has held the office of Inspector-General of Forests. I will now briefly describe the chief deficiencies of Act VII of 1865. It drew no distinction between the forests which required to be closely reserved, even at the cost of more or less interference with private rights, and those which merely needed general control to prevent improvident working. It also provided no procedure for inquiring into and settling the rights which it so vaguely saved, and gave no powers for regulating the exercise of such rights without appropriating them. It obliged you, in short, either to take entirely, or to let alone entirely. On control over private forests in the general interest of the community, it was absolutely silent. For duties on timber, even those actually levied, it gave no authority. Protection for Government forests so interlaced with private ones as to be in chronic danger of plunder, there was none. In various minor points also it was deficient.

"The draft and memorandum by Mr. Brandis, to which I have alluded, set rolling the stone of discussion which is in motion up to the present day. Since then we have had drafts and counter-drafts, reports and memoranda innumerable; we have had two forest conferences, at one of which were present representatives of the Forest Department from all parts of India, and the proceedings of both of which have been printed; and, finally, we have the present Bill, which has been under active consideration for nearly two years, and has been twice reported on, in its successive stages, by all the Local Governments and their more experienced officers. Meanwhile, during these ten years, the Provinces have been getting on as best they could, some under the existing Act, others under no Act at all. In some parts the people have been suffering through encroachment by Forest Officers on their ill-defined rights, in others the community at large have been suffering by progressive denudation of forest-lands. In some Provinces where the Act is in force, there is a singular confusion of rules, imperfect rules, Regulations, and no rules, of which I gave the Panjáb as an illustration on the last occasion when I had the honour of addressing the Council on this Bill. And all the while we have been struggling on as best we could to meet the real wants and necessities of the case. We have been demarcating reserves, constituting district forests and endeavouring to protect them, enquiring into rights, and recording, buying up, continuing or commuting them. In fact, we have got an existing state of things totally at variance with the existing law.

"The case for legislation, therefore, whether for the Provinces with a bad law, or the Provinces with no law, is, I submit, complete. Whatever may be the faults of the present measure, it cannot be said that we have been proceeding otherwise than cautiously and gradually. If, after spending ten years in finding out what we want, we proceed to supply it, we cannot be accused of hasty legislation. In proof that we were well supplying it I quoted, when presenting our last report, the terms of approval with which Bill No. I had been received by all the Local Governments except Madras. I am glad to say that this approval has been generally repeated in the case of Bill No. II. I may quote a few instances. Of the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Chief Commissioner of Oudh, we hear that the Bill 'seems to His Honour to be very complete.' The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, while 'generally accepting the provisions of the Bill,' makes a few minor suggestions. From Bombay we learn that 'the Indian Forest Bill as it now stands seems to this Government a very good one, and the Report of the Select Committee covers all that is necessary.' The Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces 'cordially approves of the Bill, as calculated to meet a long-felt want: he will be very glad when it becomes law and he is able to apply it to these Provinces.' But the Local Governments generally have done more than approve. Nine out of eleven of them have expressed their desire that the first section of the Bill should be altered, so that the Act might apply directly to their Provinces, and the trouble and delay of separate extensions might be thus avoided. The two dissentients were Ajmer and Madras. The Chief Commissioner of Ajmer pointed out, and with reason, that as there were as yet scarcely any standing forests in Ajmer, and they were only attempting to grow them, the simple Regulation passed three years ago under 33 Viet., cap. 3, would answer all purposes for some years to come. The Madras Government objected to the revised Bill on much the same grounds as those on which they objected to the original one. They considered it unsuited to the circumstances of Southern India, and preferred legislating locally—which it is of course open to them to do. In consequence of these representations, the Bill is now, by section 1, made directly applicable to Bombay, Lower Bengal, the North-Western Provinces, the Panjab (except the Hazára district), Oudh, the Central Provinces and Assam. The same course has not been followed, the Council will observe, in the case of Coorg and British Burma, though the Chief Commissioners of both desired it. Coorg, it was thought, ought to have the same law as Madras, whatever that might be, and for British Burma the Executive Department of the Government of India considered it best to leave the extension to be made hereafter by a separate notification. Ajmer, Coorg, British Burma and Madras will therefore remain, as in the Bill when introduced, in this position, that the Local Government possesses the initiative and may apply the Act or not, as it thinks proper, subject, in the former case only, to the sanction of the Governor General in Council. I may remark, with special reference to Madras, that this position is practically identical with that which it now holds with regard to Act VII of 1865. I would here only add that I trust that sanction to apply the Act to British Burma will be at once applied for. It has been ascertained by exhaustive analysis that there is not a single local peculiarity which the Bill does not sufficiently provide for. The Chief Commissioner has asked for the direct application of the Act, and formally reported that he considers any separate Act for British Burma quite unnecessary, while officers well acquainted with Burma, in whose opinion I place the utmost confidence, assure me that its effect will be most beneficial, and that it will much accelerate the progress of demarcation and conservancy.

"Having thus explained the scope and application of the Bill, I will mention a few material changes last made in it by the Select Committee. First, in order to prevent any inconvenience arising from the direct application to certain Provinces, we have added a clause to section 1, validating all existing rules so far as they are not inconsistent with the Act. At the same time, the majority of such rules are in one way or another incomplete, incongruous, superfluous, or ultra vires. I trust that the Local Governments will lose no time in exercising the power the Act will afford, of replacing them by clear and full rules in correct relation to the several chapters. Again, we have made a slight alteration in the terms of the restriction in section 4, as to who may be appointed Forest-settlement Officer, in order to meet a technical clashing with the definition of 'Forest Officer' in section 2. But we still fully mean to indicate the desire of the Legislature that the post of Forest-settlement Officer should never, except possibly under some very extraordinary circumstances, be held by a member of the Forest Department.

"A third important change is in section 22 of Bill No. II, which has been recast and appears as section 34 of Bill No. III. The intention of section 22 of course was, that forests which are now so closely reserved as to be subject to restrictions practically, if not precisely, such as a forest might be which was reserved for the first time by enquiry under the new Act, should be constituted reserves under the latter. And provision against any injustice in individual cases was made by the second clause of the section, allowing enquiry into undjudicated claims. It has, however, been pointed out that this intention is not expressed with sufficient clearness, and that as the term 'reserved' has hitherto been very loosely used, and applied to forests with very varying degrees of increased cost, without adequate return, increased apathy, increased ignorance among the people on the very points on which increased energy and the extensive knowledge only to be acquired by experience, is essential.' The holders of such opinions would retain, indeed, any reserves which Government actually possesses, but would not extend them. It would suffice, they think, that every means should be taken to enhance and secure to zamindárs the full benefit of all their forest-produce and of their planted lands. To induce them to conserve that which has only a future value, their tenure should be assured rather than made more doubtful; they should be encouraged to utilise their tracts of waste as a sure property. * * * Village-communities should, in the same way, be encouraged to preserve and improve their own customary forests or jungles by reaping to their village benefits therefrom.' In short, if you want the forests preserved, only let the people alone, and they will do it. With any such theory I fundamentally join issue. From all that I have read and heard; from all that I have seen during a not inconsiderable experience of forest-administration, I believe such a theory to be a delusion, and a most mischievous one. Whatever you do, do as leniently as possible; do equitably, and only as far as is well shewn to be necessary in each case, but act you must, if you are to save what is left of the once vast forests of India, to check deterioration of climate, and to diminish risks of famine. Under any system of laissez faire you are only fiddling, while Rome, or your forest, is burning. The effects of such a system under Native Governments, and during the earlier years of our own rule, are written in broad letters upon a thousand hills, and nowhere are they written more plainly, if we may trust that evidence of one of our most distinguished administrators which I read to the Council when presenting Bill No. 11, than upon the uplands of Southern India. Surely it behoves us, in this our day, to do what we can to prevent additions to the melancholy record. The final issue, then, is simple. If the Council prefer the principle of the Bill to any such theory, then I submit that the details are well calculated to carry out that principle. The Bill is, doubtless, not perfect; but I am not aware that absolute perfection is expected in this or any other branch of legislation. The Bill has been long and carefully considered; it is as good as it is likely to be with our present knowledge and experience, and as such I offer it for the acceptance of the Council."

The Hon'ble SIR J. STRACHEY said:—"My LORD, I agree so completely with all that my hon'ble friend Mr. Hope has said in regard to the principles on which this Bill is framed, and I think the Bill generally so good, that I do not wish to discuss it at any length.

"There is one point only on which, for special reasons, I wish to make a few remarks.

"Special reference was made by Mr. Hope to the changes which have been made in what is now section 34 of the Bill, and he stated that it affected in particular certain forests in Kumáon in the North-Western Provinces. Having been myself in past times interested, in various official capacities, in the forest-tract in question, I wish to say a few words on the same subject, with the view of giving further emphasis to my hon'ble friend's explanation.

"Although my hon'ble friend may very possibly, with his greater knowledge of this Bill, have been right in his belief that the section as it formerly stood would not have had any mischievous effects if it had been passed into law, I was one of those who looked upon that section with extreme distrust. It declared that every forest constituted a reserved forest previous to the date on which the Act came into force should be deemed to have been constituted a reserved forest under this Act.

"If the term 'reserved forest' had signified up to the present time a reserved forest in the same sense in which that term is used in the Bill, such a provision would have been quite reasonable. The term 'reserved forest' has, however, up to the present time had no definite meaning at all. In some parts of the country it has signified a close forest strictly preserved as the property of Government, and in which no private rights exist. In other cases the term has been applied to forests which hardly deserve the name, where the rights of the Government are comparatively unimportant, and where the people have from time immemorial been in the enjoyment of large and admitted rights. Under such circumstances, it seems to me that it was impossible to declare with propriety that there should be applied to all forests hitherto called reserved forests the very serious conditions which are applicable to reserved forests constituted under this Act. The future position of a forest, and the nature of the rights to be exercised in it by the Government and by private individuals or communities, might have depended on the accident of the name by which the forest had been designated at a time when that name had no definite signification. It is true that there was a proviso to the section as it stood, which was intended to protect existing private rights, and my hon'ble friend may be correct in his belief that all necessary protection would thus have been afforded. I cannot say that this is my own opinion.

"In spite of this proviso, I fear that we should have found that serious injustice might have followed. However this may be, I think it highly desirable to remove all doubts, and I think this will be done in a satisfactory way by the section as now amended. The responsibility will then be placed on the Local Governments of determining, after careful consideration of each particular case, what forests are actually in the position of reserved or protected forests in the meaning of those terms as they are used in the Act. With the provisos by which the new section is guarded, it will be made clear that it is not the intention of the Legislature to make by this section any change in the respective positions held by the State or by individuals in any forest, but that all existing rights shall remain unaltered.

"I am, with my hon'ble friend, sure that this section will be applied by the Local Government in a manner which will lead to no injustice.

"I feel, however, that great care will be necessary, and there are special reasons in Northern India, of which alone I have any personal knowledge, which render such care peculiarly important.

"In Northern India the position held by the Forest Department is less satisfactory than that which it holds in the Bombay Presidency, with which my hon'ble friend who has charge of this Bill is so well acquainted. Instead of being, as I think it ought always to be, intimately connected with the regular administration of the country, the Forest Department is in a great measure a thing apart. The District Revenue Authorities who know the people best—who are, I may say, the natural guardians of the people's rights, and who possess at the same time an influence which gives them the best possible means of protecting the interests of the Government—have practically little or no voice in the management of the Forest Department.

"The Forest Officer ought, in my opinion, to be an expert, performing his duties under the control of the Revenue Authorities of the district. He ought not to exercise, independently of such control, powers which may, sometimes seriously affect private rights and interests, the protection of which may be more important than the protection of the forests themselves. In my opinion—and I speak as an ex-Lieutenant Governor who has had some experience of the matter—the present state of things is not in this respect satisfactory, and its existence will render it necessary to exercise peculiar care in the application of this section.

"These, of course, are questions with which the Executive Government, and not this Council, has to deal; but I think it right to notice them prominently, because the failure or success of this important measure will depend on the manner in which practical effect is given to its provisions. No man can recognize more fully than I do the extreme value of the work which the Forest Department has been performing under its admirable chief, Mr. Brandis, regarding whom I need only say that I heartily concur in every word that Mr. Hope has said in his praise.

"It is precisely because I feel so strongly the value of the Forest Department that I desire to see the system under which it works made to fit as completely as possible into the ordinary administration of the country. I will only add further that I am satisfied that this Bill is a very good one. I believe it will supply a want which has been very seriously felt, and that it will not only give increased protection to a most valuable source of the national wealth, but that it will also afford better protection to the rights of private individuals and communities. I think that the thanks of Government and the public are due to my 'hon'ble friend Mr. Hope for the care and ability which he has devoted to this Bill."

The Hon'ble SIR ANDREW CLARKE said that he came to the Council that morning prepared to support this Bill. But after the remarks which had fallen from his hon'ble colleague Sir John Strachey, he must say that he did not feel himself in a position to give his silent adhesion to it. It appeared to him that the Council were asked to pass an instrument which was to be put into the hands of the Government and to be worked by an agency in which the Government itself had no confidence, and he therefore felt himself constrained to oppose the passing of a measure which involved so serious a risk. He must say, also, that in some of the earlier remarks which had been made by the hon'ble mover of the Bill, there appeared to be more of excuse offered for the Bill than of justification of the measure. From those remarks he inferred that the Bill involved the extinction of a large number of private rights, and the observations which had been made by Sir John Strachey seemed to confirm that view. SIR ANDREW CLARKE therefore thought it desirable, after what had passed, that the Bill should be referred back to the Select Committee, and that his hon'ble colleague Sir John Strachey should be added to the Committee, in order that there might be introduced into the Bill such measures as were found necessary to provide against the dangers to which the working of the Bill seemed likely to lead; and he also thought that measures of executive reform should also be considered by the Government in reference to the Forest Department. As he had said before, he had been taken by surprise, and after what had fallen from his hon'ble colleague, unless some satisfactory explanation could be given (which he had no doubt could be done), he certainly could not silently give his adherence to the passing of this Bill.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT said his hon'ble colleague Sir Andrew Clarke appeared to him to have very considerably misunderstood the observations both of his hon'ble friend Mr. Hope and of his hon'ble colleague who had last spoken. But he wished to point out that Sir Andrew Clarke had placed the Council in this embarrassment—that he had made observations which had no reference to the motion which was now before the Council, and was not included in the motion itself.

The Hon'ble SIR ANDREW CLARKE observed that he was asked to pass a measure in reference to the practical working of which a member of this Council of great experience had expressed serious misgivings, and being thus taken by surprise, he felt himself bound to say that he was not prepared to allow the Bill to pass into law with a silent vote.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN STRACHEY said:—"My Lord, I ask Your Excellency's permission to say a very few words in explanation, in reply to the remarks which have fallen from my hon'ble friend Sir A. Clarke.

"I fear that I must have expressed my opinions very badly, for my hon'ble friend has entirely misunderstood what I intended to say. I have thrown no reflections whatever on the Forest Department; on the other hand, I have expressed my sense of its extreme value. Nor have I said a word to show that I think that this Bill when passed into law will lead to the infringement of private rights. On the other hand, I have said that I believe it will give better protection to those rights than that which now exists. It will certainly take away no protection that the law now affords. There is nothing in anything which I have said which can justify the opinion that the Bill ought not to be

The Hon'ble SIR ANDREW CLARKE remarked that his hon'ble friend had misunderstood him. The difficulty that he felt, after having heard his hon'ble friend's observations, was as to the agency by which the measure must be worked: he did not see how the Bill was going to be worked in a satisfactory manner by an agency such as that to which his hon'ble friend alluded.

The Hon'ble SIR ALEXANDER ARBUTHNOT said he wished to say a few words upon the discussion which had just taken place. He gathered from the tenour of the remarks made by Sir John Strachey that his comments referred exclusively to circumstances which he considered to be unsatisfactory in regard to the relations between the special Forest Department and the ordinary administrative authorities of the districts in the part of India in which he had served. Sir John Strachey remarked that in the Presidency of Bombay the case was different; that there, the officers of the Forest Department were more closely in connection with, and Sir ALEXANDER ARBUTHNOT might add that they were, as he understood the matter, employed more in subordination to, the Revenue Collectors in charge of the Bombay Districts. It so happened that just before he left the Madras Presidency, one of the last acts of the Government there was to recommend, and if he remembered rightly to order, that a similar system (and he was not sure that they did not go a step further than the Bombay Government had gone) should be adopted in the Madras Presidency. On that occasion the designation of the head of the Forest Department was changed from that of Conservator of Forests to Inspector of Forests, and the district Forest Officers were made practically, and also by designation—he forgot the exact nomenclature—Forest Assistants to the Collectors of districts. A few years ago (the exact date he could not now call to mind) that system was altered: it did not find favour with the Government of India, as then composed, nor was it approved by the Home Authorities; and accordingly the head of the Forest Department in Madras had been again given the designation of Conservator, and he feared that to some extent the separation which formerly existed between the Forest Department and the Collectors of districts had been revived. He entirely adhered to the views he had held as a member of the Council in Madras, and he concurred in the observations which had been made by Sir John Strachey, as to the expediency of bringing the two authorities into very close connection, and practically of placing the officers of the Forest Department in subordination to Collectors of districts. He had not had the same advantages that Sir John Strachey had had, of practically observing the working of the Forest Department in Northern India, but a great deal of correspondence with reference to the management of the Forests in that part of India, which was one of the Departments under his charge, had come before him. He had had many opportunities of discussing such questions with the Inspector General of Forests under the Government of India, and his impression had been that of late years the object of the head of the Forest Department and of the Local Governments had been to bring the Conservators of Forests much more closely than they used to be, under the orders and under the influence of the local authorities. He thought that, as the late head of a Local Government, Sir John Strachey would confirm him in the statement he was about to make, that in the North-Western Provinces and in the Panjab and in this Province of Bengal, the Conservator of Forests was completely under the orders of the head of the Local Government, though possibly his subordinates were not so much under the orders and influence of local district officers as they might be. It was a question of very great importance. He thought it was very desirable that it should be fully discussed and fully considered, and he was not sorry that his hon'ble friend Sir Andrew Clarke had raised the discussion; for the question was one which certainly ought to receive the careful attention and consideration of the Executive Government. The question, however, was not free from difficulties. As he had just said, it was the unanimous opinion of Lord Napier's Government, that such a policy as that which Sir John Strachey advocated, should be adopted in Madras. But since Lord Napier left Madras, the Madras Government had in some measure retrograded from the policy to which he had alluded, and he had no doubt from what he had seen in the correspondence that various practical difficulties had been experienced. As to the principle of the matter, he entirely agreed with his hon'ble friend Sir John Strachey, and, as he had said before, he thought that every effort should be made to carry out that principle with as little delay as possible. But it did not seem to him that such delay as there might be in assimilating the management of forests in other parts of India to the system which obtained in Bombay, and which he believed was in many respects a better system than that which existed in the other Presidencies, need deter the Council from proceeding with the passing of the Bill.

As his Hon'ble friend Mr. Hope had explained, and explained very clearly, and as SIR ALEXANDER ARBUTHNOT thought was clear from a perusal of the somewhat voluminous papers which had been received from various Local Governments, this Bill did not impose any restrictions on private rights and privileges which were not absolutely essential to efficient conservancy. As, moreover, Sir John Strachey had pointed out, and as Mr. Hope had also remarked, in some respects the Bill gave greater security to the exercise of those rights and of those privileges than was contained in the existing law. For these reasons he thought that it would be a mistake, after the length of time which had been occupied in the discussion and in the consideration of this very important question, that the Council should now pause and hold their hands on the eve of passing the Bill. It was a Bill of very great importance; it was a measure which, as Sir John Strachey had said, not only in the North-West, but in Bombay and in every province of India, would require very careful watching on the part of the Executive Government. That was a remark which might be made with reference to almost every legislative enactment of any importance passed by the Council; but because it was necessary that the Executive Government should carefully watch and pay close attention to the execution of measures which were resolved upon by the Legislature after full discussion and very deliberate and careful consideration, he did not think that was a reason for postponing legislation sine die. Mr. Hope had pointed out that the Bill had been accepted by every local administration in British India except two: one was a very unimportant small province, the small British district of Ajmer, which was in a very exceptional position, surrounded by Native territory; the other was the very much more important Presidency of Madras. It so happened that the Presidency of Madras was the Presidency in which forest-administration was commenced before it was commenced in any other part of India; and it was a Presidency in which, as the Council were aware, a system of tenures prevailed which brought the local officers into very close contact with the people. It was a Presidency in which the feelings and sentiments of the local authorities, from the lowest executive authorities to the highest, had led them to view with perhaps undue suspicion any measures which might in any respect or any degree tend to trench upon the privileges or prejudices of the people. Now, he was one of those who thought—and he had been bred, he might say, in the same school as that to which he had been referring—that very great attention and very great respect should be paid to sentiments and feelings of that description. He believed it was a very good thing in all their legislative measures, that those sentiments should be brought prominently before them, and that they should be compelled to consider, and to pause in the consideration of, their measures with the view of seeing whether in any way they were unduly restricting what had been admitted, even erroneously, to be the rights and privileges of the people, and unduly conflicting with their long-cherished prejudices. But if they were uniformly to yield to those feelings and sentiments, when, after the fullest consideration, they had determined to adopt a certain course of procedure on behalf of the general interests of the community; if by reason of a change of circumstances, the march of civilization, changes in the climate, and many other reasons which he might specify, they found that it was for the general good of the community that so-called rights and privileges should be in some measure curtailed, unless they were prepared to abandon all administrative progress; that, even for the material good of the country, for the mitigation of suffering, for the purpose of preventing the desolation of famines, for the purpose of maintaining the fuel-supply from the destruction in which it might otherwise be involved by the extension of Railways and other causes, then he thought it would not be the part of wisdom—in fact, in his opinion it would be the part of folly—to be deterred from doing that which they considered to be expedient, and that which, after full and careful consideration, they deemed to be right. As regarded the Madras Presidency, this question of Forest legislation had received a great deal of consideration, not only from the Government of India, but from the Secretary of State. In a despatch which the latter authority wrote in 1871—nearly six and a half years ago—he SIR ALEXANDER ARBUTHNOT) found it stated that—

“Of late years sound principles of conservancy had not made the progress which they should have done from the earlier start which they had here (in Madras) over the rest of India.”

And in the same paper the Secretary of State went on to say—

“But the chief remedy for all these difficulties in the way of sound conservancy will probably be found in the demarcation of forests, and the introduction of an Act conferring the necessary legislative powers.”

For some time past, the Madras Government had had under consideration the necessity for local legislation in this matter; and SIR ALEXANDER ARBUTHNOT was aware that they had a Bill before them which had not yet been introduced, but which had been framed by a Committee appointed for the purpose some two or three years ago, and which would possibly eventually become law. Mr. Hope had pointed out that the Bill before the Council had not been made directly applicable to the Presidency of Madras. Under the circumstances, SIR ALEXANDER ARBUTHNOT thought that, in making that recommendation, the Select Committee had exercised a wise discretion, and he would only add that, as the Bill stood, it could not be made applicable to that Presidency without the consent of the Local Government. What he had just said with reference to the Presidency of Madras, and the position in which the question of Forest legislation for that Presidency stood, was perhaps a digression. Returning to the point at which the discussion had commenced, he would again observe that however desirable it might be to improve the agency and the system of Forest-administration, that was, in his opinion, not a valid reason for postponing the passing of this Bill.

He had only one further remark to make, and this was with reference to some of the observations which fell from his hon'ble friend Mr. Hope regarding British Burma at the beginning of his speech. He gathered from what had fallen from Mr. Hope, and he was aware from what had passed in Committee, that this was the view taken by his hon'ble friend, that inasmuch as the Chief Commissioner had assented to the Bill being directly applied to British Burma, it was to be regretted that it had not been so applied. He might be permitted to explain that, as representing the Department of the Executive Government which dealt with Forests, he (SIR ALEXANDER ARBUTHNOT) had opposed the Bill being made directly applicable to Burma, in consequence of doubts very recently expressed by the Inspector-General of Forests, Mr. Brandis, as to the expediency of that measure. Mr. Brandis's views on such a question were entitled to the greatest consideration. He had been the first Conservator of Forests in Burma, and was probably better acquainted with forest-conservancy in Burma than any other person. Mr. Brandis had recently expressed doubts as to whether the Bill was suited to the peculiar circumstances of Burma, and had urged that the question of Forest legislation for that Province should receive further consideration. Under these circumstances, it appeared to SIR ALEXANDER ARBUTHNOT,—and he thought that would be the view of the Council,—that the safest and wisest course was to abandon the idea of directly applying the Bill to Burma, and to leave it to the Executive Government, in communication with the Chief Commissioner and Inspector-General of Forests, to decide that question afterwards.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE PRESIDENT said: “Before putting the motion which I now hold in my hand, I should like to say a few words. I desire to state, on my own behalf, that I appreciate most fully the importance attached by my hon'ble colleagues Sir John Strachey and Sir Alexander Arbuthnot, to the principle of bringing the various conservancy officers in the different localities in which they are employed, more directly under the control of the local officers. I fully share the opinion expressed by my hon'ble friend Sir Alexander Arbuthnot, in the course of what, I must say, appear to me his very statesmanlike remarks on this Bill, that it was not undesirable that that question should have been alluded to in the course of our discussions to-day.

It appears to me, however, self-evident, that this is a question which concerns the consideration of the Executive Government, rather than of this Council, whose functions are purely legislative. The further discussion of the matter in this Council can lead to no practical result; and besides it must be borne in mind that the Government, which, perhaps of all others, is most interested in the practical application of the principle referred to by my hon'ble friend Sir John Strachey; namely, the Government of the North-Western Provinces, is one of the Governments which have not only approved of this Bill, but have applied for its direct and immediate application. I think therefore we should not be justified in wasting the result of ten years' deliberate preparation for legislation, simply because such legislation is not unconnected with questions which demand the consideration of the Executive Government."

The Hon'ble Mr. Horn said in reply, that he had but little to add upon the discussion which had taken place. His hon'ble friend Sir A. Clarke had observed that some of his remarks were an excuse for, rather than a justification of, infringement of private rights. But he had certainly not meant to offer anything which could be deemed merely an excuse, and he was not aware of any expressions having fallen from him which were capable of such an interpretation. With regard to the observations of his hon'ble friend Sir John Strachey, they related to the Executive Forest-machinery, which was a subject not dealt with in the Bill, and they appeared to have been merely intended as suggestive to the Executive Department of the Government. Whether the Forest-officers in the one part of India to which alone the Hon'ble Member's remarks had reference were or were not open to the strictures passed upon them, it was not for him to say, as he had no experience of that part. But he ventured to suggest that they were, not only individually as honest and conscientious as officers in any other branch of the public service, and that possibly any unsatisfactory action on their part was in no small degree attributable to the imperfection and obscurity of the law or rules under which they had worked. Now that there was a clear law and a clear policy, he hoped that they would be able to perform their duties with less risk of error or misconception.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. Horn also moved that the Bill as amended be passed.
The Motion was put and agreed to.

SEA CUSTOMS BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. Horn also moved that the Reports of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the laws relating to the administration of the Department of Sea Customs in India be taken into consideration. He said—

"When introducing this Bill some sixteen months ago, I explained the necessity for the measure, mentioned a few of the principal changes made, and expressed the desire of Government to facilitate trade and adapt the law to the present circumstances of the country, to the utmost extent consistent with the safety of the revenue and the necessity for registration of trade statistics. Since then, Committees constituted by the Local Governments at Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, and partly composed of gentlemen of the mercantile community, as also the various Customs authorities, have reported on Bill No. I. Bill No. II was next issued and fully reported on officially. The Chambers of Commerce of Madras and Bombay also favoured us with communications, the latter with a long and important paper containing many very valuable suggestions. In November, 1877, I visited Bombay in order to confer with the Chamber of Commerce there, who were so good as to hold a special meeting for the purpose. Finally, the Select Committee have carefully considered the whole, with the valuable assistance of my hon'ble friend Mr. Morgan. The result is Bill No. III, now before the Council. As the Bill is so voluminous, I will do no more in explanation than to notice, under a few general heads, the provisions which differ from the present law in matters affecting more or less materially the interest of commerce.

"In the first place, section 12 constitutes a new class of sub-ports, to consist of places where a small trade has sprung up not sufficient to render a full

Customs establishment remunerative. These ports will be allowed to trade with certain Customs ports near them, to which they are affiliated. The occasion has arisen in Burma, but I hope that the power may be used for the development of local trade in other parts of India. Again, in section 18, we have provided, at the instance of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, against the importation of articles bearing any names, brands or marks, being, or purporting to be, brands and marks of manufacturers resident in the United Kingdom or British India, and not made by such manufacturers.

“Under the head of what may be termed reductions of duties or burdens of one sort or another of direct pecuniary effect, I may enumerate the following. By section 34 the limit of damage for which remission of duty can be obtained for tarified goods, has been lowered from one-fifth to one-tenth. By section 39 the period during which owners will be liable to claims by Government for duties short-levied or erroneously refunded, has been reduced from six to three months, concurrently with similar reduction of the liability of Government.

By section 42 drawback is now allowed upon provisions and stores for use on board ships proceeding to Foreign Ports. By section 71 the two fifteen-day periods for which vessels were allowed the free services of a Customs-officer during discharge and loading respectively, have been amalgamated, so that a longer time may be occupied in either process without involving extra charge until the total of thirty days has been exceeded. In section 88, the period after which unclaimed goods may be sold by Government has been extended, from two months to four, and notice is required to be given to the owner if his address can be ascertained. Section 100 comprises leave to bottle-off wine and spirit in bond. Section 109 dispenses with a fresh bond on removal of goods from one warehouse to another. By section 132, transshipment of stores is allowed between vessels owned only in part by the same persons. In section 133, weight, measurement, quantity and number have been added to the standards according to which transshipment fees may be levied. In section 139, the additional charge on goods cleared for shipment after grant of port-clearance has been reduced from two to four per cent. Section 148 contains an important alteration permitting spirit exported under bond from one Customs-port to another to be admitted at the latter on payment of excise-duty at the ordinary rate to which spirit of the like kind and strength is there subject, instead of import-duty at Rs. four per gallon.

“For the facilitation of discharge and shipment some material modifications of the law have been made. Section 60 allows delivery of the manifest by a ship's agent before the arrival of the ship, and section 66 extends to five days the period after departure of the ship within which an export manifest may be put in. Under sections 74 and 76 the landing and shipping at particular wharves, and in the presence of officers of Customs, as also the use of boat-notes, may be dispensed with—a power which it is expected will be used materially to facilitate operations in the Port of Calcutta. Section 87 contains special provisions, framed in consequence of representations by the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, in order to allow of the immediate unloading of vessels.

“By way of simplification of procedure, an agent has been allowed (section 5) to do, with the express or implied consent of the master, anything which the master is required or empowered to do under the Act. By section 29 an importer unacquainted with the nature of goods to his address is allowed to deposit them in a warehouse until he can obtain information. Section 41 allows of an account current of duties and charges being kept with any mercantile firm or public body and settled periodically, so as to save the trouble of constant separate payments. By section 55 permission to amend obvious errors is given absolutely, but the levy of any fee at all is clearly made discretionary with the Customs-collector. Section 130 provides for due notice being given of rules about transshipment, and section 201 requires that all rules shall be periodically published and sold to the public. In section 140 application for leave to re-land is dispensed with, and the period for notice of transshipment to re-lands is extended to five days.

“The privilege of transshipment under section 121 has been extended to vessels of all descriptions, and section 129 makes it clear that the transshipment fees are to cover the expense of the officers who supervise the process.

"With regard to the coasting-trade, some important alterations have been made. Vessels will not in future lose their character of coasting-vessels merely because they have touched intermediately at some Foreign Port, but will remain under restriction only so long as goods brought from that port are on board. Again, if a coasting-vessel has not touched at any Foreign Port, and has not any dutiable goods on board, she will be able to discharge forthwith, without entry of the goods or clearance for home-consumption. In other words, we shall rely for our statistics on the documents at the port of departure, and the importers will be relieved of all the trouble with the custom-house which they now undergo. By section 166 also, a cargo-book may be held to dispense with a separate manifest.

"In the chapter of penalties, we have made some improvements and relaxations, chiefly in the direction of admitting proof of non-complicity in or ignorance of misdescriptions, and the like. Nos. 20, 27, 37 and 74 of section 167 may be referred to. Complaint has been made that the penalties of the Indian Act are more severe than those of the English. There may be some truth in this in individual instances, but it would be very difficult to graduate a number of offences mostly involving no moral obliquity. The standard penalty in the English Act is £100, and this we all know to our cost to be a larger sum than Rs. 1,000, which is the Indian standard. All these penalties, however, are maxima only, not absolute. It is no doubt difficult to ensure powers being exercised judiciously in all cases by subordinate officers who may be wanting in intelligence or afraid of responsibility. The best course for any merchant who feels aggrieved is to lose no time in bringing his case before the heads of the Department, who are pretty certain to deal liberally with it.

"While thus taking credit for a large number of relaxations in favour of commerce, I must admit that in some few instances we have made the law more stringent. With regard to the sales of goods taken over by Government on account of under-valuation, we could not resist the weight of testimony that there was at times a difficulty in realizing their full value by auction. But while giving the Collector, therefore, a power of selling them otherwise in the last resort, we have obliged him to put them up to auction in wholesale lots for cash on delivery, and in any case to dispose of them without unnecessary delay.

"On the whole, I think the Select Committee may fairly claim to have acted up to the declaration of willingness to facilitate trade operations which I have already referred to. There appear to be only two ways of going any further. One of these is by reducing somewhat the demands of the Statistical Department. I am prevented by an accidental circumstance from producing for the inspection of the Council the local volume for the Madras Presidency of statistics of trade and navigation for the year 1875-76. This ponderous affair weighs some 40lbs, it measures about a cubic foot, and, though not yet published, owing to the labour of compilation and printing, it is already out of date. What, I would ask, in the name of common sense, is it possible to do with such a thing? Perhaps you might, as Sydney Smith said of a certain portly widow, walk round it before breakfast, but as to reading and using it—never. Seriously, statistics are no doubt useful things, and returns regarding all leading articles of commerce, and of the trade of important centres or ports of a certain size, are necessary. But the utility of requiring an infinity of returns on trivial matters, and piling up checks and counter-checks, especially about the petty-trade of obscure ports, seems very questionable. It would surely be sufficient to be content with a fraction of what we now collect, and to be content with reasonable instead of almost absolute accuracy—say within ten per cent. in the case of free goods, for instance, as in the London Custom-house. I am well aware that this question has already attracted attention in the department over which the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Arbuthnot presides, and that they contemplate such relaxations, and those not inconsiderable, as lie within the power of the Government of India. If my remarks should have the effect of attracting further attention to the subject and supporting still further improvements, they will not have been thrown away. The second step by which Custom-house restrictions might be further and very largely relaxed, is by alteration of our Customs-tariff. If it were possible in lieu of the fifty or sixty main heads of the import-tariff, comprising many hundreds of subordinate items, to have duties on only six or seven important, well defined and readily distinguishable articles, the relief afforded in the matter of preventive scrutiny, check, stoppage, seizure and the like, and informalities, would be enormous. It is of course no part of my duty to indicate or suggest any policy of this sort on general grounds. What I say is said merely in connection with the subject of customs procedure now before us. The first step I have referred to at least is one readily practicable, and will, I trust, be ere long fully acted on. For the present, it would seem that the Bill effects all that legislation now can do to relax customs restrictions, and I trust that the Council may approve and pass the Bill accordingly."

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. HOPE then moved that the Bill as amended be passed.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Council adjourned to Wednesday, the 13th March 1878.

ADDITIONAL RATES (CENTRAL PROVINCES) BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN STRACHEY presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bill for the levy of Additional Rates on Land in the Central Provinces.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN STRACHEY also moved that the Report be taken into consideration. He said that in making this motion he had only a few observations to make on the provisions of the Bill. The measure, as the Council was well aware, was part of the new taxation scheme lately brought forward by Government to enable it to meet the expenditure which must be incurred for the relief and prevention of famines. The present Bill was not passed at the same time as the other measures, because some further reference to the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces had been necessary, and the information which was required in order to admit of its provisions being drafted was not then complete. This information had since then been obtained, and the Bill had been drafted in accordance with it. The practice of levying cesses in addition to the land-revenue already existed in the Central Provinces, but the present cesses were collected under engagements which had been entered into by the people at the time of settlement and not under powers conferred by any law. Now that steps were being taken for meeting famine expenditure by the imposition of taxation in addition to the land-revenue, it was necessary that there should be a law to authorize its collection, and that law would be contained in this Bill if it should be approved by the Council. In drafting its provisions the recent Acts had been followed as closely as possible, and even their wording had been, for the most part, adhered to. There was one point only in which the Bill differed at all from those Acts, and that was not one of principle, but of practice only, the object of which was to regulate the manner in which effect was to be given by the Executive Authorities to the provisions of the law. The principle of the Acts already passed was that all proprietors of land should be taxed at the rate of one per cent. of the total rental of their estates. Now, in the Upper Provinces, proprietary title in land was, generally speaking, free from complications. It was, for his present purposes, a sufficiently correct description of it to say that the entire rental of every estate was divided into two equal shares, one of which belonged to the proprietor (whether a single individual or a co-proprietary body), and the other share to the State, that was to say, that each person, whether the land owned by him was much or little, received half of the rental of the land, and paid the other half to the Government. But in the Central Provinces the nature of proprietary rights in the soil was not so simple. Those Provinces lay between the zamindari tenures of Bengal on the North and the rayatwari holdings of Southern India on the other side, and the tenure of the land in them was much affected by their situation. In the districts which adjoined Bengal, the superior owner of an estate enjoyed the whole of the rent. In the Southern and Eastern parts of the Provinces a large share of the proprietary profits was retained by the tenants, and the zamindar or patel received only a part of the rental. Between the zamindar and the lowest class of tenant there were various intervening grades who participated, more or less, in the proprietary profits. Some of these different tenures occurred in almost every village; in many several, and in some villages all of them could be found. Obviously, the profits received by landlords in any part of these Provinces varied inversely to the extent of the subordinate tenures which might exist, and their liability to pay the rate now proposed should vary, in justice, according to their share of the profits. A malguzar, for instance, might very reasonably be called upon to pay the full cess in respect of tenures-at-will; but it would hardly be fair to call upon him to do so in respect of lands where perhaps twenty or thirty or more per cent. of the rental never reached him, but was intercepted by the owners of intermediate holdings. To prevent any injustice of that sort the alteration which had been mentioned was introduced into the Bill. That alteration, as compared with the Bills passed for Northern India, would be found in section 6, clause (c), and the object was to enable the Chief Commissioner, in assessing the tax, to follow the proprietary rights into the hands of all the different classes who enjoyed a share of them, and to take from each of those classes what would be a fair contribution from them according to the proportion of the rental which they enjoyed. It had been ascertained from the Chief Commissioner that there would be no practical difficulty in applying such a rule. The Select Committee had therefore no hesitation in laying upon the Local Government the duty of making these proportional assessments. The fair and reasonable nature of such a provision was so self-evident that he need not take up the time of the Council with any arguments in support of it. The Bill, he might add, had received the cordial concurrence and approval of the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces. As in all its provisions, except the one which SIR J. STRACHEY had now explained, the Bill was nothing more than a simple re-enactment of the measures which had quite lately been passed,—and passed by the Council after full deliberation and discussion—And as it was evidently desirable that this, the only remaining legislative measure rendered necessary by the recent extension of taxation for the purpose of meeting expenditure on famines, should also be passed without delay, he hoped the Council would accept the recommendation of the Committee and would allow the Bill this day to become law.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN STRACHEY then moved that the Bill as amended be passed.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

ARMS BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR EDWARD BAYLEY moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Arms, Ammunition and Military Stores be taken into consideration. He said that, in presenting the Report of the Select Committee, he had called the attention of the Council to the very considerable alterations which had been made in the details of the Bill, and for the present he would say no more upon that subject. He wished to address himself on this occasion rather to the objections which had been taken to the principle of the Bill. They had been told that no case had been made out for the Bill; that it was apparently entirely unnecessary. One representation which they had had from the British Indian Association went so far as to say that no facts or arguments had been adduced to establish the necessity for such rigorous legislation. Well, he really did not know what evidence would satisfy every one. He thought he had been at some pains, when he moved for leave to introduce the Bill to show how urgently the necessity for some such measure had been for many successive years persistently pressed upon the Government of India by almost every Local Government and Administration. He mentioned also certain statistical facts which proved the existence of a large and increasing traffic in the very description of arms which it was most undesirable should be introduced into India; and the Council had still been told that no case had been made out. So far as he could understand, the only statement to contravene the evidence he then adduced was, first, that the importation of arms and the value of arms had been diminishing during the last five or six years, instead of increasing; and in the second place, that a great number of people had been destroyed by wild beasts. He did not in the least propose to controvert either of those statements; but he had taken pains to show, when he introduced the Bill, that he was perfectly aware of the fact that a diminution had taken place in the actual imports of arms, and he gave the reason for it, that was to say, that the Government of India had put into force certain powers which they possessed under the Customs Act of absolutely prohibiting the importation of arms of a certain description. Well, that was a very useful power, and one which the Government proposed to retain. It would supplement very effectively the provisions of the present Bill. But he also pointed out that it was one which by itself was very easily evaded, and that the Local Governments were not satisfied with it; that they asked for more power, and were not apprehensive that these additional precautions would be abused. He went further, and had told the Council that the Government of India were in possession of information which showed that the importation of arms would, if the existing law were not supplemented by a fresh and more stringent legislative enactment, very soon be very largely and injuriously increased. He thought himself that that was sufficient evidence of the necessity for the Bill, even if it had not been supplemented by the very definite expression of opinion by his hon'ble friend the Member in charge of the Military Department, whose opinion on a subject of that character should, SIR EDWARD BAYLEY thought, be received as decisive. However, if more evidence was wanted,—that is, if those who had denied the necessity for the Bill wanted more evidence—he would say that this Bill had now been published; it had been commented upon with very great care, he was gratified to say, by a large number of local officers, and he had noted something of the result. A great many, in fact a large majority, of the officers who had been consulted had not taken any notice at all of the principle of the Bill or the necessity for it. But he might say that in their remarks almost all of them had implied their approval of the Bill. But a considerable number of those officers had gone out of their way in express terms to approve of the Bill and to declare the necessity for it. He would mention some of them—

The Panjáb Government thought the provision for controlling the possession of arms a wise and salutary one.

The Commissioner of Deraját considered the Bill salutary and called for.

The Commissioner of Múltán thought the provisions of the Bill salutary and urgently called for.

The Commissioner of Julandar thought the Bill urgently needed.

General Keyes had long since pointed out the need for amending the law and approved the Bill.

The Inspector-General of Police approved of the Bill, and urged that it should be made more stringent.

In Bengal the Commissioner of Dacca had no doubt of the expediency, if not of the necessity, for controlling the present facility for acquiring arms.

The Commissioner of the Presidency Division called the provisions of the Bill good and suitable.

One of the most distinguished Judicial officers in Bengal, Mr. Field, goes out of his way to call it a wise and necessary measure.

In the Birárs, Sir R. Meade entirely approved of the provisions of the Bill.

The Commissioner of the Haidarábád Assigned Districts thought the Bill admirable in intention and scope, and admirably drawn.

In Bombay the Government approved of the Bill generally.

The Commissioner in Sindh did the same.

The Commissioner of the Central Division had for years advocated a similar Arms Act.

The Commissioner of the Northern Division thought the Bill would undoubtedly meet a great want.

In the North-Western Provinces the Government approved of the Bill subject to some amendments.

The Commissioner of Jhánsi called it an excellent and very necessary Bill.

In the Central Provinces the Chief Commissioner thought the necessity for the Bill as an imperial measure was proved.

In Madras the Government approved the principle of the Bill.

One Collector, Mr. Thomas, said he had himself recommended a Bill on the same lines.

Another, Mr. Webster, said the measure was imperatively required.

Well, SIR EDWARD BAYLEY hoped, although he could not expect to satisfy every one, that these expressions of opinion might be taken as sufficient. He could say that almost every officer who had been consulted had either, as he had said, expressly or impliedly approved both the principles of the Bill and the direction in which it went. There was actually only one exception, and all that was necessary to say of it was that the exception seemed to prove the rule. Sir William Robinson in Madras had no doubt taken the exact line which the British Indian Association had taken. So much for the necessity for the Bill. They had been told, it had been said in some quarters, that the Government had brought in the Bill under the influence of a scare. Well he thought he had shown, and the papers had shown to the Committee, that, so far from this being the case, for at least eight successive years the Government had been pressed to pass a Bill precisely on these lines; that they resisted doing so until the necessity for it was absolutely shown. So far from the Bill being passed under a scare, he might say, that some of the most important information showing the necessity for the Bill had only been received since it had been introduced.

He would not trouble the Council with any further general details of the Bill. There were a number of objections taken, and he was bound to say that some of them had been taken with great force, and had proved very useful to the Committee in settling the details. He might class them into three classes, first, that the Bill was too stringent, unnecessarily severe, and that a portion of it was not workable. He was bound to admit, and he had pointed out when the Bill was introduced, that there was a slight oversight in drafting; that the Bill in its original shape had certainly been made somewhat rigid by the old provision as regards the proclaimed districts having been removed. But that had been altered in Committee by the restoration of this provision. In the next place they were told that the Bill was too severe. He had pointed out how largely the Committee had modified the severity of the Bill by amendments which they had made. He had himself assented to those amendments; but he thought that if they erred in any way, they erred, perhaps, somewhat in the direction of over-relaxation. Personally, however, he was contented with the Bill as it stood, with the exception of a trifling verbal amendment which he proposed to move on the present occasion. Then, again, they were told that some of the provisions of the Bill were not clear; the objection thus taken was doubtless good, and the Committee had done their best to remedy the defect. He trusted that the Council would, on looking over the Bill in its present shape, be willing to agree, first, that a case had been made out for a Bill, and for a Bill drawn on the lines of the present measure; and, secondly, that the Bill had been shorn of most, if not all, of its objectionable features. At any rate, he must thank the Committee for the very patient attention they had given to its provisions and the trouble they had taken to make the Bill workable.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN STRACILEY, with the permission of His Excellency the President, moved the following amendment:—

First, that in Section 17, clause (b), for the words "except a license for possession," the following be substituted, namely:—

"granted in a place to which section 32, clause 2, of Act No. XXXI of 1860 applies at the time this Act comes into force, or in respect of any such license other than a license for possession granted in any other place."

Secondly, that in section 17, clause (c), for the words "except as aforesaid," the words "other than a license for possession" be substituted.

The object of the amendment was to impose a license for possession of arms of all kinds in those parts only of the country which had been already disarmed under the provisions of Act XXXI of 1860. His motive, he must explain, in bringing forward the present amendment, was partly a financial one, although that was not his principal object. He hoped to be able to show to the Council, looking at the matter from a financial point of view, that the privilege of possessing arms in parts of the country which were already disarmed, and to which alone he now referred, was a legitimate source from which to derive revenue, and that it was a point of some importance in connection with the late measures for extending the financial powers and responsibilities of the Local Governments. He said that, as a source of Imperial revenue, the receipts from fees of this kind would, no doubt, be quite insignificant, but from a Provincial point of view they were not without importance. As an illustration of this importance, he might mention that in the North-Western Provinces, with which he was best acquainted, it was calculated that such fees levied upon a very moderate scale would yield not less than one lakh of rupees a year—a sum which would be very valuable as an addition to the Provincial finances. It would be difficult in his opinion to find any other way of raising such a sum which would be open to fewer objections. For levying such fees was taxing a luxury, and had all the merits of that kind of taxation. He knew, of course, that there were tracts of country where, from the great numbers of wild beasts or the proximity of turbulent neighbours or from other dangers, arms were a necessity—a necessity and not a luxury. Where this was the case, no one could recognise more fully than he did that we ought to do nothing whatever which could in the slightest degree interfere with the means of protection which the people really required in those tracts. But such parts of the country were exceptional; and they could be sufficiently provided for under the powers of exemption which the Bill conferred on the Government. Leaving them out of sight for the present, and speaking of the disarmed tracts to which alone his amendment would apply, he affirmed, without hesitation, that the privilege of possessing arms was a luxury. It was usually sought for, not so much on account of the protection afforded by the arms, as because they enhanced the dignity of the wearer, and conferred upon him some kind of personal distinction. He could recognise no reason for exempting persons who wished for a privilege of that sort from paying something for it. He would go farther and say that he could hardly call to mind any more suitable and legitimate means of obtaining revenue than that of calling upon people who desired such marks of distinction to pay for them. Such a source of income fulfilled all the conditions which were required in taxation. The amount payable would be certain and easily known by every body. No one need pay it at all who found it inconvenient to do so. And those who did pay would contribute in proportion to the advantages obtained by them. Exception had, he knew, been taken to the proposal on the ground that it might offend against another fundamental rule of taxation by compelling the tax-payer to pay more than was likely to find its way to the treasury. It had been said that, to levy fees on licenses for the possession of arms might give opportunities for oppression and extortion, and might do more to enrich the underlings of the Magistrates' Courts than the public treasury. SIR JOHN STRACHEY thought that this objection would not be found good upon examination. He had already said that the operation of his proposed amendment would be confined to those districts in which the possession of arms was prohibited, and in which there was no intention of relaxing that prohibition. In such places it was impossible to dispense altogether with licenses. Section 15 of the Bill made provision for the grant of such licenses, and it was obvious that without them the Government had no means of keeping itself informed, or of controlling the number, of arms which were from time to time in the hands of the people. But if licenses were required at all, the objection to charging fees for them lost all its force; because it was not the fee charged which gave the opportunities of peculation, but the necessity of applying for and obtaining a license which had to pass through the hands of subordinate officials. But in his humble opinion, speaking of the Provinces to which alone it would apply, he believed that those anticipated dangers had really no existence whatever; certainly not more than in most other forms of taxation which might be named—in octroi-collections, in inland customs-collections, and in license-tax collections. He believed that the only effect of charging fees for the possession of arms would be to add by the amount of those fees to the cost of obtaining them. This additional cost was very far, in his opinion, from being a disadvantage; for the Council was now considering the case only of those parts of the country where it had been determined, on grounds of political expediency, that the people ought not generally to be in possession of arms, and where a cheap and abundant supply of them was on no grounds desirable.

He had dealt now with the only objection which he had heard to the proposed levy of duties on these licenses. He wished to add some very important evidence in confirmation of the arguments by which he had sought to support his amendment. In the North-Western Provinces, this special subject had undergone very long and careful consideration, and the result had been to elicit the strongest possible opinions in favour of the measure which he was advocating. So far back as 1870, Sir W. Muir, the then Lieutenant-Governor, appointed a Committee of the most experienced officers to consider the best way of adding to the revenues. That Committee made various recommendations, and, amongst them, advised the imposition of a duty on arms-licenses; and SIR J. STRACHEY would, with the permission of His Excellency, read a short passage from the Committee's report:—

"35. It is unnecessary to propose any further taxation for actual requirements. The Committee desire, however, to point out that a legitimate source of income may be found by enforcing fees on the issues of arms-licenses. Arms in this country are in the great majority of cases used as a means of increasing the dignity or supporting the rank of the Natives who wish to carry them.

* * * * *

The probable income arising from this source is conjectural only. It will probably be not less than £10,000 per annum."

Sir W. Muir entirely approved of that recommendation, and, in June, 1871, submitted a proposal to the Government of India for carrying it into effect. In the letter which he wrote to the Government of India he said—

"The Lieutenant-Governor concurs generally in the views of the Committee. The scale of fees and the suggested rules for issue of licenses appear suitable, but the Local Government might, His Honour thinks, receive power to vary these, within certain limits, from time to time, as may be found expedient. For districts that have not been disarmed the scale is perhaps too high, and there it might be reduced one-half.

"The Lieutenant-Governor is further of opinion that in all parts of the country which have been disarmed, licenses should be required, not only to carry, but to possess, arms."

"Exemption will be readily granted in parts of the country where prevalence of wild beasts or other danger may render it expedient that arms should be possessed or used."

The proposal thus made was not carried into execution. It was brought forward originally by Sir W. Muir under the impression that it was absolutely necessary to provide further means of meeting Provincial charges. But the condition of the Provincial finances having turned out better than was expected, it was dropped. In 1876, when SIR J. STRACHEY was Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces, the question was again taken up. It was discussed by a number of the most experienced officers of the Government of the North-Western Provinces, and they were unanimously of opinion that it was extremely desirable to charge license-fees for the possession of arms. He himself entirely concurred in the view thus taken, and he was in a position to say that the same opinion was held by the present Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces. Thus, in the North-Western Provinces three successive Lieutenant-Governors and, he believed, all their most experienced officers, had during the last eight years, expressed strong opinions in favour of the amendment which he was now asking the Council to adopt. He hoped that a measure which had such strong authority to support it would be approved by the Council that day.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR E. C. BAYLEY moved—

That to section 32 the following words be added, namely :—

"Any person refusing or neglecting to produce any such arms when so required, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with both."

He said the amendment was really one of a technical nature. He had mentioned, when presenting the Report of the Select Committee, that a clause had been introduced in section 32, requiring persons in possession of arms to produce them when required. But by mistake no penalty was affixed to the section by means of which it could be enforced. The amendment of which he had given notice was simply intended to correct the error.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR EDWARD BAYLEY also moved that the Bill as amended be passed.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. STOKES asked leave to postpone the presentation of the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to define and amend the law relating to Promissory Notes, Bills of Exchange and Cheques.

Leave was granted.

PANJAB LAWS ACT, 1872, AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. STOKES then presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Panjáb Laws Act, 1872.

NATIVE PRESS BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR ALEXANDER ARBUTHNOT moved for leave to introduce a Bill for the better control of publications in Oriental languages. He said :—"My Lord, copies of the Bill which has been framed for this purpose, have been already circulated for the perusal of Hon'ble Members, together with a statement of the objects which it is intended to effect, and of the reasons which have led to its being prepared."

"For reasons which I will state presently, it will be my duty to ask the Council, in the event of my present motion being adopted, to proceed at once to the consideration of the provisions of the Bill with the view of its being passed at this day's sitting, and I will therefore endeavour to explain, as fully and as clearly as I can, the considerations which have influenced the Government in bringing forward this measure.

"Now, my Lord, the object of the Bill which I desire to introduce, is to place the Native newspapers, or, to speak more correctly, the newspapers which are published in the vernacular languages of India, under better control, and to furnish the Government with more effective means than are provided by the existing law, of repressing seditious writings which are calculated to produce disaffection, towards the Government in the minds of the ignorant and unenlightened masses. Another object is to check a system of extortion to which some of our Native feudatories, and many of our Native employés, are exposed by the rapacity of unscrupulous Native editors.

"My Lord, this measure has not been resolved on without most careful and anxious consideration, both on the part of the present Government, and on the part of the Government of your predecessor. It has not been resolved on without much reluctance; for, directed as it is against a particular class, it involves a description of legislation which is opposed to the traditions, and is repugnant to the principles, upon which the administration of British India has been conducted during a long series of years, and which would not have been resorted to except for very cogent reasons. It is only because, in the opinion of the Government of India, the evil against which this measure is directed is one of great and increasing magnitude; because it is calculated to lower the prestige of the Government, and to weaken its hold on the esteem and affections of its subjects; and because the existing law does not furnish any adequate means of dealing with it, that the Government have decided to have recourse to special measures for its repression.

"My Lord, when the Press of India was liberated by the Government of Sir Charles Metcalfe from the restrictions which had previously been imposed upon it, and when it was placed in the position of freedom from State interference, which, with the exception of one brief interval of a single year, it has occupied since 1835, the Native Press was a thing of comparatively little importance. In one of the Minutes written at that time, Mr. Macaulay states that the papers printed in the languages of India were few, and exercised very little influence over the Native mind. The entire circulation of Native newspapers throughout the country did not then exceed three hundred copies. Since those days a great change has taken place. Newspapers printed in the vernacular languages are published in most of the large towns in Bengal, Bombay, the North-Western Provinces and the Panjáb, are read and studied by considerable numbers of people, and exert an influence over the popular mind which it is difficult to exaggerate.

"My Lord, it is not my wish to include the whole of the Native Press in the charge which I am about to prefer against individual members of it. I know that that Press includes many respectable papers, which are doing a useful work, and which are entitled to every encouragement that the State can afford to them. It is not against this class of newspapers that the present measure is directed. But there is a large and increasing class of Native newspapers, which would seem to exist only for the sake of spreading seditious principles, of bringing the Government and its European officers into contempt, and of exciting antagonism between the governing race and the people of the country. This description of writing is not of very recent growth; but there has been a marked increase in it of late, and especially during the last three or four years. During the past twelve months it has been worse than ever, the writers gaining in boldness as they find that their writings are allowed to pass unpunished. Their principal topics are the injustice and tyranny of the British Government, its utter want of consideration towards its Native subjects, and the insolence and pride of Englishmen in India, both official and non-official. There is no crime, however heinous, and no meanness, however vile, which, according to these writers, is not habitually practised by their English rulers. According to them, 'the Government is not a just, but a monstrous Government. As monsters are said to eat their own children, the English Government is destroying its own children, namely, its subjects.' According to them, 'avarice, frugality and cunning characterize all the acts and measures of Englishmen.' According to them, 'their rulers violate in pleasure the laws and regulations which they have enacted.' According to these writers, 'the British Government is continually breaking its promises. A history of the non-fulfilment of promises by the British Government would be the whole history of the last hundred and fifty years.' According to these writers, 'one of the objects of the English authorities in maintaining and enhancing the salt-tax is to enable their own countrymen to import English salt into this country, and to enrich them at the cost of the Natives.' One writer ironically affirms that 'neither the laws of nature, nor the civil laws of India, provide any punishment for those Europeans who kill Natives. The laws of nature ascribe such fatal incidents to destiny, and the civil laws are helpless because Europeans are the dominant race.' Another writer asserts that 'all laws are applicable to Natives alone, and not to Europeans. Europeans are enabled to kill Natives with perfect impunity.' Another alleges that 'of those diseases which generally prove fatal, one is the European plague, which is daily spreading over the country, and for which no remedy has yet been found. We refer to the readiness of Europeans to assault, and sometimes murder, Natives.' Another writer compares the English Government in India to a beautiful, but unprincipled, woman—

"whose charms and attractions are irresistible, but who is cunning, deceitful and cruel at heart. All men are in love with her. Now she lends her graces to one lover, and now to another, and thus causes the rivals to fight together and perish. At her first advent in India she was not very attractive, as her beauty had not fully developed. But when gradually her beauty was fully developed, whoever looked at her was entrapped. Men saw with their own eyes how she had already dealt with a number of their fellows, and knew that she was selfish, and an enemy of their faith, yet they were foolish enough to court her, and dig their graves with their own hands. All the great Native Chiefs of India, including the Kings of Delhi, one after another, fell a victim to her charms, and she pitilessly robbed them of all their estates and property. She next turned her attention to the Chiefs of the middle class, and relieved them of all they had except their wearing apparel."

"The extracts which I have read, are specimens, extracted haphazard from a great number, of the manner in which the British Government and the English race are habitually aspersed and held up to the contempt and hatred of the people of India. Of late, however, a further step has been taken, and a beginning has been made, in the direction of inciting the people to upset the British Raj by depunciations, sometimes open and sometimes covert, of the alleged weakness and timidity of the English, and their inability to maintain their present position in India.

"England," it is said, "has no efficient army. Like her, Carthage, too, possessed immense wealth, but that could not save the great commercial city of ancient days from a complete downfall. While Government is always ready to make a show of its power in fighting with weaker foes, such as the King of Abyssinia, and the Gáros and the Lushais, a policy of subsidizing is always resorted to in dealing with the Amír of Kábul, and one of conciliation adopted towards the barbaric Chief of Khilát. The rule of our country has passed into the hands of foreigners, and we have lost all our independence. However, we must buoy ourselves up with hope under the pressure of the present calamity, and not despair. Seeing that such mighty Kings as Vikramaditya, Rámchandra and Ravana have passed away, the short-lived Kings of the present times have no stability."

"The Kasht Vilási, a newspaper published at Púna, compares the English Government in India to a cunning traveller, who, passing by the door of a hospitable and kind-hearted gentleman, asks his permission to rest at his door for a short time, and gradually contrives to oust him and usurp his house and property; but there will be no great difficulty in driving out the usurper if all men jointly make a bold effort to do so. The Natives should gird up their loins and devise measures for improving the prosperity of the country.

"I will not take up the time of the Council with further extracts. I think it will be apparent from what I have read, that the description of literature to which these articles belong, is eminently calculated to unsettle the minds of the people, and to make them disaffected towards their rulers. While I say this, I do not for a moment desire to imply that the Government distrusts the loyalty of the great body of Her Majesty's Indian subjects, or that these writings correctly represent the sentiments entertained by the people generally. Indeed, I have very little doubt that there is a good deal of mere froth and vapour in these foolish and mischievous articles; but in India, as in other countries, writing of this description finds numerous readers, and ought not to be allowed to go on unchecked.

"My Lord, it cannot be said that the state of things which has arisen has taken the Government altogether by surprise. That such a state of things would be one of the results of granting complete freedom to the Press in this country, was predicted many years ago by men whose honoured names have long been household-words in Anglo-Indian history. I doubt not that many of the Members of this Council are acquainted with the remarkable Minute which Sir Thomas Munro, one of the ablest of the many able Statesmen who have aided in consolidating British rule in India, recorded on this subject in 1822. I well remember the interest with which this Minute was re-perused at the time of the Mutiny, and how impossible it was not to be struck by the almost prophetic character of the utterances which it contained. But Sir Thomas Munro was opposed to granting freedom to any section of the Press. He regarded the unrestricted freedom of even the English Press, which in his day was indeed the only Press worth considering, as inconsistent with the maintenance of our rule. Since that time circumstances have greatly changed; and I do not believe that that far-seeing and sagacious Statesman, if he were now among us, would counsel the re-imposition of restrictions upon the English Press. However this may be, I do not rest my argument on the policy of restriction advocated by Sir Thomas Munro. I rest it upon the opinions of men who were parties to the policy of liberation which was carried out in 1835, and who, it is evident from their writings, did not overlook the possibility that such a state of things might arise, as that with which the Government of India are now called upon to deal. Both Sir Charles Metcalfe and Mr. Macaulay, the one the originator, and the other the draughtsman and the eloquent defender, of the Act of 1835, while arguing strongly in favour of a free Press, advert to the possibility of circumstances arising which might compel the Government of the day to resort again to legislation of a restrictive character. Their language is general, and it is evident that, while they contemplated the possibility, they did not attach any great importance to it; but there was one Member of that Council, one who has only lately passed away, full of years and honour, after an unusually lengthened official career, prolonged into a ripe old age, one whose name will long be remembered in this Presidency, who, while assenting to Sir Charles Metcalfe's measure as being well-suited to the circumstances of the time at which it was passed, predicted in the plainest terms the evils which have resulted from granting unrestricted freedom to the Native Press.

"My Lord, these are Mr. Prinsep's words :—

"I do not go quite so far as to say broadly, and without reserve, that I do not apprehend danger to the State from the Press of India being free. I see no immediate danger in the present state of things, nor, in the future, danger such as the existing laws would provide for better than the laws made especially for the purpose when the danger threatens. Therefore, I cordially assent to the repeal of the laws; but I think the eye of Government will require to be kept continually upon the Press, and especially upon the Native Press; for it is capable of being made an engine for destroying the respect in which the Government is held, and so undermining its power.

"At present, this Press is nothing, and the controlling or influencing it would be an easy task, were Government disposed to direct its efforts to do one or the other; but if we let it grow till the danger from it is imminent, we may then find it a giant to wrestle with."

"Again :—

"So long as discussion is carried on in English, it is no more formidable than similar discussion in England and America. The Government will have its advocates as well as its assailers; and, considering that a vast proportion of the best informed of those who mix in the controversy, will be employes of the State interested in maintaining it as an object of respect, I have little fear of the spirit that would prevail, or of the effect of having this branch of the Press entirely free. But the case is not quite the same with the Native Press. It may take a malignant turn, calculated and designed to set the whole population against us."

"My Lord, that a considerable section of the Native Press has taken a malignant turn, calculated, and in some cases designed, to set the whole population against us, would, I think, be sufficiently proved by the writings of which I have read specimens to the Council, even if it had not, as it has, become a matter of notoriety which is frequently discussed in the English newspapers, and by the more respectable Native newspapers."

"My Lord, I have said that the existing law is inadequate for the suppression of the evil which this Bill is intended to remedy. The existing law is contained in an Act of 1867, which provides for the registration of printing-presses and newspapers, and in a section of the Indian Penal Code which makes seditious words or writings punishable. Now, this section of the Penal Code really furnishes a very inadequate means of dealing with such writings as those with which this Bill is intended to deal. In the first place, the explanation which has been added to the section, renders the penalties inapplicable to any case in which there is not an obvious intention on the part of the writer to counsel resistance to, or subversion of, the lawful authority of the Government. Therefore, to much of the writing to which I have drawn the attention of the Council, this law would not apply; for there is a great deal of it, which, though very mischievous in its effects, cannot be said to come under the category of counselling resistance to lawful authority, or subversion of that authority. It will, perhaps, be said that, if so, the proper course is to amend the Penal Code, and to provide therein suitable penalties for those who, without advising rebellion, inflame the minds of the people against their rulers. I am sure that the Council will not for a moment suppose that this very natural question has not been deliberately considered by the Government; but, after the most careful reflection and consultation with our Law Officers, and with the Local Governments, the conclusion which we have arrived at is, that no such amendment as could be made in a Penal Code, which is necessarily of general application, would adequately and properly meet the peculiar requirements of the present case. The distinction made in the section to which I have referred, between writings which indicate a manifest intention on the part of the writer to instigate resistance to the authority of the Government, or subversion of that authority, and writings which, while expressing strong disapprobation of the acts, or conduct, or policy, of the Government, are not inconsistent with a disposition to render lawful obedience to the Government, is a very reasonable and proper distinction. It would, of course, be possible to introduce into the Penal Code a provision rendering penal all writings calculated to inflame the minds of the people against their rulers, irrespective of the intention of the writers; but such a provision must be of general application, and, like the rest of the Penal Code, it must be essentially punitive. The principle of the Bill which I desire to lay before the Council, is a different principle. For reasons which I will explain presently, the provisions of the Bill will apply only to one class of writers, namely, the writers in the vernacular Press, and the measure is not so much a measure of penal, as it is a measure of preventive, legislation. The machinery by which it will work, is a machinery of checks, rather than of penalties. Its object is to check mischievous writings of the nature of those to which I have alluded, not by penal sentences, but by requiring the offenders, or those in regard to whom it may be apprehended that they are likely to offend, to engage and deposit security for their good behaviour, or by merely warning them; and it is only in the event of the engagements being broken, or the warnings being disregarded, that the penalties which the Bill provides will be put in force. Another very serious practical difficulty is, that no amendment of the law which left the repression of these offences to depend upon a successful prosecution in a Criminal Court would meet the case adequately; and this remark applies, not only to that class of cases which, as I have said, is not covered by the Penal Code, but also to those cases to which the provisions of the Penal Code are expressly applicable. Even if it were perfectly certain that in every case a conviction would be obtained, the political effect of such trials would be bad. They would be certain to create a good deal of excitement, and would invest the accused with a fictitious importance in the eyes of their more ignorant countrymen, which it is desirable to avoid. What is needed, is a procedure more summary, and, as I have said, framed rather with a view to prevention, than with a view to punishment.

"My Lord, considerations of a somewhat analogous character, although not exactly similar, render it advisable in the opinion of the Government of India that, while we are enacting a law for the better control of the Native Press in the general interests of the State, we should take the opportunity of repressing more effectively than can be done by the Indian Penal Code the crime of extortion when practised by an unscrupulous journalist. We have evidence on which we have every reason to rely, that threats of newspaper attacks are not unfrequently resorted to by unscrupulous Native editors as means of extorting money from Native Chiefs and other Natives of rank, and from high Native officials. Such persons often shrink, and not unnaturally shrink, from entering upon a criminal prosecution before the ordinary Courts. In their case, also, we need a remedy more summary, and which the injured persons will be less indisposed to resort to.

"I will now endeavour to explain, as briefly and as clearly as I can, the provisions of the measure which I propose to lay before the Council. In the first place, I may remark that the Bill is restricted in its operation to publications printed in oriental languages, or in fact mainly to publications in the vernacular languages of India. I will refer again to this point presently.

"Then the Bill is essentially an enabling Bill. Its chief provisions will take effect only in those parts of India to which they may be especially extended by the Governor General in Council, and will cease to have effect in those parts whenever the Governor General in Council so directs. For instance, it is not at all probable that the chief provisions of the Bill will, for the present at all events, be extended to the Presidency of Madras, as we know that hitherto the vernacular Press of that Presidency has been altogether inoffensive, and there are no grounds whatever for bringing it under restriction. Wherever this is the case, the position of the Native Press will practically be the same as it is at present. And not only is the Bill mainly an enabling Bill in regard to its extension to particular Provinces or parts of India, but the application of its chief provisions is permissive, and depends upon the discretion of the Executive Government; and the enforcement of the checks and penalties for which it provides, rests with the Local Government, and not with any inferior authority. In regard to the system of checks which the Bill establishes, I cannot do better than read to the Council the remarks made on this point in the Statement of Objects and Reasons:—

"First.—The Magistrate may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government require the printer or publisher of any such newspaper to enter into a bond binding himself not to print or publish in such newspaper anything likely to excite feelings of disaffection to the Government, or antipathy between persons of different races, castes, religions or sects, and not to use such paper for purposes of extortion. The Magistrate may further require the amount of this bond to be deposited in money or securities.

"Secondly.—If any newspaper (whether a bond has been taken in respect of it or not) any time contains any matter of the description just mentioned, or is used for purposes of extortion, the Local Government may warn such newspaper by a notification in the Gazette and if, in spite of such warning, the offence is repeated, the Local Government may then issue its warrant to seize the plant, &c., of such newspaper, and when any deposit has been made may declare such deposit forfeited.

"Thirdly.—As the provisions regarding the deposit of security and the forfeiture of the deposit would, perhaps, be found to press unduly on some of the less wealthy newspaper proprietors, clauses have been inserted enabling the publisher of a newspaper to take his paper out of the operation of this portion of the Act for such time as he pleases, by undertaking to submit his proofs to an officer appointed by the Government before publication, and to publish nothing which such officer objects to.

"Any publisher may, if he chooses, do this at the time when he is called upon to deposit security; and if he does so, no security can be demanded from him.

"Again, if he does not choose to avail himself of this provision at that stage, he may subsequently, in the event of a warning being issued against him, offer such an undertaking, and if the Magistrate accepts it, the proceedings are at an end.

"As regards books, pamphlets, &c., printed in British India, containing matter of the description above referred to or used for purposes of extortion, the Bill gives the Local Government a power to seize them and the presses at which they are printed.

"Newspapers and books published out of British India but circulated in British India remain. And in regard to them the Bill provides—

"first, that if they contain matter of the nature already referred to, or are used for purposes of extortion, the Local Government may seize them; and

"secondly, that the Governor General in Council may prohibit their importation altogether. The only other points calling for special notice are, that an appeal is given to the Governor General in Council against anything done by a Local Government or any inferior authority that declaration of forfeiture and other proceedings under the Act are made final and conclusive, subject only to such appeal; and that penalties are provided for printing or publishing a newspaper without executing a bond or making a deposit after such bond or deposit has been required, and for breach of an undertaking to submit proofs to a Government officer.

"I have said that, in restricting the operation of this measure to the vernacular Press, and in exempting the English Press from its operation, the Government of India are taking a course which involves a departure from the policy by which it is usually guided, and indeed from the policy which has been followed in all previous legislation regarding the Press in India. The restrictions which were imposed upon the Press previous to the passing of the Act of 1835, were imposed alike upon the English Press and upon the vernacular Press. The Act, liberating the Press, which was passed in that year, was applicable alike to the vernacular and to the English Press; and when the freedom of the Press was for a time suspended during the Mutiny, the suspension was applied equally to English as to vernacular newspapers. Indeed, the first paper to which the provisions of the Act then passed were applied was the Friend of India, which had long been justly regarded as the leading and the most able English journal in India. When reporting the passing of the Press Law in 1857, Lord Canning's Government said that they had thought it right to make no distinction between the English and the Native Press, and that on this point they agreed with Sir Charles Metcalfe, who, in the course of the discussion of the Press question in 1835, wrote:—

"I think that in all our legislation we ought to be very careful not to make invidious distinctions between European and Native subject."

"The despatch of 1857 goes on to say:—

"We do not clearly see how any distinction of class could be really carried into effect; for the same might be true of any newspaper in the English language written, owned, and published by Natives almost exclusively for circulation among the Native reader. And although we have no fear that tierce de tierce would be done in any English newspaper, we have to guard in these times against errors in discretion and temper, as well as against intentional sedition."

"My Lord, I will not pretend to say that this part of the question is perfectly plain and simple, or that in advising the course which we have determined on after very careful consideration, we are not laying ourselves open, in some degree at all events, to the charge of class legislation, and of making what by many will be regarded as an invidious distinction. It would have been very easy, but I do not think that it would have been just, to make the application of the Bill general, and, for the sake of not laying ourselves open to the charge of creating invidious distinctions, to include the English Press in its operation. My answer is that nearly forty-three years have elapsed since the passing of Sir Charles Metcalfe's Act, and nearly twenty-one years since the passing of the Press Law of 1857; that throughout that period the English Press has been, on the whole, a loyal and, notwithstanding many imperfections, a valuable instrument and aid to the Government; while for many years past, and especially in recent years, a section of the vernacular Press has been chiefly remarkable for its disloyalty. It must, moreover, be borne in mind that the publications of the vernacular Press are circulated among a class of the population far more ignorant than those classes which are reached by the English papers, and are therefore calculated to be much more mischievous in their effects. Such publications as those to which I have alluded, appeal to the ignorant and the unenlightened. They influence and pervert the minds of the young, and go far to counteract the benefits of the education which we are endeavouring to impart to them. They constitute, in fact, a mischievous and poisonous literature, embarrassing to the administration, subversive of authority, and in every way injurious to those to whom it is addressed. In framing this measure in its present form, the Government of India has been influenced by a consideration of the facts with which it has to deal; and after carefully weighing those facts, it has come to the conclusion that it would not be right to inflict upon the most important and the most valuable section of the Press, a liability to checks and penalties which it has in no way merited. In connection with this question, we must not forget that the circumstances of the present time are very different from the circumstances of the time when the despatch of Lord Canning's Government was written. Then, a large part of the country was in a state of rebellion, and precautions were necessary, which are not needed in quieter times. Nor should it be overlooked that, in one important respect, this measure is free from the objection to which I have been alluding. Newspapers and other publications in the English language, published by Natives, are as much exempted from the operation of the Bill as are similar publications published by Englishmen. As a rule, all publications in the English language are addressed to, and are read by, a more educated class than are the readers of vernacular publications, and consequently, even if they were obnoxious to the same objections as characterize several of the vernacular papers, they would be far less mischievous. But, as a matter of fact, there is an essential distinction between the tone and language adopted by the most hostile of the English newspapers, and that adopted by the worst section of the vernacular Press. The vast majority of papers published in English, including those published by Natives, however violently they may attack men or measures, always attack them on their individual merits, treating them as accidental blots upon our system; whereas the vernacular papers too frequently treat the persons and the things which they denounce, as the types and necessary results of a foreign rule, and assail our system as a whole.

"My Lord, I have nearly completed the task which I undertook when your Lordship desired me to lay this Bill before the Council. I feel bound to say that it is not without sincere regret that I find myself engaged in the duty of actively promoting an enactment which, in the minds of many persons, will throw grave doubts on the value of the measures which have been taken for the advancement and diffusion of education among the Natives of this country. I do not share in those doubts. My conviction is that the more steadily we persevere in our exertions for the promotion of sound education, the more surely we shall counteract evils of the nature of those against which this Bill is directed; and I trust that, both in making those exertions and in repressing those evils, the Government will receive the co-operation of the respectable and well-disposed classes of the Native community. Our earnest hope is that the mere existence of this law will in itself suffice, or will in a great measure suffice, to repress the mischief against which it is aimed, and that the actual enforcement of its provisions will be a thing of very rare occurrence. As Englishmen, brought up in a free country and accustomed to the advantages of a free Press, the Members of the Government of India have no desire to place undue restrictions on the Press of India. In resolving on this measure, they are entirely influenced by their sense of the necessities of the case, and of the responsibility which devolves upon them for the maintenance of authority and order; and I believe that the Council and the public generally will agree with me when I say, that it is better that a measure of this nature, which is essentially a measure of precaution, should be introduced at a time when the country is peaceful and undisturbed, and when the minds of men are calm, than that it should be postponed to some period of disturbance, when it would be attributed to panic, and when it might be necessary to make its provisions more stringent, and possibly more comprehensive.

"And now, my Lord, one word as to the reasons which have induced the Government to adopt the unusual, though not unprecedented, course of introducing this Bill without the customary notice, and of recommending that it should be passed through all its stages at a single sitting of the Council. We consider that to have dealt with this question in the manner in which projects of law are ordinarily dealt with, would have been inexpedient, on the ground that it might have given rise to agitation, and during the period which would have been occupied in passing the Bill, might not improbably have intensified the evils which the measure is intended to repress."

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR ALEXANDER ARBUTHNOT then introduced the Bill.

The Hon'ble SIR ALEXANDER ARBUTHNOT having applied to His Excellency the President to suspend the Rules for the Conduct of Business,

The PRESIDENT declared the Rules suspended.

The Hon'ble SIR ALEXANDER ARBUTHNOT then moved that the Bill be taken into consideration.

The Hon'ble MR. MORGAN said:—"My Lord, as the provisions of the Bill now before the Council have not been published, it has of course been impossible to obtain any idea of the manner in which it may be received by the non-official public, of which I am to a certain extent a representative. Anything that I may say, therefore, must be considered only as a non-official view of the Bill as far as I myself am concerned, and indeed as regards the details of the Bill, they have only been before the Members of this Council, other than the Executive, so recently, that I cannot pretend to enter into any discussion of them. As to the general principle of the Bill, however, I think, after what has fallen from the Hon'ble Mover, that necessity has been shown for legislation in the direction now proposed. Although it would be highly undesirable that any check should be placed upon fair discussion or reasonable criticism either of Government measures or the acts of individual officers, the Bill now before the Council does not, as far as I understand, propose to place any such check. The papers which will come under the operation of the Bill, as far as I can judge from such extracts as have come to my notice, do not attempt to discuss or criticise either men or measures, but are made up of monstrous statements and virulent invective; statements so monstrous that, in the mind of an educated reader, they would only raise a smile or provoke disgust. To the class, however, to whom these papers are read, the mere fact of the statements being in print conveys a belief that they are true, and it therefore appears necessary that a check should be placed upon their indiscriminate dissemination.

"Under these circumstances, I have pleasure in supporting the Bill, the general provisions of which appear suited to the object in view."

The Hon'ble MR. PAUL said:—"My Lord, as I intend to vote in favour of the measure which at the present time engages the attention of this Council, I venture to make a few remarks in reference to it, and in support of the propriety of subjecting newspapers published in the Oriental languages to summary control by competent authority. It may be readily admitted that it would be unjust to interfere with or retard social progress and mental improvement, depending in some measure on the diffusion of knowledge through the medium of vernacular newspapers, by closing or interrupting such channels of thought and instruction under legislative sanction. But a cursory study of the provisions of the Bill will show that this is not the intention of the Legislature. A broad distinction exists—and has been recognized in the Bill—between publications honestly conducted and devoted to useful and beneficial objects and those which have mischievous and misleading tendencies and abound in calumnies; and this distinction should be observed in order to correct any misconception which may arise as to any supposed intention on the part of this Legislature either to interfere with the liberty of the Press or to stifle free discussion. It will, I think, be acknowledged with equal readiness that this Government has been pre-eminently distinguished by its steady and unceasing labours in the cause of education and the enlightenment of the people, and that its administration has assured to all classes security of property and the full enjoyment of personal liberty. In the face of these exertions and benefits, it will be idle to suggest the possible existence of any unworthy motive for the introduction of the present measure, which circumstances of a deplorable nature have forced upon the Government. I may take it as axiomatic that it is necessarily incident to every permanent system of government to make provision, not only for its continuance, but for its secure continuance. As the goodwill and esteem of the people are indispensable to such continuing security, it is evident that it is proper to prohibit and restrict all malicious attempts to produce disaffection by creating and fostering ill-will and discontent on the part of the governed, and by rendering the Government itself odious to the people.

And here, my Lord, before proceeding further, I may be permitted to read, as germane to the subject, a passage from an accomplished and learned author:—

“The State and Constitution being the common inheritance, every attack made upon them, which affects their permanence and security, is in a degree an attack upon every individual, and concerns the rights of all. It is, therefore, a maxim of the law of England, flowing by natural consequence and easy deduction from the great principle of self-defence, to consider as libels and misdemeanours every species of attack by speaking or writing, the object of which is wantonly to defame, or indecorously to calumniate, that economy, order and constitution of things which make up the general system of the law and government of the country. Opinion is strength, and the good fame of government is necessary to obtain this opinion. The distance is not very great between contempt of the laws and open resistance to them. Defamation of this kind is more dangerous, inasmuch as it appeals to the passions, rather than to the reason, of the multitude; it unsettles the minds of the people, relaxes the authority of the rulers, and impairs the reverence due to the laws.”

“Many of these observations apply with redoubled force to a government which rules over an immense and mixed population composed of persons of different races and religions, of different habits and characters, whose allegiance cannot but materially depend on their general good opinion of, their good-will and respect for, that Government. The privilege of writing and publishing with freedom is doubtless inestimable. So long as that privilege is exercised honestly and fairly, with a view to benefit society, and with reference to subjects of common and public interest, it will be cherished and maintained wherever free institutions exist and flourish. But the privilege itself is subject to this limitation, that it must not invade the undoubted rights of others. In the case of private individuals and classes, their character and reputation must be respected; and in the case of a Government, its constitution must not be wantonly attacked for purposes of injury and mischief, nor its good name maliciously aspersed. The principle of protecting character is ancient, it having been declared by the laws of Solon ‘that the liberty of the citizen would be imperfect were his character unprotected.’

“Having made these general observations, I now turn to the causes which have led to the introduction of the Bill. I have in my hand translations of upwards of one hundred and fifty extracts from papers published in the vernacular languages, which I have read carefully, and that reading has satisfied me that these publications contain matter falling under the following heads:—

1. Seditious libels, malicious and calumnious attacks on the Government, accusing it of robbery, oppression and dishonesty, and imputing to it bad faith, injustice and partiality.

2. Libels on Government officers.

3. Contemptuous observations on the administration of justice, pointing to its alleged impurity and worthlessness.

4. Libels on the character of Europeans, attributing to them falsehood, deceit, cruelty, and heartlessness.

5. Libels on Christians and Christian Governments, and mischievous tendencies to excite race and religious antipathies.

6. Suggestions and insinuations which their authors believe fall short of seditious libels by reason of the absence of positive declarations.

“In addition to these general characteristics, I find that mis-statements, exaggerations, and allegorical tales, intended to sketch real incidents, but based purely on imagination, have been introduced to support or give colour to the varied (and I might almost add inexhaustible) calumnies to be met with. Other prominent features must not be lost sight of, such as bestowing praise on the late Muhammadan rule, maintaining its superiority over British rule, representing the dominant race as debased, demoralised and ignorant. I cannot resist the temptation of reading a specimen of inflated conception of Native excellence. ‘Are there not thousands of educated Natives before whose intelligence, judgment, courage, justice and moral conduct the abilities of the best civilians fall into insignificance, like the gleams of a candle before the resplendency of the Sun!’

“Having attentively considered these extracts, I am irresistibly led to the conclusion that it is intended by these publications to disseminate disaffection, to excite evil prejudices, to stir up discontent, and to produce mischief of the gravest order; in short, to render the Government, its officers, and Europeans generally, hateful to the people. These are evil purposes, which should be repressed with a strong hand, and their contrivers restrained from all further attempts to administer their subtle poison to the lower orders of the people, to saturate their minds with evil thoughts, and to arouse their evil passions. The moral atmosphere, surcharged with threatening clouds, and tainted by these vicious productions, must be restored to its natural and normal purity.

"The evils to which I have adverted are, I fear, too wide-spread to be checked or suppressed by prosecutions under the existing law; and even if it be assumed that prosecutions would be effective in repressing them, it must be admitted that much time would be lost in applying such remedy and realizing its salutary results. As time is of the very essence of every remedy by prevention and restraint, I am entitled to assert that prosecutions for all practical purposes will be found unavailing. It follows, then, that in conformity to the principles I have enunciated, this Legislature is under the necessity of making provision for the better protection and security of Government and for the public welfare in a manner suited to the emergency, so that the remedy may be summary and its application immediate. The Bill before us contains provisions which I think are well calculated to supply the desired remedy; and I maintain that the time has fairly arrived for action—further forbearance may be fraught with danger. It may probably be alleged that the provisions of the Bill are stringent; but I consider that the means to be used for the suppression and extinction of the evil courses to which the newspapers under notice have resorted should be as powerful and as effective as if the Government were called upon to deal with a plague, a pestilence, or other grievous calamity. In the course of my professional career, I have been a zealous and unflinching advocate of the freedom of the Press; and I have the satisfaction of believing that, in according my support to the present Bill, I am, in no way, departing from a firm adherence to the true principles which regulate that freedom. To protect and encourage journalism conducted with ordinary care and for honest purposes might be deemed a privilege. To curb by reasonable and necessary means the unbridled license of obnoxious and degraded publications which seek to spread disaffection and dissatisfaction,—and which may be used by wicked and designing men to produce discontent amongst the poor and ignorant to their own detriment—and to denounce them fearlessly, should be considered by every right thinking man and by every true citizen an imperative public duty."

The Hon'ble MR. EVANS said:—"My Lord, I should always view with great jealousy any restraint upon personal liberty and freedom of speech which did not appear to be necessary for the safety or well-being of the community, but I give my unqualified assent to this Bill, stringent as its provisions are; for I think it is necessary under the existing state of things. No person can claim to have any right to follow the trade or calling of spreading disaffection or extorting money, for these are admittedly crimes. The only question is, whether it is necessary to arm the executive with special powers for the prevention of this class of crime, instead of leaving it to be punished through the agency of the ordinary Courts of Justice. The main evil to be provided against is this. An unceasing stream of false and malicious charges is being daily poured out by the vernacular Press against the English Government and the English race. The poor and ignorant millions are told that all their misfortunes are due to England and the English, who cruelly and heartlessly oppress them, and the prospect of better days is held out to them if they could only be quit of their oppressors. My Lord, the condition of the toiling masses is in every country one involving much hardship. But their lot is bearable as long as they believe the comparative hardship of it to be due to natural causes beyond their control, and to the condition of the world they live in. Hard and toilsome though their lives be, they may still be loyal as long as they believe that their governors have their interests at heart and desire to deal justly by them. But when these poor ignorant and credulous masses have it daily dinned into their ears that all the evils of life, even their very poverty, are due to the heartless rapacity and injustice of an alien race of oppressors, they cannot but come to believe the oft-told tale; for they are but children with no means of judging for themselves as regards matters outside their daily life. When once they come to believe this, their lot becomes intolerable in their own eyes. A prospect of ease and contentment as of the Golden Age is before them, and nothing stands between them and their happy future except the hateful English race. Thus their minds are poisoned and their contentment destroyed, and they are left ready tools for plotters and conspirators. Of the power of the Indian Government to deal sternly and effectually with any attempts at rebellion I entertain no doubt and feel no fear. But I do feel that it would be a cruel policy to allow these poor and ignorant people to be goaded to rebellion, confident in our power to slay them; should they yield to the temptation. The object of the proposed Bill is to prevent the dissemination of the poison of disaffection—a subtle poison which, like the seeds of disease, floats in the air and is communicated from man to man, by placing the centres of infection under control.

“This object cannot be obtained by prosecution in the ordinary Courts. Moreover, a prosecution by its publicity disseminates the poison. If it were necessary to destroy clothes infected with the plague, no sane man would ask that they should be brought into a crowded public Court to have the question of their infectiousness tried.

“Great liberty of speech is conceded to prisoners and their advocates, and they are allowed to use any arguments which they choose in their defence; and these reports of trials are by our law specially privileged and may be printed with impunity. It is right that this should be so; but it is one of the reasons which render a public prosecution an undesirable method of dealing with these cases, for in punishing the prisoner, you disseminate the poison. When special evils like this have to be dealt with, it seems wiser to meet them by special legislation than to alter the general criminal law or procedure. I do not think this Bill can fairly be objected to as class legislation. Publications in English are not subject to its provisions. Publications in the vernacular are. The reason is that English is in India, to some extent, a learned language, and a knowledge of it represents some amount of education. When Latin was the language of the learned in England and the rest of Europe, it was thought no harm to print classical works containing the praises of the Republican form of government as the best possible, and little exception could have been taken to a learned treatise upholding that view. But had any one published a treatise in the vulgar tongue informing the masses that they would be happier if they substituted that form of government for the one they lived under, he would have been speedily laid by the heels. Publications in English do not reach that class which is ignorant and credulous enough to be injured by the sort of stuff extracts from which have been read to us to-day.

“Even had there been no special urgency, I should have been glad to see prompt measures taken to abate the evil. That there is special urgency at present from the disturbed state of the political horizon and the agitation of men’s minds by wars and rumours of wars, and from the increased activity of the sedition-mongers, no one can deny. That urgency has seemed to the Executive Government sufficient to warrant them in asking the Council to pass the Bill at once. Believing that the evil is great, and the necessity for its immediate abatement urgent, and that the remedy proposed is the right one, I have no hesitation in voting for the Bill.”

The Hon’ble MR. THORNTON said:—“Although in common with other Members of this Council I have not forgotten that I am an Englishman, and, in common with Englishmen, regard the free press of England as an inestimable benefit; and although I have given proof of the sincerity of my professions in having been instrumental, in 1865, in withdrawing the censorship which had been maintained since 1857 over the vernacular press of the Panjāb, I am not the less sensible of the necessity for the legislation we are now considering. For some time past I have become painfully conscious, as indeed almost all who have had experience in district and provincial administration must be, of the increasingly seditious tone of certain of the vernacular newspapers, and of the grave evil resulting from the dissemination of their disloyal and libellous productions among the ignorant populations of India.

“It is therefore my very decided conviction that, whatever may be the case in countries, or amongst peoples differently circumstanced, the security of this Empire demands that the Executive Government shall be vested with complete power for promptly repressing and preventing the circulation of disloyal and seditious vernacular publications.

"And, my Lord, I am the more disposed to assent to the exercise of this controlling power by the Executive Governments of India in the present case because, so far as my local knowledge extends, I can confidently assert that the writers or editors of the disloyal articles of which we complain no more represent the real feelings of the people of India than Dr. Kenealy may be said to represent the true sentiments of Englishmen. My experience is to the effect that they are for the most part disappointed ex-employés of the Government, broken-down vakils, disappointed candidates for Government service, or ex-cléves of Government institutions, who, after having been educated by the State at an enormous cost, are indignant because, at the close of their academical career, they have not been presented instantly with a lucrative Government appointment. But, it may be argued, if such is the case, if the disloyal effusions of which complaint is made do not represent the real feelings of the people, why care about them? To these arguments the answer is, that there is such a thing as undermining a sound structure; and this process of undermining the loyalty of our ignorant and very impressionable populations has been long going on in several parts of India, and is beginning now to have effect in that very loyal part of Northern India of which I have personal knowledge.

"Then I have heard it said, why does not the Government, instead of resorting to the strong measure of introducing a Press law, endeavour to counteract the effects of seditious writings by contradicting their mis-statements, or by establishing or inspiring organs of its own to proclaim the benefits and advantages of British rule? To this it may be replied, that in newspaper warfare, unlike the situation at Plevna, the power of offence is immeasurably greater than the power of defence. Moreover, in such warfare there is no convention against the use of unfair weapons, and writers of the class we are considering do not hesitate to resort to weapons of attack which no Government, nor indeed any writer of respectability, would deign to use. Then, again, these writers derive much of their popularity and influence by adopting a ribald tone and piquancy of style which would be wholly inappropriate in any journal of the higher class; in a word, it would be as impossible to counteract the pungent sedition of some of our Native newspapers by utterances in official or non-official Moniteurs, as to counteract the effects of spicy paragraphs in Vanity Fair by dignified sentences in the Standard or the Morning Post.

"But lastly, it will doubtless be urged—supposing all this to be true, why not make use of the ordinary tribunals, and prosecute the offending papers under the existing law of treason or of libel? This question has been so fully discussed by the Hon'ble the Mover and the learned gentlemen who followed him, that I need do no more than repeat that it is obvious that by launching State prosecutions against offending editors, the Government would be giving increased publicity and importance to the very publications it is desired on public grounds to stifle and destroy. No; in the case of the rank poison with which we are dealing, as in many other cases, prevention is far, is infinitely, better than cure.

"In these circumstances I have no hesitation in according my full support to the measure before the Council, and I accord that support in the confident assurance that the powers conferred will be used with justice and moderation, that they will never be used for the repression of full and free discussion of the measures of Government or the conduct of its officials, but only of those publications which, in the language of the preamble of the Bill, 'contain matter likely to create disaffection to the Government or antipathy between persons of different castes, religious or sects in British India, or have been used as a means of intimidation and extortion.' Under ordinary circumstances I should have been disposed to complain of the shortness of the notice given to the Additional Members of Council of the intention to bring forward this important measure and the short time allowed for its consideration; but under all the circumstances of the present case, I recognise the necessity for prompt action, and the difficulty of giving longer intimation of the provisions of the Bill."

The Hon'ble MAHARAJA JOTINDRA MOHAN TAGORE said :—" My Lord, as an advocate of the liberty of the Press, and as one who would not like to see any restrictions put upon it, I cannot but express my great regret that some of the low-class vernacular papers have taken to a course which, to say the least, is extremely reprehensible. I must take this opportunity most emphatically to repudiate, on the part of the educated Natives of India, all sympathy with such writers, who, from whatever motive, attempt to excite something like a feeling of disaffection against British Rule. The educated Natives do not even know of the existence of most of these newspapers. It is, however, I believe, a known fact that much of this class of writing proceeds from folly and a spirit of braggadocio rather than anything else. Yet that some sort of check should be put upon this abuse of the liberty of the Press I cannot deny; but whether the provisions of the existing laws are not sufficient for the purpose, is what I am not in a position to judge. Those who are responsible for the good government of the country seem to think that, considering present circumstances, they are not. For this reason, without giving any opinion regarding the detailed provisions of the Bill just placed before us, I deem it my duty to give my humble support to the action of Government, the more so as it is not likely to affect the better class of our journals."

The Hon'ble MR. COLVIN said :—" My Lord, I am unwilling to prolong the proceedings of to-day's meeting unnecessarily, but I do not wish to give an altogether silent vote in favour of the measure under consideration. The Native Press has perhaps nowhere allowed itself greater license than in that part of the country in which I have been employed, and no one can hold a stronger opinion than I do in favour of the necessity of placing some restraint upon the uncontrolled liberty which it now abuses. A portion of that Press has hitherto applied its powers to little beyond inculcating hatred and distrust of the existing Government, to fostering class animosities, and to attacking (often, I fear, from no very worthy motives) public and private individuals. It is fortunate that its influence is not equal to its ill-will, as the number of people who read newspapers in the North-Western Provinces is still very small. But its power is likely to grow, and there is this peculiar evil attached to it, that instead of representing any existing public opinion, the vernacular Press, so far as it goes, tends to create one, and that, an opinion which is as hostile as can be to the Government and the ruling class in the country. The conviction that some check is required, which has been so generally expressed here to-day, is shared by many in those Provinces, and, speaking from my own personal knowledge, I am confident that the measure now proposed will be cordially and generally approved by a large majority of those who are responsible for preserving tranquillity and contentment in that part of the country. Nor do I believe that it will be disliked by any but a few needy and discontented men whose occupation will be gone when they can no longer libel and threaten with impunity."

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR said :—

" MY LORD,—The subject before the Council appears to me to be one regarding which there is very little to be said; for it is a matter regarding the merits of which I can conceive the existence of no two opinions. What there was to say has been so ably and logically said that I find myself with but little to add, like my hon'ble friend Mr. Colvin. However, I feel that I ought not to give a silent vote in respect to the passing into law of a measure such as that before the Council, and this the more from the fact that I have had occasion to bring before the Government of India instances of the licentiousness and sedition of the vernacular Press, and to urge the necessity of bringing that Press under control, and making it powerless for mischief.

" The evil has long been felt by the Government of Bengal, and I believe by nearly all the other Local Governments. My predecessor, Sir G. Campbell, very strongly stated on several occasions his conviction that measures for controlling the vernacular Press were called for.

" I can very plausibly foresee the misrepresentation and abuse to which the Government of India exposes itself by its determination to deal with this question in a bold and unflinching spirit, and I therefore desire, as a Member of this Council, to take upon myself my full share of responsibility for the measure.

"An attempt has been made by several very unscrupulous members of the Native Press to mislead the people into the belief that what Government desires to check is, not sedition, but fair criticism of public men.

"This is an assertion which I most emphatically deny and repudiate. What Government does object to is the sedition and gross disloyalty of some of the vernacular papers, and their attempts to sow the seeds of disaffection to the British rule in the minds of ignorant people.

"There have been laid before the Government extracts from the vernacular papers which establish the constant use of language of this description, and show that they habitually attack and misrepresent the Government under which they live in peace and prosperity in terms intended to weaken the authority of Government, and with a reckless disregard of truth and fact which would not be tolerated in any country in the world. The writings to which I allude have nothing to do with personal attacks. The personal abuse, the falsehoods, the scurrility and the exaggerations which are applied to individual officers may well, as heretofore, be left to the ordinary action of the law courts, or be treated with the contempt they deserve. But it has been prominently stated that even this practical irresponsibility for personal abuse is a public mischief, and is used for the purpose of extorting money or frightening timid subordinates from a proper discharge of their duties. But it is not on this ground that I desire to support this measure. What I do recognise, and long have recognised, as a fact, is, that the licentiousness of the Press has, under false ideas of freedom and independence, been allowed to reach a stage which promptly calls, in the interests of the public at large, for the interference of the Legislature.

"I entirely agree with the Hon'ble Mover of the Bill in thinking that the whole of the vernacular Press is not open to these charges. I believe with him that there are many such papers conducted by respectable men on excellent principles; but the law proposed cannot injure them. If papers do not write sedition, or endeavour to incite disaffection towards the Government, or endeavour to extort money by intimidation, their position will be no worse when this Bill has become law than it was before. If they do publish matter of this objectionable character, then it is the plain duty of Government to interfere with them in the interests of the public, and I am sure that the public will have no sympathy with them.

"I can quite understand that the Government of India has, as the Hon'ble Mover of the Bill has stated, felt some difficulty in applying a measure of this sort to a portion of the Press and exempting another portion. But the difficulty, it seems to me, is imaginary rather than real. The papers published in this country in the English language are written by a class of writers for a class of readers whose education and interests would make them naturally intolerant of sedition; they are written under a sense of responsibility and under a restraint of public opinion which do not and cannot exist in the case of the ordinary Native newspapers. It is quite easy and practicable to draw a distinction between papers published in English and papers published in the vernacular, and it is a distinction which really meets all the requirements of the case, and should not be disregarded merely because some evil-disposed persons may choose to say that Government has desired to show undue favour to papers written in the language of the ruling power.

"The Press must be treated on its own merits. Had the English Press of India been in style and tone what it was twenty years ago, I for my part should have had no hesitation in voting for its inclusion in the present Bill. But I know nothing that has improved more of late years than the tone of the Anglo-Indian Press. It no doubt attacks Government measures and Government officials, and often very undeservedly; but, as I have said before, it is not this sort of criticism to which Government objects or desires to control. On the whole, the English Press of India, whether conducted by Europeans or Natives, bears evidence of being influenced by a proper sense of responsibility and by a general desire to discuss public events in a moderate and reasonable spirit. There is no occasion to subject that Press to restraint, and therefore, naturally enough, it is exempted. It would be a sign of great weakness on the part of Government to bring it within the scope of this measure merely to meet a possible guardianship of British supremacy in India, and we are resolved to transmit that trust unimpaired to those who follow us."

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. STOKES said that it appeared from the preamble that one of the objects of this measure was to prevent the use of the so-called Native newspapers as a means of intimidation, and section 3 accordingly empowered the Magistrate to call upon the printer and publisher of any such newspaper to give a bond not to 'use or attempt to use such newspaper for the purpose of putting any person in fear or causing annoyance to him and thereby inducing him to deliver to any person any property or valuable security, or anything signed or sealed which may be converted into a valuable security, or to give any gratification to any person.'

But it had just been pointed out to him that this did not provide for what he believed was the common offence of misusing such newspapers for the purpose of intimidating public servants from discharging their public duties. The Penal Code, section 189, provided for punishing such offences when committed. The Bill should provide, as best it could, for preventing their commission without any judicial proceeding.

MR. STOKES therefore begged leave to move that the following be added to clause (b) of section 3:—

"or for the purpose of holding out any threat of injury to a public servant, or to any person in whom they or he believe or believes that public servant to be interested, and thereby inducing that public servant to do any act, or to forbear or delay to do any act, connected with the exercise of his public functions."

The Hon'ble MR. PAUL remarked that this amendment had taken him by surprise, no opportunity having been afforded for the consideration of the provision which was now proposed, and under the circumstances he was not prepared to vote on the motion one way or the other.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR observed that he was responsible for the amendment which had been proposed. He had brought to the notice of the Hon'ble Mover of that amendment what he conceived to be an omission in the Bill. The amendment before the Council was in respect of a matter regarding which many complaints had been received, and for which no provision had been made. He considered that exactly the same difficulties which applied to prosecutions for extortion in relation to private individuals would apply to prosecutions for offences of the character to which the amendment would apply, and if it was considered desirable to restrain the vernacular Press from making scandalous aspersions on the character of private individuals with a view of extorting money, he thought it was equally desirable to protect public officers in a similar manner from intimidation and threats in respect to the performance of their public duties. It was as inexpedient to leave the matter to be dealt with in the ordinary Courts in the one case as in the other.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR ALEXANDER ARBUTHNOT moved that the Bill as amended be passed. He said—"I am sure that Your Lordship and every Member of the Executive Government will have been gratified at the reception which the Bill has met with from the Council. There is only one point in connection with the discussion which has just taken place, regarding which I entertain any regret. I could wish that more of our Native colleagues had been present to take part in the debate; but I feel bound to say that we are greatly indebted to the one Native Member of the Council who has been able to be present, for his sensible and loyal remarks on the subject of the Bill. I feel sure that the observations which the Mahārāja Jotindra Mohan Tagore has made, will go forth to his countrymen—and especially to the educated portion of his countrymen—with considerable effect, and will exercise a most valuable influence on the discussions which we must expect to take place on this Bill. As my hon'ble friend, the Lieutenant-Governor, remarked, I have no doubt that the Government will not escape attacks on the measure to which it has felt it its duty to resort; but I do not apprehend that in those attacks there will be a single word which will induce any Member of this Council to regret the part which he has taken in voting for and supporting the measure. After the very forcible arguments which have been advanced by my hon'ble colleague the Advocate-General; after the clear and lucid manner in which the points of the case and the arguments have been stated by my hon'ble friend Mr. Evans, and after the results of their practical experience given by Mr. Thornton, Mr. Colvin, the Lieutenant-Governor and Sir John Strachey, I think that we may allow this measure to go forth to the public with undiminished confidence, and with a sanguine hope that it will be received by the intelligent portion of the public, both in this country and in England, and also in those other parts of the world in which matters connected with India receive any sort of interest, as a measure which the Government was justified in passing, and in fact was bound to pass."

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT said :—

"After the exhaustive manner in which this measure has now been discussed, the clear and temperate statement of my hon'ble colleague who introduced it, and the able speeches we have heard from those Hon'ble Members who succeeded him, I find that I have but little need to trouble the Council with any additional remarks. It would not, however, become me to obscure my responsibility for a measure of this extreme importance by giving it a silent vote; and I must, therefore, make a further claim on the attention of the Council.

"I cannot but regret the necessity which, by some irony of fate, has imposed upon me the duty of undertaking legislation for the purpose of putting restrictions on a portion of the Press of this country. By association, by temperament, by conviction, I should naturally find my place on the side of those to whom the free utterance of thought and opinion is an inherited instinct and a national birthright. I should have rejoiced had it fallen to my lot to be able to enlarge, rather than restrict, the liberty of the Press in India; for neither the existence, nor the freedom, of the Press in this country is of Native origin or growth. It is an exotic which especially claims and needs, from the hands that planted it in a foreign soil and clime, protecting shelter and fostering care. It is one of the many peculiarly British institutions which British rule has bestowed upon a population to whom it was previously unknown, in the belief that it will eventually prove beneficial to the people of India, by gradually developing in their character those qualities which have rendered it beneficial to our own countrymen. For this reason, the British rulers of India have always, and rightly, regarded with exceptional tolerance the occasional misuse of an instrument confided to unpractised hands. But all the more is it incumbent on the Government of India to take due care that the gift for which it is responsible shall not become a curse, instead of a blessing, a stone, instead of bread, to its recipients.

"Under a deep sense of this great responsibility, I say distinctly, and without hesitation, that, in my deliberate and sincere conviction, the present measure is imperatively called for by that supreme law—the safety of the State.

"We have endeavoured to base our rule in India on justice, uprightness, progressive enlightenment and good government, as these are understood in England; and it is at least a plausible postulate, which at first sight appears to be a sound one, that, so long as these are the characteristics of our rule, we need fear no disaffection on the part of the masses.

"It must, however, be remembered that the problem undertaken by the British rulers of India—(a political problem more perplexing in its conditions, and, as regards the results of its solution, more far-reaching, than any which, since the dissolution of the Pax Romana, has been undertaken by a conquering race)—is the application of the most refined principles of European government, and some of the most artificial institutions of European society, to a vast oriental population, in whose history, habits, and traditions they have had no previous existence. Such phrases as 'Religious toleration,' 'Liberty of the Press,' 'Personal freedom of the subject,' 'Social supremacy of the Law,' and others, which in England have long been the mere catch-words of ideas common to the whole race, and deeply impressed upon its character by all the events of its history, and all the most cherished recollections of its earlier life, are here, in India, to the vast mass of our Native subjects, the mysterious formulas of a foreign, and more or less uncongenial, system of administration, which is scarcely, if at all, intelligible to the greater number of those for whose benefit it is maintained. It is a fact which, when I first came to India, was impressed on my attention by one of India's wisest and most thoughtful administrators,—it is a fact which there is no disguising, and it is also one which cannot be too constantly, or too anxiously, recognised, that by enforcing these principles, and establishing these institutions, we have placed, and must permanently maintain, ourselves at the head of a gradual, but gigantic, revolution; the greatest and most momentous social, moral and religious, as well as political, revolution which perhaps the world has ever witnessed.

point of view, in accordance with the commonly accepted rules of European reasoning, I think, we might rationally anticipate nothing but ultimate advantage to the country, as well as to its Government, from the unrestricted expression of their opinion, however severely they might criticise, from time to time, this or that particular detail in the action of this or that particular administration. But this is not the case as regards those journals which are published in the vernacular languages. Written, for the most part, by persons very imperfectly educated, and altogether inexperienced; written, moreover, down to the level of the lowest intelligence, and with an undisguised appeal to the most disloyal sentiments and mischievous passions; these journals are read only, or chiefly, by persons still more ignorant, still more uneducated, still more inexperienced, than the writers of them; persons wholly unable to judge for themselves, and entirely dependent for their interpretation of our action upon these self-constituted and incompetent teachers. Not content with misrepresenting the Government and maligning the character of the ruling race in every possible way and on every possible occasion, those mischievous scribblers have of late been preaching open sedition; and, as shewn by some of the passages which have to-day been quoted from their publications, they have begun to inculcate combination on the part of the Native subjects of the Empress of India for the avowed purpose of putting an end to the British Rāj. This is no exaggeration. I have here under my hand a mass of such poisonous matter extracted from the various organs of the vernacular Press.

After all that has been already said in description of it, I think it would be unnecessary to trouble the Council with the various illustrations which I had intended to bring under its notice. But here, for instance, is one typical specimen of the art of allegorical calumny described by my honourable and learned friend Mr. Paul:—In the Calcutta pice paper, the Sulabha Samachar, which has the largest circulation (about 5,000) of any vernacular paper in India, the Macgregor trial was travestied in an article on the 29th December. The prisoner is named 'Mr. Rogue' of the Factory at Kritantapur ('the city of death'); the doctor whose evidence saves him from hanging is 'Dr. Bribe'; and after the conclusion of the mock trial, the Judge, the Doctor and Mr. Rogue dine together, and afterwards go a-hunting.

The articles that are actually and obviously seditious are, of course, much fewer in number; for there still remains a lurking suspicion that the provisions of the Penal Code under this head may some time or other be put in force. Both in Bengal and in Bombay the worst inferences are generally concealed under the form of innuendoes. One Bengal paper, after saying that a 'mighty and wide-spread conflagration is often preceded by common smoke,' goes on to point out that the English, 'proud of the power of their bayonets, tread on the heads of the whole Indian population,' and that '25,000 Englishmen are ruling 250,000,000 Natives;' but the conclusion is wisely left to the reader's imagination. And again, another Bengal paper points out that the English themselves 'speak of the decline of their military power and the loss of their prestige as a nation;' and concludes that 'there is great reason to believe in the truth of the statement.' So, too, a Bombay paper, after declaring that 'England has become enervated from too much addiction to luxury, and therefore is not willing to encounter Russia in the field;' instances Alexander, Cæsar and Napoleon Buonaparte as examples that those who have attained the imperial dignity have come to a disastrous end, and prophesies the same result of the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi. The Kirdān, of Bombay, after saying that 'England has been shewing a thorough effeminateness from the beginning of this war;' that a 'sharp communication from Russia was sufficient' to cool its spirit; that 'England has gone on to say that England, yielding to the mere appearance of Russia, her inactivity makes the Natives of India very uneasy about their own safety.' And a week later the same paper declares that, as soon as victorious Russia gains a footing in India, 'the English will have no other alternative than to flee for their lives.'

"The Arya Warta follows the negative suggestive plan—'Don't nail his ear to the plump': it says—'If we were to write that the Englishmen in India are very few, and though Natives are not brave, but weak and unarmed, yet if they wish they can blow away the English even by their breath, and so to advise the Natives to unite and drive the English out of the country,' this advice would be 'pernicious to us' and 'treasonable.' The Shiwaji, a Mahratta paper, is somewhat more outspoken.

"But the most daring sedition is written in the vernacular papers of Upper India. The paragraph which the Malwa Akhbar publishes at one of the Mahratta Capitals (Indore) is striking. It gives, as a rumour that 'has perceptibly affected trade and the money-market' in Bombay, that Nāna Sāheb is about to invade India with a Russian army, and 'will establish once more the dominions of the Peshwās through the auspices of the Czar', Satāra, Bāfoda, Nāgpur, Dhānsi, &c., being formed into 'feudatory kingdoms acknowledging the suzerainty of the Peshwā.' The same paper, a fortnight later, speaking of the 'evil times' and 'gloomy days' of English rule, says significantly: 'we dreamt last night of a deer holding in his power a lion and a tiger.' A little later, it declares that the main object of the English Government in this country 'consists in wheedling the people out of their money by all manner of tricks.' And, again, the same paper declares that 'a belief has lately grown up in the minds of the Natives that Native rule has many advantages;' 'the Hindūs have begun to think the Mussulmans to be Natives;' the English 'will not be able to resist the progress of Russian arms in India;' 'our English military officers now think fighting to be a great sin,' and so on. Having in the intervening issue contented itself with declaring that the English in India 'consider Natives as beasts of prey and generally kill them as such; the oppressions of European officers have now become intolerable.' The same paper a fortnight later (in an article on the Russian occupation of Constantinople), makes a point out of the declarations of some English statesmen that the preservation of our Indian Empire is not of great importance to us; it declares that this is illustrated 'by the fable of the fox and the grapes!' And this is published in Holkar's capital, and doubtless read in every Court and every bāzār of Central India.

"Now, the late Mr. Mill, a political thinker who had given much study to the administrative problems of this Empire, was undoubtedly one of the ablest, the most thoughtful, and the most eminent, advocates of laissez faire as regards the public expression of personal opinion. But even Mr. Mill recognised very distinctly the paramount necessity of restrictions upon the expression of opinion—as regards communities when they are in their nonage, and as regards individuals, in certain cases, one of which he thus defined: 'Even opinions,' he says, 'lose their immunity when the circumstances in which they are expressed are such as to constitute a positive instigation to the mischievous act.' And on this Sir James Stephen has observed that it is not only possible to throw the abetment of a crime into the form of the expression of an opinion, but that 'you may also throw it into the form of the statement of a fact, as was done by the courtier of Ahasuerus, who, when Haman got into disgrace, casually observed—'Behold also the gallows which Haman has set up.'

"I think the Council must have been satisfied, by the specimens which have now been submitted to its notice, that the vernacular Press is at present an adept in the treasonable art of instigating mischievous action, both by the expression of opinion, and the statement of fact. I am confident that there is no Government in the world which would tolerate, no Government which could afford to tolerate, none which would be justified in tolerating, the unrestricted utterance of such language as is now addressed by the vernacular journals of this country to the ignorance, the prejudices and the passions, of a subject race. There is an excellent Society for the prevention of cruelty to animals. It is another of those British institutions which is, in its origin, foreign to this country, where, however, there is a wide field for its beneficent exertion. But I am persuaded that not even the most enthusiastic member of that Society would tolerate the continued existence and unrestricted activity of a wasps' nest in his garden, or hesitate to enjoin upon his household servants the timely extermination of venomous insects. I maintain that to prohibit the mischievous utterances of such journals as those from which I have quoted, is no more an interference with the liberty of the Press, than to prohibit the promiscuous sale of deadly poisons is an interference with the freedom of trade.

"My hon'ble friend Sir John Strachey has reminded us that the liberty of the Press is not extended by British law to the literature of Holiwell Street. If, then, the members and officers of the Society for the suppression of vice, if the Legislature which passed, if the judges who apply, and the police who enforce, Lord Campbell's Act for the prevention and punishment of obscene publications,—if, I say, all these authorities be fairly open to the charge of interference with the liberty of the Press, then, and only then, can such a charge be reasonably brought against the Government of India, for having framed, recommended and resolved to carry, this Bill. But if, on the other hand, the freedom of the Press be not only compatible with, but to a great extent dependent on, that protection to public decency and private character of which, in free communities, a free Press is itself one of the strongest safeguards, then I maintain that this Bill, so far from being hurtful to the freedom of the Press in India, is a much-needed guarantee for the continued existence of it. I say that the continued existence of a free Press in India is incompatible with the continued existence of the evils which this Bill is intended to remove; and I say that whatever tends to the prevention of disease, or the correction of deformity, tends also to the preservation of health, and the prolongation of life. We have been taught by One on whose teaching the whole of Christian civilisation is founded, that it is better to pluck out the offending eye, or cut off the offending hand, than that the whole body should perish. But the class of unseemly and seditious publications which will come under the operation of this Bill, are assuredly neither the eyes nor the hands of the Native Press of India. They are but foul blotches and boils, virulent pustules and rank eruptions, on the least seemly parts of it. If, even in the most advanced self-governing societies, it be still the acknowledged duty of the State to provide by law for the repression of publications calculated or designed to pervert the mind and poison the sentiments of those whose characters are yet unformed and whose judgment is still immature, then I assert with confidence that there is no Government in the world on which that duty is more incumbent than the Government of India; and that the measure which, in our discharge of that duty, we have laid before this Council is an eminently just, as well as an urgently necessary, measure. For I maintain, without fear of contradiction, that the young people in England, for whose mental and moral protection Lord Campbell's Act was passed, are infinitely less ignorant, less easily influenced, infinitely better able to govern their own passions and guide their own conduct, than the helpless masses of our Native population, on whose behalf you are now asked to pass this Bill.

"It is not in the spirit of resentment for injuries that we propose to legislate. It is in the firm conviction that the maintenance of our Rāj is for the good of the people, that we seek to save the people from the ruin in which they would involve themselves by seditious agitations against it. We have no desire to resort to fine or imprisonment; but what we do desire, and what we regard as the plain duty of the Government, is to prevent the open amongst the most ignorant, excitable and as portion of its subjects.

"Within the last few weeks I have refused applications from two different Local Governments to permit the prosecution of local vernacular newspapers for obvious and rank sedition. And I will state my reasons for so doing. The law, as explained by the Hon'ble Mover of this Bill, is, in its present state, a very questionable instrument. The explanation of 'disaffection' may be taken to explain away almost any incitement to disaffection that is not followed by actual rebellion; so that the probability of securing a conviction would always be doubtful. But, though these considerations might well justify me in hesitating to sanction a prosecution, under existing circumstances, it was not solely, nor indeed mainly, on these considerations that I have acted. Had the law been certain, and the temper of the jury such as would have rendered a conviction secure, still I should not have considered a prosecution desirable. What I desire is to prevent, not to punish, seditious appeals. A successful prosecution, even should it, in some cases, have a deterrent effect, would still invest the prosecuted journal with a mischievous notoriety, and an artificial importance, calculated to give to its seditious teaching the very publicity which, in the interests of good government, we should desire to prevent. Every such victory would be a virtual defeat.

It is for these reasons that I came to the conclusion that legislation was necessary; and that it behoved us to direct such legislation to methods of prevention, rather than of punishment. This conclusion has been adopted, after the most anxious consideration, with the unanimous approval of every Member of my Executive Council, and every Local Government in India except one, within whose jurisdiction the vernacular Press is wholly insignificant and unheeded.

"It may, and by some persons it probably will, be regarded as an objection to this measure that it draws a distinction, and apparently an invidious distinction, between the Native and the English Press. It may be said, with perfect truth, that the very words which we regard as innocuous in an English paper will be deemed seditious in a vernacular journal, and that the Native editor may be ruined for repeating what the English editor has published with impunity. Well, this seems a very strong indictment against the Bill; but the briefest examination of the circumstances for which we are legislating will suffice to dissipate the force of it. In the first place, let the real distinction be observed. The distinction is not between Englishmen and Natives, or between the English Press and the Native Press; for many Natives publish their newspapers in English, and in very good English too. Some of the Native newspapers thus published contain excellent and valuable comments on public affairs. Some of them are also edited by men of acknowledged ability and culture, who certainly do not hesitate to criticise the English Government with an asperity and hostility which no other foreign Government in the world would tolerate for a moment. With these papers we do not interfere. Being written in English, they are ex vi termini addressed to a more or less educated audience, and a class that has at least the power, even if it have not always the will, to choose between the false and the true, between the evil and the good. From them we apprehend no political danger; and we can trust to their improving education, as time goes on, to render their criticism fairer, and their judgment more according to knowledge. It is not, then, against Native papers, as such, that our legislation is directed. We confine our measures of restriction purely to the papers written in vernacular languages; and we do so because, as I have said before, they are addressed solely to an ignorant, excitable, helpless class—a class whose members have no other means of information, no other guide as to the action and motives of their rulers; and who, if such action and motives be persistently misrepresented to them, are likely to give vent to their excited feelings in acts of disaffection, which cannot but be fraught with disaster to themselves.

"There is a very great difference between denouncing, in a debating Society of educated men, the existence of the Government established by law, and using the same language to an excited mob. There are certain 'physiological' works which may be rightly offered to the study of medical students, but which no one would place before schoolboys. What is to competently educated men a subject only of scientific enquiry, becomes an instrument of danger and destruction in the hands of the ignorant. This distinction applies to our treatment of newspapers printed in English, and distinguished from those printed in the vernacular. The one class is addressed to people who can, more or less, judge for themselves; the other to those who are incapable of judging.

"There is, however, one aspect of the case which I have not yet touched upon, but which is scarcely less important than those on which I have been dwelling. It is the use made of the Native papers as a means of extortion for levying blackmail from Native Chiefs and persons of distinction, or as a means of intimidation applied to Native Magistrates and Judges.

"To Natives of distinction, the publicity of newspaper abuse is probably far more galling and intolerable than it is to any class of Europeans; and a Native would be very unwilling to add to this publicity by going into the Court and suing his libeller. It is probable, too, that these cases are but rarely noticed in the reports of our translators. Very lately there was a case pending in a Madras Court in which a member of the Carnatic Family charged a Native paper with having libelled him; but I could find no reference in the reports to the article complained of. We have had, however, not unfrequent complaints on this score. A Native gentleman of high position, writing to us from Peshawar, complained that the editors of certain vernacular papers habitually attack the character of innocent people who cannot afford to satisfy their cupidity. They force people to subscribe to their papers, and write against those who refuse to comply with their request. 'Rájás,' he says, 'and Chiefs dread him (that is to say, the proprietor or editor of a vernacular journal), under the impression that he may write against them, as he did against their compeers. They, therefore, subscribe to his newspaper, and assign an annual sum of money to him. The editor calls over every year to each State, receives money, khillats and sumptuous meals, and comes back.' This is not an isolated instance. I have quite lately received similar testimony from the editor of a most respectable vernacular newspaper, who feels himself and his calling degraded and blackened by the malpractices of this baser sort of his own profession; but I need not take up the time of Hon'ble Members by referring to other examples. The misuse of the Press, as a means of intimidating Native Judges and Magistrates, was strongly dwelt upon by Sir G. Campbell in a report urging on the Government of India a measure very similar to that which we have now been compelled to adopt. Quoting from the report of one of his most experienced Commissioners, he said—'There is, however, one aspect in which the present unbridled license of the Press is peculiarly injurious to Government; for it affects the feelings of its Native officers and subordinates to an extent which is palpably detrimental to the thoroughly upright and fearless discharge of their official functions. I fear that there is not a Native Deputy Magistrate in the country who could deny that he is afraid of becoming the subject of personal attack in a Native newspaper.' I know of scarcely any more exquisite, but certain, process of torture than that which begins with the publication of a scandalous attack on a public officer, and leads up to a call for explanation. Even if his explanation is accepted, he has gone through the ordeal, he has been mentally tortured, while his assailant has lurked in the darkness, and is beyond the reach of punishment. I say, without fear of contradiction, that this villainous misuse of the public Press affects the whole of the administration of justice by Native officers, and that in the exceptional state of this country it is monstrous to allow a system of uncontrolled Press-license to prevail, which is only suited (even if it is suited there) to nations in which independence and civilization are more thoroughly established.'

"Similar testimony is to be found in more recent reports, and is strongly repeated by the present Commissioner of Dacca. I trust, however, that I have now said and read enough to satisfy the Council that we have not undertaken the present measure lightly, or without the fullest and most anxious consideration. We must of course expect that by those people whose minds are governed by phrases, and who look upon the liberty of the Press as a fetish to be worshipped, rather than as a privilege to be worthily earned and rationally enjoyed, this measure will be received with dislike, and the authors of it assailed with obloquy. It is my hope, however, that the gradual spread of education and enlightenment in India may insure, and expedite, the arrival of a time when the restrictions we are now imposing can with safety be removed. I am unwilling to hamper the free influence of honest thought; but I recognise in the present circumstances of this country, and the present condition of the populations committed to our charge, a clear and obvious duty to check the propagation of sedition and prevent ignorant, foolish and irresponsible persons from recklessly destroying the noble edifice which still generously shelters even its vilest detractors. That edifice has been slowly reared by the genius of British statesmanship out of the achievements of British valour. It was founded by English enterprise; it has been cemented by English blood; it is adorned with the brightest memorials of English character. The safe preservation of this great Imperial heirloom is the first and highest duty of those to whose charge it is entrusted—a duty owed to the memory of our fathers, as well as to the interests of our children; to the honour of our sovereign, no less than to the welfare of all her subjects in India.”

PANJÁB LAWS ACT, 1872, AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. STOKES moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Panjáb Laws Act, 1872, be taken into consideration. He said that the changes made in the Bill were not very considerable, and he proposed to state them as shortly as possible. The Select Committee had recast the clauses of the new section 12 of the principal Act, relating to the order in which the various claimants of the right of pre-emption were entitled, and had provided that, where several persons were equally entitled to the right, the vendor or mortgagor might determine which of them should exercise it. The Bill as introduced provided that such determination should be made by lot. But, as the Panjáb Government had observed, so far as the right of pre-emption was enforced, there was interference with ordinary freedom of trade; and to permit the vendor to select his purchaser, whenever it was possible for him to do so consistently with the maintenance of the law, was a step in the direction of returning to the freedom of contract which the law itself unavoidably curtailed. A mode of determination would thus be provided by which the resort to lot,—a course to which there were patent objections, and which could only be adopted where there were no means of deciding at all,—would be entirely obviated.

The Committee had further saved the landlord's right of pre-emption under section 34 of the Panjáb Tenancy Act, 1868, and provided that, "if the landlord refuse or neglect to exercise the right conferred on him by that section, such right belongs, first, to the tenants (if any) with rights of occupancy in the property concerned, and secondly, to the tenants (if any) with right of occupancy in the village in which such property is situate."

They had modified the new section 14 of the principal Act in two particulars namely, first, by giving the claimant of pre-emption an option of tendering a his own risk what he considered to be the fair market-value of the property instead of the price demanded by the vendor, which might obviously be, by collusion between the vendor and his purchaser, much overstated, and secondly by allowing the money to be deposited in Court, instead of being tendered to the vendor.

A similar change had been made in the new section 15 as regards the former of these particulars.

They had inserted in the principal Act a new section, 16A, conferring on the Court in which a suit to enforce a right of pre-emption was instituted, discretionary power to require the plaintiff to pay into Court the price or market-value of the property, or the amount of the mortgage-money, as the case might be, under pain of having his plaint rejected. This would obviously tend to prevent the institution of vexatious and frivolous suits.

Section 7 of the Bill had been added to supply an omission in the Panjáb Laws Amendment Act, 1875, and to validate certain penalties which had been imposed, and the legality of which, owing to that omission, had been deemed open to question. The Chief Court had decided that, as the matter now stood the penalty provided by the second clause of section 50 of Act IV of 1872 which had been repealed by Act XV of 1875, no longer attached to a breach of rule made under the first clause of that section.

In section 8 of the Bill they had, at the suggestion of the Revenue, Agriculture and Commerce Department, provided a power to recover advances made to agriculturists for the relief of distress, the purchase of seed and cattle, the construction and repair of buildings, and other purposes not contemplated by the Land Improvement Act, 1871. Such advances would be recoverable as if they were arrears of land-revenue.

The other alterations were merely of a formal or trifling nature, and called for no particular notice here.

He would only add that the Committee thought, and did, he believed, still think, that the clause in the new section, 12 (d), giving the Local Government right of pre-emption in respect of land bearing Government trees, might now be omitted, as the new Forest Act seemed to provide sufficiently for this matter. In deference to the contrary opinion of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, who had been consulted by telegraph on the subject, the clause had been allowed to stand.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. STOKES also moved that the Bill as amended be passed.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

DISTRESSED SEAMEN'S EXPENSES RECOVERY BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. STOKES also moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to provide for the recovery in British India of wages due to and expenses incurred in respect of, certain seamen and apprentices be taken into consideration. He might remind the Council that the primary object of this Bill was to facilitate the recovery of wages due to, and expenses incurred in respect of, distressed Native seamen and seamen belonging to ships connected with British India.

Section 3 had been added to supply an accidental omission in the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, 1875, recently brought to notice by the Board of Trade, and owing to which a question had been raised as to whether, in certain cases, the certificate of a master, mate or engineer could be cancelled or suspended on proof of a wrongful act or default by him causing the loss or abandonment of, or serious damage to, a ship, or loss of life.

Section 4 had been added with a view to supplying a power (the want of which had recently been felt) to direct enquiry into casualties to foreign vessels occurring on the coasts of British India, and section 5 had been added at the suggestion of certain members of the mercantile community in Bombay, to compel persons recovering bales of goods, ships' stores and other property, which might have fallen overboard or otherwise got adrift in a port, to deliver up such property to the Conservator, and to regulate the right to salvage, about which it was said disputes sometimes occurred.

The Hon'ble Mr. HOPE said that, with regard to this Bill, he had only to remark that, owing to what doubtless were sufficient legal reasons, it had not been possible to carry out the whole of the suggestions of the mercantile community in Bombay which he had had the honour of bringing to the notice of the Executive Department. The amendment which had been made related only to salvage in ports. There was still no provision with regard to wreck found outside a port and brought into it, and there recognized by the person to whom it might belong. He trusted a suitable opportunity might soon occur for supplying this further want, and thus completely carrying out the recommendations made by the Bombay Chamber of Commerce.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. STOKES also moved that the Bill as amended be passed.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. STOKES asked leave to postpone the presentation of the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to define and amend the law relating to Promissory Notes, Bills of Exchange and Cheques.

Leave was granted.

STAMPS BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. COCKERELL moved that the Hon'ble Mr. Thornton be added to the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Stamps and Court-fees.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

RESOLUTION.—Experience has shown the desirability of bringing under review the accidents which occur on Indian Railways at shorter intervals and more promptly than has hitherto been found possible with the system of annual returns.

2. It has been decided therefore to introduce on all open lines of railway from 1st January 1878 the system of quarterly returns in force in the United Kingdom, and to adopt the forms prescribed by the Board of Trade, with scarcely any variation.

3. The returns in these forms should be submitted to the Government of India not later than three weeks after the close of the quarter to which they refer, together with all necessary remarks and explanations by the officials of the railways concerned, and by the controlling authorities by whom the returns are forwarded.

4. With a view to secure uniformity in the system of reporting accidents, attention should be paid to the rules which have, at various times, been issued as to the nature and classes of accidents that should be exhibited in the returns, as also regarding the classes of railway servants to be included therein. These rules are here collected and repeated for the information and guidance of all concerned.

The nature and classes of accidents to be exhibited are—

- I.—All cases of cattle run over without exception.
- II.—All cases of injury to the way, stock or works, whether attended or not by injury to life or limb.
- III.—All accidents of any kind likely to have endangered life or limb, or to have caused serious loss of property. Such for example as cases of trains running over chairs placed on the line, or of fires in trains, not resulting in injury to the way, stock or works, &c.
- IV.—All cases of injury to life or limb from causes connected with the working of Railways.
- V.—All cases of dead bodies being found on a Railway.
- VI.—All deaths of passengers or intending passengers in stations or trains from causes unconnected with the working of railways.
- VII.—In case of fire attributed to sparks from the engine, it should be recorded whether the engine is fitted with a spark-arrestor; and if so, the pattern should be stated, as also the description of the fuel used. In cases in which there is reason to suppose that the sparks escaped from the ash-pan, it should be stated what, if any, precaution has been taken to check the escape of sparks thence.
- VIII.—In cases of running over cattle, it should be invariably stated whether the engine is fitted with a cow-catcher; and if so, the pattern should be specified.

The classes of railway servants to be included are—

- IX.—All persons employed in stations, including police.
- X.—All persons employed in the maintenance of way and works, exclusive of men entertained for special works, that is, for railway works involving no risk from the working of trains, e. g., spurs in a river on which railway work-people are employed.
- XI.—All persons employed on trains or running engines, also all gate-keepers.

5. Accidents coming under class VI should not be embodied in the general returns, but reported in a separate list in the form adopted in the returns now circulated (Part V).

6. As regards classes II and III, it is not intended that accidents of a trivial nature, such as petty accidents in shunting, &c., shall be included in the quarterly returns. All should be, however, recorded in the Office of the Agent or Manager of the Railway concerned, to whom it is left to decide what may be omitted from the returns as trivial.

7. Accidents not coming under any of the classified heads in Parts I, II and III of the returns now circulated, but of such a kind as to have caused, or to be likely to cause, loss of life or personal injury, should be entered in Part IV.

The specimen entries in this and other parts will explain sufficiently the nature of the accidents which should be included therein.

ORDER.—Ordered, that this Resolution be communicated to all Governments and Administrations, to the Consulting Engineers to the Government of India for Guaranteed Railways, and to the Directors of State Railways, for information and guidance.

Also to the Director of State Railway Stores.

Also to the Secretary of State.

And that it be published, without the forms, in the Supplement of the Gazette of India.

CONDITION AND PROSPECTS OF THE CROPS IN THE N.-W. PROVINCES AND OUDH; AND RELIEF MEASURES UNDER EXECUTION AND THOSE CONTEMPLATED.

No. 51A.C., dated Lucknow, 12th March 1878.

From—COL. ALEXANDER FRASER, R.E., Secretary to the Government of the N. W. Provinces, P. W. Dept.,
To—The Secretary to the Government of India, P. W. Department, Famine Branch.

With reference to the call for a forecast in paragraph 12 of your letter No. 1183A, dated 4th instant, I am directed to observe that from the latest reports that have been received it would seem that the anticipations of a bumper spring harvest will not be realised, that is to say, the outturn will not, as at one time it was hoped it would, in itself compensate for the losses incurred by the almost total failure of the kharif. The area under cultivation is still unprecedentedly large, but the crop is reported to be generally light in the ear, and also to have suffered more or less from rust and blight, caused by the cloudy, and in some places, rainy weather with which we were visited during the last few days of February. In short, if things continue to go well, there will be rather more than a fair average crop, what may be called a good crop, but no more. The harvest, moreover, is already very much in the hands of the buniabs, who have given large advances on the security of the standing crops. They will be able therefore to rule the markets, and as there is no reason to suppose there will be much diminution in the demand for grain for exportation, it is improbable that prices will fall to any appreciable extent, and, consequently, those classes of the people who are unable at present to feed themselves will, when harvesting operations are over, require the relief which they now receive, until the first fall of rain, which may be looked for about the 20th June, or say, three months hence. It may be presumed that harvesting operations will afford subsistence for the classes under consideration for at least one month of this interval, so that there will remain two months, during which they will be on our hands, and for which, therefore, we shall have to make provision.

2. It seems to His Honor that the cost of relief works and poor-houses during the past month of February may be taken as the standard of what will be required in the future. It is probable that the number of distressed people will, on the whole, be fewer, because many of them may derive a precarious living from the proceeds of the mango and mihwa crops; still, unless prices fall considerably, Sir George Couper does not believe the number will be so very much less as to affect the calculation on the above standard. The cost of the relief works in February was in round numbers Rs. 1,82,400, and of the poor-houses Rs. 50,000, total Rs. 2,32,400. Sir George Couper has no hesitation in saying that he can meet twice this sum, viz., Rs. 4,64,800, the amount which will be required for the support of the people for the two months above referred to, from Provincial balances, and therefore that the Government of India need not make any immediate provision to meet it from other sources. It may be, however, that by reason of the low ebb to which his balances will be reduced by this large and extraordinary expenditure on account of famine, he may have some difficulty in meeting the engagements which he is under, to the Government of India, with regard to canals. It has hitherto been contemplated that any deficiency in canal income can be met from the large balances which have been at the disposal of this Government, and it therefore may become necessary for him to ask His Excellency in Council, in the event of a deficit when these are exhausted, to make it good out of the proceeds of the special taxation which is about to be levied for famine purposes. He trusts, however, that there will be no necessity for him to make such an application.

3. If, then, rain fall in due course on or about the 20th June, the anxiety of the Government of India with regard to the future of these Provinces may be at an end; but if not, we shall be face to face with a state of things which will tax our energies and resources to the utmost, and for which, seeing that up to the present time the vicissitudes of the season have been very similar to what they were last year, His Honor thinks it is necessary that we should be prepared. Should His Excellency the Viceroy in Council be of the same opinion, the works referred to in my letter No. 167 L.R. of 5th March 1878 may perhaps be taken in hand in these Provinces, with the view of relieving the starving poor. A copy of this letter and of the abstract attached is annexed for ready reference, and I am to note for His Excellency's information how the works proposed would more or less affect each district.

4. The Government of India met the Lieutenant-Governor's appeal for assistance (No. 1821 A. of 23rd November 1877) last November, by directing the services of several Railway Officers to these Provinces, for the purpose of surveying and locating certain lines of Railway, a scheme for which had been approved by him, but this assistance will not extend beyond the preparation of certain projects for lines in the Jhansi Division, Nos. 9, 10 and 11 of the annexed list, to which, considering the difficulty of access, this Government considered it best to apply the services of the officers made available by the Government of India.

By means of these lines Sir George Couper considers that there will be sufficient work found for the people of Jhansi in case of the failure of the rain next monsoon.

5. The Meerut Division and the Agra Division, so far as the parts of the latter south of the Jumna are concerned, may be considered as sufficiently protected by irrigation, while in the prospective Achneyra-Muttra Railway and additional distributaries to the Agra Canal work would be found for the people. The work on the Cawnpur-Farukhabad line of Railway will provide for the people of the districts of Farukhabad, Etah and Mainpuri, and the Bognipur branch of the Ganges Canal, and the transformation of the old Mogul road into a 1st class road, projects for which will be ready, will sufficiently provide for Etawah.

Should work be required in the Dun, the road from Hurdwar over the Moti Chor Pass of the Siwaliks may be undertaken together with the widening of the Mohan Pass.

6. There have thus been eliminated from prospective difficulty, or rather from difficulty which cannot be managed with projects at present in hand, the following divisions and districts:—

AND THE DIVISION OF KUMAUN ...

8. In Rohilkhand there is nothing but Railway work, except some small Canal projects of doubtful value, which would be suitable for relief works.

The Rohilkhand Division considered.

The Railway from Moradabad to Saharanpur via Roorkee, and from Roorkee via Hurdwar to Dehra (Nos. 1 and 2 of the annexed list) would probably sufficiently provide work for the people of the Moradabad and Bijnor districts, while extra work, if necessary, would be found for the people of Saharanpur and the Dun. Work for the people of the district of Bareilly might be provided by the proposed Bareilly-Pilibhit Railway (No. 4 of the annexed list), while its extension to Purnapur, with the new road from Shajehanpur to Mohomdi, might give work to the people of the Shajehanpur district.

For Budaun His Honor would hope that the Lower Ganges Canal distributaries would provide work, but this would be subsequently considered.

9. For this (the Allahabad) Division, we may eliminate the districts of Hamirpur and Banda as being sufficiently provided for by the Banda and Jhansi Railway now being surveyed, and Cawnpur as being sufficiently provided by the Cawnpur-Farukhabad Railway project.

For Fatehpur and Allahabad, the drainage scheme for the former district, already projected, would sufficiently provide, while the Railway scheme, from Rae Bareilly via Partabgarh to Jaunpur (No. 16 of the list) would give work for the Jaunpur and Allahabad districts.

10. Turning now to the Benares Division. The Benares district is a small district, and its difficulty might be met by putting the permanent Railway bridge over the Ganges, and the approaches thereto in hand at the proper time.

Work may be found for the Mirzapur district by putting the Railway to the Singrowli Coal mines in hand, and Ghazipur would, with other district works, be sufficiently provided for by the work on the Dildarnagar Railway.

Azamgarh, Basti and Gorakhpur might be provided for by the Jaunpur, Azamgarh, Gorakhpur Railway (No. 15 of the list), and its extension to Mozufferpur in Bengal on the one hand, and to Gonda in Oudh on the other.

11. Then, finally, as regards the North-Western Provinces, we have to consider Kumaun, and His Honor is of opinion that the Division would probably be provided for, to a reasonable extent, if the Railway from Moradabad to Ramnagar (No. 3 of the list) were put in hand. This would give work for the Tarai districts, and if a cart-road up the Ramganga Valley were extended from the Railway at Ramnagar, and other supplementary cart-roads were lined out which would provide

The Kumaun Division considered.

Division would probably be provided for, to a reasonable extent, if the Railway from Moradabad to Ramnagar (No. 3 of the list) were put in hand. This would give work for the Tarai districts, and if a cart-road up the Ramganga Valley were extended from the Railway at Ramnagar, and other supplementary cart-roads were lined out which would provide big works for Garhwal and Kumaun, the chief want of this Division, means of access to the interior, would be met.

12. Turning to Oudh, the proposed Railway from Purnapur via Kheri and Sitapur to Lucknow and thence through Rae Bareilly (Nos. 12 and 16 of the list) to Partabgarh, would provide work to a certain extent for the Sitapur, Lucknow, and Rae Bareilly Divisions, while the Railway proposed from Byramghat to Bahraich, Gonda and Gorakhpur (No. 14 of the list), combined with the training of the Gogra at Fyzabad, would meet, in some degree, the wants of the Division of Fyzabad.

13. It must be noted, however, in respect of what has been said in paragraph 5 about canal-irrigated districts, that their comparative immunity from distress is not owing to their growing food-grains, but from the fact of their crops being safe, and of a more remunerative character, which puts the money into the hands of the cultivators to enable them to buy food when it is at an abnormally high price. But even in canal districts there will always, in cases of famine, be a large residuum of poverty-stricken people who will require assistance, but for whom district works will perhaps sufficiently provide. It seems quite clear that unless it were possible to protect all India from famine by irrigation, isolated districts so protected will not gain much, unless the communications be opened out; and distress and even famine follows so quickly on failure of crops, that the only real means of perfectly utilizing irrigation is to enable the distribution of food to be quickly made by means of Railways.

14. Having regard to the fact, however, that should the rain fail as it did last year, famine will be in its full strength next August or September, the Lieutenant-Governor is of opinion that it would be most desirable that Mr. Furnivall should be at once placed at the disposal of this Government, as requested in my letter No. 154-L.R., dated 20th February last, so that—should His Excellency the Viceroy consider it necessary that we should make preparation for a failure of the summer rain—we may arrange, with Mr. Furnivall's assistance, and in communication with the Government of India, for the provision of the necessary staff to carry out the surveys of the Railway lines above proposed.

15. The staff of officers already detailed by the Government of India for Railway Surveys will not, as above stated, do more than prepare the projects for the Jhansi Division (Nos. 9, 10 and 11 of the annexed list), while the Cawnpur-Farukhabad project (No. 7 in the list), is being prepared by officers of this Government, and a project for the Achneyra-Muttra line (No. 5 of the list) is being prepared under the orders of Mr. Furnivall, Director of State Railways, Central System. But if the other lines are to be put in a state to be taken in hand for a pressure which may take place next August, it is clear that the staff for their survey must be at once placed at the disposal of this Government, as there are none to undertake the work under His Honor's orders.

16. The Lieutenant-Governor is of opinion that the above works will suffice to keep the people at work, should the ensuing rainfall be only partial or deferred. In the event, however, of its failing altogether, as it did last year, they will be inadequate to withstand the pressure which we shall have to meet, and it will be necessary to undertake works on a gigantic scale, such, for example, as the Sardah Canal, or in a lesser degree that between Allahabad and Cawnpur. But His Honor does not think it necessary to do more than allude to such a contingency at present, as the works which he proposes will be sufficient to enable the people to bear up against the first brunt of the famine, and give the Government the necessary time to prepare for the worst, the more so as the course of the canals in question has, His Honor believes, been already surveyed, and they might therefore be utilized as relief works with comparatively little delay.

* No. 58A.-C., dated Lucknow, 13th March 1878.

From—COL. ALEXANDER FRASER, R.E., Secy. to the Govt. of the N.-W. P. and Oudh. P. W. Dept.,

To—The Secy. to the Govt. of India, Public Works Department, Famine Branch.

In continuation of my letter No. 51A.-C., dated 12th instant, I am now directed to reply to that portion of your letter (para. 10) No. 1183A. of the 4th March 1878, which requires information in respect of the prevailing rate of wages given on relief works, the nature of the task exacted, and the daily ration given in relief or poor-houses.

2. From my demi-official letter No. 372-418A.-C. of the 18th August 1877 (copy annexed), when this Government feared the loss of the rabi, it was arranged to start relief by executing works of use to the State at ordinary rates with full task of labour, under clause 37 of chapter XIII. of the Public Works Code.

(a) 6. Should relief works unhappily be still necessary, you will place the workmen Man, 1 1/2 annas. on sustenance wages, which should Woman, 1 .. not exceed the rates indicated in Child, 1 .. the margin.

7. The task system must be adopted by your Public Works officers.

8. The work set out for a gang must be such as would be a fair day's work for them, after age, sex, condition, &c., have been taken into consideration.

9. If the work is not completed, a deduction should be made from the wages of every man, woman, or child in the gang, the gang being collectively responsible.

10. Wages to be paid daily. No gratuitous relief to be given to any person able to carry a basket of earth.*

11. Ordinary Public Works under the budget will be carried on as usual.

(b) 7. Colonel Fraser said that all rates should be immediately reduced, as stated in para. 6 of his demi-official of the 9th October; and that where it is only possible to adopt the task system, the rate for the task must be reduced so as to give bare sustenance, e.g., a task of 1,000 cubic feet in ordinary soil might be done (without dressing) for Re. 1-6-6, as under:—

		Rs.	A.	P.
Six men	(r) 1 1/2	0	9 0
Six women	(w) 1	0	6 0
Six children	(c) 1/2	0	3 0
			1	2 0

Add for tools, being extra payment to labourers who bring their own. } 0 2 6

Add contingencies and supervision ... 0 2 0

Total ... 1 6 6

5. In some districts the rates have been raised by means of lowering the tasks to meet the physical condition of the people coming to the works; while in cases where it could be shown that the daily payments allowed as in para. 3

10	chittacks wheat flour.
2	" dal.
1	" salt.
1 1/2	seers firewood.

above did not cover the cost of the ration, which for working men has been laid down as in the margin, the maximum rates have been allowed to be raised to cover the ration at ruling prices. It may be noted that wheat flour has been taken as the standard, though it is probably seldom eaten, except in our poor-houses, as His Honour considered that where poorer grains are used, more would be necessary to give the necessary nutrition of either grain, or condiments, or vegetables. By reason, moreover, of the failure of the kharif, the poorer grains have been almost non-existent.

The Lieutenant-Governor, however, thinks that it is only in one district

9 seers per Re. 1	12-33 pice.
" " " "	" 3-40 "
" " " "	" 0-70 "
" " " "	" 1-320 "
	18-23 pice.
	or 1 1/2 annas yearly that the maximum rates have been exceeded. Excess would not be necessary except where the price of grain ruled under 9 seers per rupee (see calculation in the margin).

6. In some districts, notably Agra and Rae Bareilly, a different system has had to be adopted. The proportion of women and children to men was so great that the labourers practically resolved themselves into—

Diggers	Men,
Carriers	{ Women, { Children,

* Copy forwarded to you with my docket No. 1840A, dated 27th November 1877.

and it was found necessary to task the men, and set the women and children to carry the earth so tasked under supervision. But even with considerable supervision, the number of women and children required to carry was so excessive in proportion to the work to be done that a cauri system was adopted in Agra, whereby each carrier went to a stall at the point of discharge and received one,

Average rate paid for a basket of earth carried 250 yards = 3 cauris: 256 cauris = 1 anna, &c. to earn an anna a woman has to walk 250 yards $4\frac{1}{2}$ times with a full basket and the same distance with an empty basket, and the whole journey will be $250 \times 2 \times 4\frac{1}{2}$ = 2,250 yards, or 4 miles nearly
(N. B.—The lead is the distance carried) two, or three cauris according to the lead, with a result (to take an example as shown in the margin) of it being necessary for a woman in order that she might earn one anna to walk four miles with a full basket and four miles with an empty one in one day,—a fair task enough His Honor thinks. But even with this a hard-working woman in good condition earned as much as $1\frac{1}{2}$ annas, and orders have been issued in such cases to increase “the lead,” as the test of necessity must be tolerably severe for the people’s own sakes.

7. One piee (= 3 pies) extra has been allowed in certain cases to be given to women with children at the breast. There has been a discretionary power on this point.

8. It has been generally found that where task work has been exacted under the system of paying a whole mixed gang at a certain rate per 1,000 cubic feet, the number of men on a work where the lead is short, as is generally the case in provincial works, is superior to that of the other sex and children; but that with daily labour under supervision, where no task is given, the converse of this is true. Apparently where the work is heavy and a full task demanded before full wage is paid, it is worth a man’s while to do it; but where the work is comparatively light, it is only worth his while to send his wife and children to do it, while he himself seeks work elsewhere.

9. His Honor believes that generally our Public Works officers have shown good discretion in the matter of tasking the people, though in some cases too much strictness in the interests of the work and of economy has come to light. But this has generally been corrected by the civil officers or the Government in good time. The Chief Engineer states that he seldom or ever hears a complaint of the people not being paid, though the desire for higher wages on relief works is very constantly expressed. His Honor considers this creditable to the native staff, civil and public works, who are largely employed.

10. In respect of poor-houses, the ration allowed is according to the scale laid down by Mr. John Strachey in 1862 for that at Moradabad, and is as noted in the margin, with one-fourth chittack salt per diem, and vegetables twice a week, the food being cooked.

No. 1214, dated 20th March 1878

From—S. C. Bayley, Esq., Additional Secy. to the Govt. of India, P. W. Dept., Famine Branch

To—The Secretary to the Government of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, P. W. Department

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 51A.C., dated the 12th instant, in which you furnish a forecast of the probable time during which relief operations may be required in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, of the number of people that may have to be provided for, and of the expenditure which is likely to be involved in the operations.

2. His Excellency the Governor General in Council understands from your letter that, although the area sown with the spring crop is unprecedentedly large, yet the outturn will not be so good as was at first expected, because the crop has suffered from rust and blight, and is generally light in the ear. His Excellency in Council notes that His Honor does not on the whole expect more than a fairly good harvest. Nor does His Honor expect that prices will fall to any appreciable extent, as the crop has already been for the most part pledged to the money-lenders, and the demand for exportation is likely to continue. The conclusion which Sir George Couper draws from the present situation is, that as soon as harvesting is over, there will be a large class of people who will be in need of Government relief, and the requirement is expected to last until the first rain falls and allows a renewal of agricultural operations, which may be looked for about the 20th June.

3. As regards the number of people that may have to be provided for, the Lieutenant-Governor thinks that the month of February last may be taken as the standard, and that the monthly cost of relief operations will therefore be the same as in that month, namely, Rs. 2,32,400 in round numbers, or Rs. 1,82,400 for relief works and Rs. 50,000 for relief camps. As relief will be required for two months, the Lieutenant-Governor estimates that the total probable expenditure will, if rain falls in June, not greatly exceed $4\frac{1}{2}$ lacks of rupees. This estimate seems to His Excellency in Council scarcely to make sufficient provision for the number of people who may remain on the hand of Government during harvest operations, or for the gradual cessation of relief measures after the first fall of rain. Be that as it may, His Excellency in Council is glad to receive the assurance of Sir George Couper that should rain fall in June, the expenditure can be met from provincial resources. The suggestion for making good any deficiency in canal income out of the proceeds of the special taxation will be considered in the Financial Department.

4. His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor, however, goes on to say that, should the hope of rain falling in June next not be realized, the situation will become very critical. To meet this possible crisis, His Honor holds ready a scheme of metre-gauge provincial railways drawn out by Colonel Fraser, which scheme in the ordinary course of things would be gradually carried out in a period of 7 years, at an expense of 2½ millions sterling. Of this scheme, the survey, &c., of some of the projects is sufficiently well advanced to provide for starting all needful work in the Meerut, Agra, and Jhansi Divisions. In the other divisions also Sir George Couper's main reliance is this scheme of light railways, supplemented by other local works. Except, however, in the three divisions above mentioned, the lines have still to be surveyed; and His Honor requests, therefore, that, should the Governor General in Council think it necessary to make preparations, on the possibility of the summer rain failing, arrangements may be made for the necessary survey of these lines, as the staff at present at his disposal suffices only for Nos. 5, 7, 9, 10 and 11 of the scheme of works specified in Colonel Fraser's list. On this subject the Governor General in Council desires me to convey his opinion that as yet there is no sufficient reason for anticipating a failure of the ordinary monsoon rains in June, and I am to say that His Excellency in Council is not prepared to make arrangements at a heavy cost for works which, if the seasons follow their ordinary course, will not be taken in hand for several years to come.

5. There will not, however, be any great waste of money in preparing surveys and estimates of those works which under Colonel Fraser's scheme will in the ordinary course be undertaken during the next two or three years; and for making the necessary surveys, therefore, of works IV, V, VII, IX, X and XI, the Government of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh can, I am to say, at once apply for the requisite staff in communication with the Public Works Department of this Government, to which a copy of this letter will be forwarded.

6. The works referred to, however, would, in the event of scarcity, not provide for the Province of Oudh, so to the list in the foregoing paragraph may be added Nos. 12 or 14 of Colonel Fraser's list, whichever His Honor may approve.

7. Should there be any reason from deferred or deficient rainfall to anticipate a more prolonged scarcity, early arrangements will be made for taking up other works mentioned in the list appended to Colonel Fraser's note of the 6th October last; but so far as present prospects are concerned, the Governor General in Council would not, he thinks, be justified in making arrangements for more works than those already enumerated. The question of such works as those mentioned in your final paragraph may lie over for the present.

8. I am at the same time to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 58A.C. dated the 13th instant, regarding the rate of wages given on relief works, the nature of the task exacted, and the daily ration given in relief camps or poor-houses, and to say that His Excellency in Council approves of the arrangements reported.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE, AGRICULTURE, AND COMMERCE.

REPORTS ON THE STATE OF THE SEASON AND PROSPECTS OF THE CROPS
FOR THE WEEK ENDING THE 26th MARCH 1878.

GENERAL REMARKS.—From Madras rain is reported in 14 out of 21 districts, but the falls have mostly been slight. The districts in which none has fallen are Godavery, Nellore, South Arcot, Trichinopoly, Tinnevely, and Madras. General prospects are unchanged and the tendency of prices is still upward. The numbers on works have diminished by 4,663 and those on gratuitous relief by 7,156, being 113,243 and 109,226 respectively. In Mysore showers have fallen in every district. Prospects are unchanged. The numbers on works were, for the week ending the 16th instant, 57,759, and on gratuitous relief 5,086, being an increase on the previous week of 2,865 and 1,554 respectively. In Bombay no rain has fallen except slight showers in Sind. In Násik the scarcity of water and grain causes anxiety. The harvesting of the rabi is nearly at an end. In the Central Provinces also the harvest is nearly finished, with an outturn generally much below the average. Prices remain high. Rain, but not much, has fallen in eight districts. In Central India and Rajputana no rain has fallen. Prospects are favourable in Rajputana, except that in Ajmere the cattle are dying. The harvest is being gathered in. In Bengal the rabi harvest is yielding a fair average outturn, except in parts of the Patna division where it has suffered from blight and insects. In Chota Nagpore the mohwa crop has been damaged by hail and storms and some distress is said to exist. Rain has fallen in many districts. Prices range very high still. No rain in Assam. Prospects are good. In the North-Western Provinces the weather continues fine and the harvest is rapidly progressing. Prices have fallen slightly. All relief works in the Lucknow district have been stopped. In the Punjab slight rain fell in Rohtak, Rawálpindi and Pesháwar. None elsewhere. Distress is said to exist in districts bordering on Kashmir territory, but it is expected that the provincial outturn of the rabi harvest will be up to the average.

SUPPLEMENT TO THE GAZETTE OF INDIA, BOMBAY

Presidency or Province and District.	Rainfall for week preceding.	State of agricultural prospects.
Bombay—continued.
Wadhwan	Weather warm; cholera cases 40, fatal 9; small-pox as usual; crops good.
Bargda	Thirty-two cases of cholera in city, 10 fatal.
"	"	General Remarks. —Slight rain in parts of Sind; heat great in Guzerat, where and in Kattywar cholera is prevalent; no change in Deccan or Southern Mahratta Country.
Bengal—
Chittagong ...	Nil	Weather hot; the crops are progressing favourably.
Noakholly ...	Nil	Weather seasonable; the cold-weather crops are progressing favourably; public health is good.
Chittagong Hill Tracts...	Nil	Weather excessively hot throughout the week; the hill people have begun to burn their jooms; the land is being ploughed for aus crop, the gathering of tobacco still continues.
Hill Tipperah ...	Nil	Weather dry and warm; nothing new to report on the state and prospects of the crops; cholera prevails at Agartala and in the neighbourhood.
Backergunge ...	0.13	Weather fine with one shower; the state of such crops as are on the ground is satisfactory; there is sickness from cholera and small-pox in some few parts, viz., Perozapore, Gournadi, Mendigunge, and Shatroopkati.
Farreedpore ..	Nil	Weather seasonable and favourable for agricultural work; the price of rice keeps abnormally high; the average rate all over the district is now about 12 seers per rupee; the general state of health is good.
Dacca ..	Nil	Weather seasonable, but rapidly becoming much warmer; state and prospects of the crops are very favourable; aus paddy is being sown; the rabi crops give good promise.
Mymensingh ..	0.98	Rain has been local and entirely in the eastern portion of the district; ploughing is general; no crops, except millet, are on the ground; prospects are satisfactory.
Tipperah ..	Nil	Weather fine, but occasionally cloudy; boro dhan and aus dhan promise well; khesari and kalai have been reaped with a fair average outturn.
24-Pergunnal ..	Nil	Weather clear and cool; state and prospects of the crops are good, but more rain is desired; cholera is reported from Bussorhat, Barasat, and all the thanas of Diamond Harbour.
Jessore ...	Nil	Weather dry, cool for the time of year; the prospects of the crops are satisfactory, but rain is wanted for the boro dhan in the south of the district.
Nuddea ...	0.52	Weather hot in the day, but cool at night; a little rain fell during the week; very little of the cold-weather crops now remains on the ground; the cultivation for the coming rice crops has been vigorously carried on, prices are very high, but there are no signs of distress.
Mooredabad ...	0.03	Weather seasonable; the rabi harvest is nearly over; the yield has not been as good as one as was expected in thana Sooty; and one or two other places; ploughing is going on for aman dhan ; cholera is reported from four thanas.
Pubna ..	0.51	There was some slight drizzling rain during the week in most parts of the district, but it has been of no service in facilitating cultivation; nothing particular to report on the state and prospects of the crops, but rain is much wanted; the price of rice is rising and indeed it is already very high.
Rajshahye ...	Slight rain has been reported from parts of the district.	Heat in the day is still increasing; nights are cool, rain not enough to do any good; heavy hail-storms have been reported from Manda, Baghinara, Bhandāikhāra and Panchoopore; in Manda four men have been killed, many trees and houses have been blown down, and the standing crops have been injured; the reaping of the rabi crops and the sowing of aus dhan , til and jute are still going on; rice is still very dear; common rice is selling at 16 kutcha seers per rupee; cholera has almost disappeared; a few cases of small-pox have been reported.
Bogra ...	Little drizzling rain on the 16th and 17th.	Weather dry and seasonable; rain has caused some damage to the mango blossoms; no crops on the ground at present in the khair land; what little there is in the poli is reported to be doing fairly well; the price of rice in the district varies from 19 to 22 kutcha seers the rupee; this high price is owing to the large quantity exported, and not to a bad harvest; a few cases of cholera have been reported from Shāriakāndi and Panohabibi; some fever has been reported from Badalgāhhi.
Munagpore ..	Nil	Weather comparatively cool; the ground is being prepared for the spring crops.
Bungpore ..	Nil	Weather getting much warmer; the spring crops are doing well; there are still some cases of cholera.
Cooch Behar ..	0.85	The heat is daily increasing; the nights are still cool; there were some showers of rain with hail and high wind in the beginning of the week; tobacco leaves are being gathered in some places; the rain has done no good to this crop; on the other hand, the hailstones which fell on the night of the 14th instant have injured the leaves; the prospects of achana and karn continue good; bitres dhan is being sown; public health is good.

State of agricultural prospects.

	Nil	Weather warmer, though still pleasant; tobacco is being cut with an average outturn; no change as regards the other crops is to be noticed.
	0-10	Weather somewhat warmer, but hazy; slight rain has fallen; the sowing of bhadoi rice has been commenced on some of the low lands; the minor crops in the hills are doing well.
	Nil	Weather remarkably cool for the time of year; no crops on the ground.
	0-44	Weather seasonable, except that the south wind does not yet blow regularly every night; the recent rain has enabled the ryots to prepare some ground for the next crop, and has done good to the boro dhan .
	Nil	Weather warm; the land is being ploughed for the aws sowings; indigo and sesamum are being sown; the price of rice has greatly risen; coarse rice is selling at 10 seers per rupee; a few cases of cholera and small-pox have been reported from the Hooghly and Chinsurah Municipality and from the village of Tribani.
	Nil	The recent rain has been generally beneficial to the few growing crops, and has also facilitated ploughing; cholera is prevalent in some parts of the district, and a few cases of small-pox have been reported.
	2-86	There were severe thunderstorms on the 13th, 17th and 18th; it is said that one inch of rain was measured in ten minutes on the 17th; weather cool since the rain; the rain, though heavy, instead of doing any injury to the crops on the ground, has rather done them good; ploughing has begun on the softened soil.
	0-32	Weather stormy at the beginning of the week, now settled fair and warm, the hot weather has begun; there is practically nothing to report on the state and prospects of the crops at this time of year.
	0-10	Weather getting hot; no change in the state and prospects of the crops since last week.
	Nil	Weather hot, with moderate westerly wind; the rabi crops are gathered in, and the yield is good; prices still range high; cholera is appearing in many parts of the district.
	Nil	West wind is prevailing; the rabi crops are being reaped with a good outturn.
	Nil	Weather fair and warm; and cool at night; in one thana the rabi has suffered a little from a hail-storm, in other parts of the district the crop has been gathered in and shows a fair outturn; the bhadoi and aghasi cultivation is progressing.
	0-8	A storm on the 16th; weather then fair; state and prospects of the crops are the same as in last week; prices continue high; cholera is rather less prevalent.
	Nil	The prospects of the crops are satisfactory.
	Nil	Weather warm, with west wind; the rabi harvest is still going on; besides poppy and tobacco crops, the rakur has been injured by caterpillars in Hajepore sub-division, and the mango blossoms have been extensively attacked by blight ("aphis").
	Slight showers in the villages within the jurisdiction of Mashrak and Darauli police stations, and Siswan, Kochaikote, Semaria, and Gootni outposts.	Weather cloudy during the first part of the week, and then fine; east and west wind; rain caused some damage to rakur and mango blossoms; the poppy does not promise a good outturn; the weighing of poppy leaves has commenced; wheat, barley, gram, and peas, &c., are still being cut and thrashed with a fair outturn; chenna is being sown; the indigo sowing is nearly over; the early sowings have not germinated well for want of water; some of the fields are being re-sown after watering them; prices show a downward tendency; public health is good.
	Nil	Weather seasonable; the prospects of the crops continue good; the appearance of caterpillars in the rakur is reported from the south-west portion of the district, but not to a very large extent.
	Nil	Weather seasonable; the harvesting of the rabi crops is speedily progressing; health is good.
	0-41	Weather stormy and unsettled during the greater part of the week; maximum thermometer in the shade 97°6'; the rain has done some damage to crops stored on the khaliyas , and high wind has been bad for mangoes; the rain has facilitated ploughing for sugarcane and chenna ; rabi harvest is going on; the outturn in Aurangabad is estimated at from 8 to 10 annas.
	Nil	Weather clear, with hot westerly wind; the reaping of the rabi crops is still going on; it is reported that about three-fourths of the crops have been destroyed by insects and blight; public health is good in most places, though a few cases of small-pox are reported from the Bhubocah sub-division.
	0-69	Weather very variable: one day fine and bright, the next day stormy and cloudy; the prospects of the mokwa crop have been considerably damaged by the variable weather of the week; another week of similar weather and the mokwa will be a total failure, causing severe distress.

SUPPLEMENT TO THE GAZETTE OF INDIA, MARCH 1904

Presidency or Province and District.	Rainfall for week preceding.	State of agricultural prospects.
Bengal—concluded.
Lohardugga	1.18	Violent storms of hail, rain and wind have occurred nearly daily. Ranchi, and reports from Palamow and other places show that the district generally has been affected similarly; the mooha and crops have been very much injured; there has been little mooha blossom this year; prices have not risen since last report; general health is good.
Manbhoom.	3.01	Weather stormy at the beginning of the week, hot and seasonable towards its close; the mooha crop, wherever heavy rain and hail have fallen, has suffered more or less; in some places one-half of the early crop has been lost; the reports as to distress are conflicting: on the one hand, the most positive reports of distress in the west of the district have been received; on the other hand, the Assistant Commissioner and District Superintendent of Police, who have just returned from the westernmost police station, state that after minute enquiry they have reason to believe that there is little, if any, actual distress; the Deputy Commissioner will probably visit the locality, and meanwhile tentative relief works from local funds will be taken in hand; the rates of pay will be low, so as to attract only those who are pressed for food; emigration is brisk; the emigrants say they are leaving the district owing to food being scarce; sporadic cases of cholera in the town and throughout the district, and here and there cases of small-pox have been reported.
Smghbhoom	1.43	Weather hardly seasonable, as it is too cool for the time of year; it is now certain that there will be no mangoes and very little mooha ; the late rain has been useful for ploughing and preparation of lands; some cases of cholera have occurred in Dhalbhoom, but the rest of the district is healthy.
Balasore	Nil	Weather hot and dry, with occasional storms; ploughing for the rice crop has commenced; sporadic cholera exists.
Cuttack	0.75 Rain partial.	Weather cloudy and cool; high winds and storms on the 17th and 18th; dalua crop is in ear: cotton is progressing well; ploughing for saradh has commenced; the crops generally have been much benefited by the rain; public health is good.
Pooree	0.04	Weather warm for the season and occasionally cloudy; dalua rice and moong are being reaped; cotton plants are growing well, but require rain; common rice is selling at a rupee for 10½ to 15½ seers, and in the salt tracts for 9½ seers; the high price of grain adds to the difficulties of the people of that part of the country; a few cases of cholera have been reported.
General Remarks. —Rain has fallen in many districts during the week; cultivation is being vigorously pushed on, and what little crop there is on the ground is doing well; the rabi crops are still being reaped and are yielding a fair average outturn, except in Shahabad and a few other places in the Patna division, where they have suffered from blight and insects; there were severe hailstorms in parts of the Rajshahye district, and in thana Manda the standing crops have been injured; the reports from Chota Nagpore are unfavourable, the mooha crop having been much damaged by rain, hail and storms; prices are still ruling very high; cholera and small-pox, as usual at this time, are reported to have broken out in many places.
N. W. P. and Oudh—
(Mar. 27th)
Benares (Mar. 26th)		Prospects continue favourable; reaping nearly over; sugarcane is being irrigated; water in wells lower than usual.

Kumaon (" 25th)		Weather fine; crops good.
Fyzabad (" 27th)	Nil	Reaping going on; sugarcane being planted.
General Remarks. —No change since last report; weather still continues good for harvest operations, which are rapidly progressing; prices have fallen slightly; the general health of the people is good.
Punjab—(Mar. 27th)—
Delhi	Nil	Agricultural prospects favourable; health good; no change in prices of grain.
Hissar	Slight rain in Rohtak district.	Rain accompanied by hail showers in Rohtak district; crops doing well, but the outturn will be below average, owing to deficient rain; fodder scarcity continues; slight fall in prices of food grains.
Jullundur	Nil	Public health and state of crops good.
Umballa	Nil	Health good; crops flourishing; price of wheat 19 seers against 16 last week; barley 27 seers against 23; rice 8½ seers against 7½.
Amritsar	Nil	Agricultural prospects and health good.
Lahore	Nil	Rabi prospects and public health good.
Rawalpindi	Slight rain	Health and crops good; slight fall in prices of food grains this week.
Mooltan	Nil	Health good; harvest prospects favourable.
Dera Ismail Khan	Nil

State of agricultural prospects.

State of agricultural prospects.

NOTIFICATIONS.—JUDICIAL.

Port William, the 26th March 1878.

No. 27J.—The following extract from London Gazette of the 12th February 1878 published for general information:—

At the Court at Osborne House, Isle of Wight, the 4th day of February 1878.

PRESENT,

The QUEEN'S Most Excellent Majesty.

Lord President.

Lord Privy Seal.

Sir Michael Edward Hicks-Beach, Bart.

Sir Thomas Myddelton-Huddolph.

Whereas by Section 18 of "The Extradition Act, 1870," it is among other things enacted, if by any law made after the passing of the Act by the Legislature of any British Possession provision is made for carrying into effect in such Possession the surrender of Fugitive Criminals who are in, or suspected of being in, British Possession, Her Majesty may, by Order in Council applying the said Act in the case of any Foreign State, or by any subsequent Act either—

Suspend the operation within any such Possession of the said Act, or of any part thereof, so far as it relates to such Foreign State, and so long as such law continues in force there and no longer;—

Or direct that such law or ordinance or any part thereof shall have effect in such British Possession, with or without modifications or alterations, as if it were part of the Act.

And whereas by an Ordinance enacted by the Legislature of Ceylon, the short title of which is "The Extradition Ordinance, 1877," it is provided that "all powers vested in and acts required or required to be done by a Police Magistrate or any Justice of the Peace in relation to the surrender of fugitive Criminals in the United Kingdom under 'The Extradition Act, 1870,' are hereby vested in and may in the said Ordinance be exercised and done by any Police Magistrate or Justice of the Peace in relation to the surrender of Criminals in the said Ordinance."

and whereas it is further provided by the said Ordinance that the said Ordinance shall not come into operation until Her Majesty shall by Order in Council direct that the said Ordinance shall have effect within the Colony as if it were part of the Extradition Act, 1870," but that the said Ordinance shall thereafter come into operation as soon as such Order in Council shall have been publicly made known in the Colony.

Now, therefore, Her Majesty, in pursuance of the Extradition Act, 1870," and in exercise of the power in that behalf in the said Act contained, by this present Order, by and with the advice of Her Majesty's Privy Council, direct that the said Ordinance shall have effect in the Colony of Ceylon, without modification or alteration, as if it were part of "The Extradition Act, 1870."

And the Right Honourable Sir Michael Edward Hicks-Beach, one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, is to give the necessary directions herein accordingly.
